HOOVER CALLS ON STATES TO PUSH AHEAD PUBLIC WORKS

Message to Governors He Also Urges Cities and Counties to Co-operate in Program.

ASKS FOR CANVASS AND THEN REPORT

He Declares That Suggested Course Will Absorb Any Unemployment That Might Arise.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Promising that the Federal Government will exert itself to the utmost within its own province of public works President Hoover today asked the Governors of the 48 states for their co-operation and that of municipal and county officials to the same end.

The Chief Executive said one of the largest factors that could be brought to bear for the absorption of any unemployment which might result from "present disturbed conditions" was that of "the energetic yet prudent pursuit of public works by the Federal Government and State, Municipal and County authorities."

He asked for a canvass of the State, Municipal and County programs for the next six months and the next year, and announced he was requesting Secretary Lamont of the Commerce Department "to take in hand the detailed measures of co-operation with you which may arise in this matter."

The President's Telegram.

The telegram sent to each of the Governors said:

"With view to giving strength to the present economic situation and providing for the absorption of any unemployment which might result from present disturbed conditions, I have asked for collective action of industry in the expansion of construction activities and in stabilization of wages. As I have publicly stated, one of the largest factors that can be brought to bear is that of the energetic yet prudent pursuit of public works by the Federal Government and state, municipal and county authorities.

"The Federal Government will exert itself to the utmost within its own province and I should like to feel that I have the co-operation of yourself and the municipal, county and other local officials in the same direction.

"It would be helpful if road, street, public building and other construction of this type could be speeded up and adjusted in such fashion as to further employment.

Calls for a Canvass.

"I would also appreciate it if your officials would canvass the state, municipal and county programs and give me such information as you can as to the volume of expenditure that can be prudently arranged for the next 12 months and for the next six months and inform me thereof.

"I am asking Secretary Lamont of the Department of Commerce to take in hand the detailed measures of co-operation with you which may arise in this matter."

Gov. Phillips of Arizona pledged his support even before the President sent his telegram. He said his State expansion program already had begun, consisting of additions to the Capitol building, State prison and Pioneer's home.

"The present psychological hysteria due to the slump in stocks has not effected business here," he telegraphed. "The outlook is bright for a prosperous winter in this State."

Philadelphia and St. Paul.

Mayor Mackey of Philadelphia telegraphed last Monday that municipal improvements in that city would be vigorously pushed and that within the next 18 months the city would spend approximately $45,000,000 for municipal projects.

Even before that John M. McDonald, Commissioner of Public Works for St. Paul, telegraphed that his city had adopted a $15,500,000 schedule of public development projects, many of which now are under way, and that the remainder would be expedited as much as possible this winter.

C. B. Randall, president of the St. Paul Association of Commerce, informed the President that besides

Jailed for Possessing Whisky Legally Bought

Los Angeles Jeweler Gets Five Days, Judge Ruling He Used Prescription Liquor as a Beverage.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 23.—Although the whisky found in his possession was rightfully purchased at a drug store on a legally correct physician's prescription, William Thompson, jewelry manufacturer, was sentenced today to five days in jail and fined $50 for illegal possession.

In finding Thompson guilty, Municipal Judge C. E. Maccoy declared that possession of the liquor became illegal when the liquor was diverted to use as a beverage instead of a medicine.

Thompson announced he would appeal.

Thompson, according to Police Officer Wood, who arrested him at Sunset boulevard and Alvarado street, was drunk and creating a disturbance. A pint of prescription whisky was found in one of his pockets. Thompson declared he had bought the liquor to cure a cold and had drunk half of the contents of the bottle.

Deputy City Prosecutor Kaufman contended that by not following the prescription, which called for four tablespoonfuls daily and by using the whisky for beverage purposes, Thompson converted his legal possession into illegal possession.

HOOVER'S CHURCH FORBIDS COLLECTION AT SERVICE

Passing the Plate Takes Too Long; Contributions to Be Sent By Mail Hereafter.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The collection plate will no longer be passed at the Irving Street Friends' Assembly, attended by President and Mrs. Hoover. The passing of the plate disturbs the quiet the Friends observe during their services, according to Dr. Augustus Murray, the pastor. Hereafter contributions will be received through the mails from regular members only. The decision was taken by the board of trustees, of which the President is not a member.

Normally about 50 Friends assemble in the church for the quiet service. With the coming of the Hoovers the congregation has increased to 250, chiefly sightseers. Consequently the time required for receiving the collection is much longer than heretofore and the practice has become distasteful to the Friends.

Can't Kiss Chinese Girl in Movie.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Anna May Wong, Chinese movie star, may not be kissed publicly by an Englishman—at least this is the interpretation placed on a ruling by the British censor prohibiting a kissing close-up with John Longden, English actor playing opposite Miss Wong in her new talkie here. The censors feared the scene might offend.

16 OF SECRET RELIGIOUS SECT SENTENCED TO DIE IN RUSSIA

One of Defendants Says "Emperor Nicholas Is Dead but He Will Return From Heaven."

By the Associated Press.

VORONESH, Russia, Nov. 23.—Sixteen members of a secret religious sect known as "Crusaders" were sentenced to death today after 10 days' trial on charges of counter-revolutionary activities. Three others received sentences of 10 years' imprisonment and 20 others shorter terms.

Among the allegations was one that they received from the United States 62,000 rubles (about $31,000) to carry on antisoviet agitation. In defending his acts Dimitri Pakomenko, leader of the sect, said "we do not recognize Lenin. He is black. It is true that Emperor Nicholas is dead but he will return from heaven to resume his rulership over Russia."

The public prosecutor appealed to the court to take into consideration "the rage and indignation that peasants and workers had expressed in many resolutions demanding death for class enemies who tried to hide their real faces behind the cross."

LIQUOR EVIDENCE SEIZED IN DENISON'S OFFICE DISAPPEARS

Agent Who Found It Suspended and His Chief Has Been Transferred.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Sensational developments are expected in the case of Representative Denison (Rep.), Illinois, charged with possessing intoxicating liquor, in violation of the Volstead act, which he helped to pass. United States District Attorney Rover was informed that Denison had a trunk of whisky and gin at his office in the House office building last January, and a leaky suitcase was found on the way to him, but the liquor, which was to have been used as evidence, has disappeared.

John J. Quinn, assistant to F. J. Herbert, prohibition administrator for the Washington and Maryland district, who made the Denison seizure, has been suspended, and his chief transferred to Montana. This action was taken in the last two days.

Representative Denison will be here next week to prepare for his trial.

FIVE BOYS DROWNED WHEN SKATING IN PENNSYLVANIA

Lads, From 8 to 12 Years Old, Go Through Thin Ice of a Reservoir.

By the Associated Press.

JEANETTE, Pa., Nov. 23.—Five boys, ranging in age from 8 to 12 years, were drowned near here today when they fell through thin ice on a reservoir while skating.

The bodies were recovered several hours later.

The ice on the reservoir was said to have been about an inch in thickness, and the lads had skated only 15 feet from the rim when the ice gave way.

The boys, sons of miners, were John Chiaria, 12; Walter Lotisky, 10; Chester Lancuski, 10; John Gresh, 8, and William Gobiesky, 11. The accident occurred at Edna No. 2 Mine of the Hillman Coal and Coke Co.

FURIOUS STORM IN ENGLAND

Air Liners Halted; 300 Escape From Flooded Mine in Wales.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The greater part of England for the second successive week-end was swept by high winds tonight, accompanied by rain, hail and lightning. The south was chiefly affected and a 70-mile an hour wind drove the storm into Folkestone so that the streets looked like miniature rivers.

A London-Paris air liner, forced to turn back half way across the channel, landed safely at Lympne. The storm postponed for a second time the scheduled flight by members of Parliament in the dirigible R-101. Football matches were abandoned. Floods continued in Wales and 300 lives were endangered by a rush of water into the Glanamman colliery. The miners made their way out through air shafts.

BROKER SUICIDE LOST $300,000 IN AID OF CLIENTS

J. F. Betts, Who Took Poison, Was Solvent, Declares Accountant Who Examined Books.

His Stock Exchange Seat Fell $128,000 in Value—Bankrupt in 1921 but Rehabilitated Himself.

A drop of $128,000 in the market value of his membership in the New York Stock Exchange, following closely upon a reported loss of about $300,000 incurred through his unwillingness to sell out marginal accounts of customers caught in the recent market crash, led to the suicide yesterday of John F. Betts, widely known stock broker, at his residence, 5150 Westminster place.

In protecting his clients' accounts against forced sale, Betts was standing by them as they stood by him, assisting him to a comeback, following his failure for $212,000 in 1921.

Solvent, Accountant Says.

Betts' business is solvent, it was announced last night by F. C. Belser, resident partner in the accounting firm of Price, Waterhouse & Co. A written statement by Belser follows:

"We have been engaged for some days in an examination of the accounts of John F. Betts & Co. Aside from the confusion caused by the heavy business in the last few weeks which has troubled all dealers in securities, the books of the firm are in good condition.

"Some losses have no doubt been sustained by the decline in security values and Stock Exchange seats, but so far as our examination has shown, there are ample assets fully to cover all liabilities and leave a very substantial equity.

"Our attention has been called to the interview given by Mr. Betts' son, but we are of the opinion that in his trouble he has exaggerated the situation."

The interview appeared in an afternoon newspaper.

Betts, who was 59 years old, and had offices in the Security Building at Fourth and Locust streets, died at St. Luke's Hospital at 8:10 a. m. from poison swallowed at his home. He was unconscious when found and left no explanation, according to his family.

Wife Finds Him on Floor.

In recent weeks he had suffered from insomnia, induced by worry over the stock market crash. Unable to sleep during the night, he would arise and pace the floors. He had been given sleeping powders by his physician.

When he got up shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday morning, his wife prepared a sandwich for him. He returned to bed, but soon went downstairs and walked around. Hearing him moaning, his wife and daughter ran downstairs and found him lying on the kitchen floor with the odor of poison on his breath. They summoned a doctor and Betts was taken in an ambulance to the hospital.

In the house at the time, besides Mrs. Betts, were John Betts Jr., 21 years old, who left Yale University a year ago to join his father in business; and Miss Mary Betts, 24-year-old daughter. Another daughter, Audrey, 17, is attending the French School in New York. She has been summoned home for the funeral, details of which have not been announced.

Dr. H. W. Soper, who had been treating Betts, said the condition of Betts, who had had several nervous breakdowns in the past, had been aggravated recently by worry and loss of sleep over the stock market situation, causing a temporary mental aberration.

Won Back After Failure.

Beating back after his failure eight years ago, Betts not only wiped out his liabilities, but piled up speculative profits during the extended bull movement. Two months ago he sold out his stocks and paid $478,000 cash for a seat on the New York Stock Exchange. A month later the belated bear market set in, crashing security prices down to a point where Betts had lost approximately $300,000 protecting his customer-friends.

Finally, Betts was faced with the necessity of selling his life's ambition—the New York Stock Exchange membership—at its present depreciated value of $350,000. The proceeds would have been sufficient to meet his obligations.

CLEMENCEAU, WAR TIME PREMIER OF FRANCE, DIES IN PARIS AT 88; NO PUBLIC FUNERAL WILL BE HELD

TESTIFIES STANLEY M'CORMICK IS KEPT UNDER RESTRAINT

Physician Admits Incompetent Multi-Millionaire Recently Attempted to Escape From His Estate.

ALSO HAS STRUCK AT HIS NURSES

Counsel for Wife, Who Is Seeking to Oust Guardians, Obtains Admissions From Defense Witnesses.

By the Associated Press.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Nov. 23.—Hammering at testimony that there has been an improvement in the last two years in the mental condition of Stanley McCormick, incompetent multimillionaire, counsel for his wife, who seeks control of his $50,000,000 fortune, today developed in court that the 54-year-old patient is kept under restraint at his Montecito estate and that recently he has struck at his nurses.

At the brief session today in the hearing on proceedings brought by Mrs. Katherine McCormick to oust Harold F. McCormick and Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine, brother and sister of Stanley, as guardians, the witness stand was occupied by Dr. William A. White of Washington.

Attacks Reports on Health.

Newton D. Baker, chief of counsel for Mrs. McCormick, attacked Dr. White's statements regarding alleged improvement of the patient in the last two years, during which time White and Dr. Edward J. Kempf of New York have been in charge of the case. Mrs. McCormick contends that the specialists employed by the present guardians have not helped her husband and asks that he be placed in her care for further medical treatment.

Dr. White insisted that McCormick, the once brilliant son of the late Cyrus H. McCormick, Chicago harvester magnate, had exhibited signs of improvement from year to year. McCormick has been adjudged mentally incompetent since 1906.

The physician admitted in answer to a question that McCormick recently had attempted to escape from the Montecito estate, but added there was nothing sinister in the action.

Caught by Attendants.

"He ran," Dr. White said, "but attendants caught up with him and then he wanted to know what time it was, indicating he was afraid he'd be late for lunch."

Max Oser, former Swiss riding master, and his wife, Matilde McCormick Oser, daughter of Harold McCormick, were in court today for the first time since the hearing began.

Baker asked White if he didn't know McCormick continued to strike at persons.

"Yes, he is very impulsive," the physician said.

"Hasn't he recently struck at his nurses?" "Yes, he does occasionally."

Baker brought out that in the summer of 1927 McCormick went on ocean swimming parties with his niece, Muriel McCormick, his wife, a brother, Al McCormick, and Dr. Kempf. Dr. White said he was aware of the parties.

Took Pencils and Easel to Beach.

"Were you made aware that Stanley at that time resumed his sketching, taking his pencils and easel to the beach?" "Yes."

"And in 1925 he had given up his sketching?" "Yes."

"Then he didn't keep up what he had started?" "Well, really, he didn't get started very much."

"But he studied art in Paris in his early days?" "Yes."

$25,000 More for Byrd.

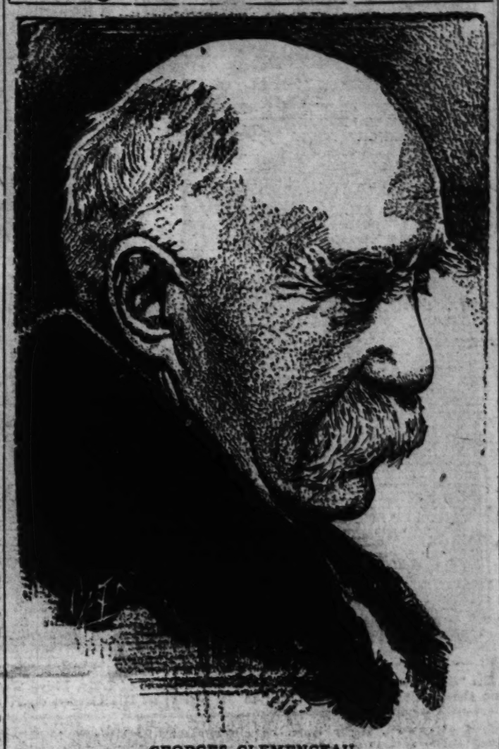
"Tiger" of France, Who Is Dead



GEORGES CLEMENCEAU.

Clemenceau, Doctor, Teacher In American Girls' School, Giant of France in World War

Fought Half a Dozen Duels, Moulded Public Opinion by Speech and Pen—Twice Held the Premiership.

By the Associated Press.

GEORGES EUGENE BENJAMIN CLEMENCEAU, the "Tiger" of France—physician, editor, politician, scholar, duelist and twice Premier—was one of the most forceful characters the French nation has produced.

Called from retirement in 1917 after having played a major role in politics for nearly 50 years, Clemenceau replaced as Premier the man whose downfall he had brought about, and at the age of 76 began to pilot France through the darkest days of the World War.

This aged politician, with the power of a young Napoleon, gave new heart to the all but discouraged poilu, defender of France, after three years of conflict such as the world had never seen before. He took the helm when the stoicism of the nation was undermined by treason, dissension and intrigue. He knew the enemy of France, and possessed the will to destroy him. He regarded all other evils as nothing compared with surrender.

Questioned as to what his policy as Premier would be, the veteran of six or seven duels replied: "My policy is victory! Home politics? I wage war. Foreign politics? I wage war. Russia betrays us: I continue to wage war. We will fight before Paris; we will fight behind Paris; we will fight, if necessary, to the Pyrenees. I will continue to the very last quarter of an hour, because the last quarter of an hour will be ours."

Master of Epigram.

This was the spirit that governed Clemenceau when he was called upon to form a ministry after the Russian debacle of 1917, when the allied cause began to look critical. The ministries of Viviani, Briand, Ribot and Painleve had collapsed while the "Tiger" remained in the Senate, to which he had been elected after retiring from the premiership in 1909. A master of epigram, he had made his phrases as much feared as his arguments, and for the first three years of the great war he had been a bitter critic of the Government. As a member of the Senate Military Committee, his influence on war politics was powerful, but he enhanced it by his signed editorials in L'Homme Libre, a daily newspaper established at the beginning of the war for the purpose of expressing his caustic criticisms.

With the Government of Painleve quivering under his attacks, Clemenceau suddenly started the famous drive against "Bolsism," and it was on that issue that the ministry fell.

Again in the saddle as Premier, he entered upon his task with the same remarkable energy that had characterized his nearly 50 years of political life. He visited the battle fronts, made his presence felt at general headquarters and communicated directly with the chiefs of command. One of his first moves was to bring Marshal Foch from comparative retirement and give him command of the French armies, and this in turn led to Foch being selected as Generalissimo of all the allied forces.

One of "The Big Four."

With the war over and the German empire crushed, Clemenceau's career rose to an equally high point during the peace conference in Paris, of which, as president, he was the foremost figure in the open sessions, ruling with an iron hand. At the same time he was one of the dominating influences of the "Big Four"—Lloyd George, Wilson, Clemenceau and Orlando — who held protracted secret public assemblies. Here he frequently measured his wit and abilities against those of Mr Wilson, who had nominated him for the presidency of the conference.

This became most noticeable in the discussions over the so-called "balance of power." Clemenceau having declared his purpose of supporting the old Bismarckian policy of grouping one set of nations against another, notwithstanding the American President's opposition. This sharp division ran through the entire proceedings leading up to the creation of the League of Nations, the peace treaty and the joint defensive agreement between France, England and the United States. In shaping the peace treaty, Clemenceau stood for rigorous terms which would compensate France for her sacrifices.

EXPIRES IN ARMS OF DOCTOR; SON AND DAUGHTER AT HIS BEDSIDE

"Tiger" Had Said: "I Want No Women Present and I Want No Tears; Let Me Die Before Men."

AUTOBIOGRAPHY WAS HIS FINAL WORK

Left Directions That He Be Buried Upright as Father Was and With Simple Ceremony.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 24 (Sunday).—Georges Clemenceau, twice Premier of France, died at 1:45 a. m. today (7:45 p. m. Saturday, St. Louis time).

The 88-year-old statesman died without recovering consciousness. He had been in an absolute coma since 11 p. m. yesterday. For the last 24 hours he had only had brief periods of lucidity.

Dr. Jacquemaire, grandson of the former Premier, announced the death to newspaper men and others awaiting the fatal issue at 2:30 a. m. He said "Grandfather has just died."

Dr. Laubry, one of the chief physicians of Clemenceau, had arrived at the house 10 minutes before in response to a hurried summons. He was just in time and his old friend died in his arms. Mme. Jacquemaire and Michel Clemenceau, daughter and son of the statesman, also were at his bedside.

Last Illness Began Thursday.

The former Premier died of uremia. He bore with indomitable courage the terrific pain of the disease.

The last illness began on Thursday. It found him barely recovered from a serious heart attack last month which was followed by the strain of Armistice day. Doctors gave injections to bolster up the heart against the terrific strain placed on it and administered morphine to relieve the pain. The uremic poisoning spread gradually through his system and the physicians early abandoned all hope of saving the life of their patient. He was unconscious much of the time.

"My Work Is Finished."

The last words that the "Tiger" pronounced, in the final lucid spell at 10:30 last night, was an expression of satisfaction. "My work is finished," he told Dr. Laubry. It was understood that he referred to the book which he undertook to write after the death of Marshal Foch in reply to one edited by Raymond Recouly, which purported to have been inspired by the late Marshal. Correction of the first draft of the proofs was completed only last week.

The "Tiger" had never hesitated to speak his mind and as a result he had made many political and other enemies. The whole nation, however, awed by the gallant way in which he fought his final illness without a plea for mercy, joined in solicitude and sympathy.

Wanted No Tears.

Clemenceau died in a big bed with a dragon carved on the headboard and other monsters at the foot. In one of his late moments of lucidity he told the doctors that he did not want any woman around his bed at the time of his death.

"I want no women and I want no tears," Clemenceau said. "Let me die before men."

Nevertheless, his daughter was at his bedside at the end.

A little bag of earth from the spot where Joan of Arc was buried at Rouen was taken to the sick room tonight by Maxime Real Del Sarte, royalist artist, as a tribute he said to a man who had saved France as the Maid of Orleans had done.

GEN. PERSHING PAYS TRIBUTE TO GREAT FRENCHMAN

Calls Clemenceau "Personification of the Courage and Patriotism of His People."

STIMSON ALSO EXPRESSES GRIEF

Acting Secretary of War, Hurley, and Gen. Charles P. Summeral Praise Statesman.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23. — Mourning the death of his friend, Gen. John J. Pershing said tonight he regarded Clemenceau as the "outstanding World War figure" among the French people. The Commander of American forces in France during the war said:

"The death of Georges Clemenceau fills me with grief. Those of us who knew him as Prime Minister the last year of the war recognized in him the very personification of the fine courage and patriotism of the French people. He inevitably inspired his friends with admiration and respect for his superb qualities of mind and spirit. I regard him as the outstanding World War figure among his people. My last visit with him was on Armistice day two weeks ago. I deeply mourn his passing."

Secretary of State Stimson said: "I am deeply grieved to hear of the death of Clemenceau, former Prime Minister of France and a most courageous leader at the time of the greatest crisis of our age."

Gen. Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff said:

"With the death of Clemenceau is recorded the passing of another of that small group of men who from 1917 to 1920 dominated the history of the world. The army of the United States mourns in him the memory of a valiant comrade, one who inspired the arms of his own country toward that victory which was the object of us all."

Patrick J. Hurley, acting Secretary of War said: "Those who crossed the seas to participate in the great war know that in 1917 and 1918 the spirit of Clemenceau was the spirit of victory. I voice the deep sorrow of the War Department at the passing of a great French patriot and of a courageous leader."

tained a constant watch for hours on end, all heads were uncovered.

Premier Andre Tardieu was informed at 2:30 a. m., 15 minutes after the death of his former friend and chief, by Michel Clemenceau. He immediately left the Ministry of the Interior and proceeded to the Rue Franklin. Accompanied by his secretary-general, he entered the death chamber.

Wished to Be Buried Upright.

The Premier consulted with the family relative to the wishes of Clemenceau regarding his funeral. The "Tiger" was reported to have absolutely forbidden a national funeral, speeches or demonstrations of any sort. It was said that he had expressed a wish to be buried in his native Vendee in an upright position, as his equally stanch father had been before him.

Tardieu expressed his tribute in simple words: "France and the world have lost a great citizen."

Premier Tardieu on leaving the house was deeply moved. Perspiration streamed down his face despite the chill weather.

"He is as calm and great in death as he was in life," he said. He hesitated a moment and then spoke with a tinge of regret: "It is useless to tell you that there will be no official ceremony."

Pale but not weeping, Madame Jacquemaire left the home of her father at 3:20 a. m. "It is finished," she faltered.

Georges Mandel, who was closely associated with Clemenceau during the war and was perhaps his nearest friend, arrived too late to bid farewell to his leader in life. "I had thought he would live until morning," he said.

The Havas Agency published an account of a visit by Mgr. De La Valette, president of the Society of the Friends of Pascal. Mgr. De la Valette wrote his name in the visitor's book and said as he left the house: "The anti-clericalism of Clemenceau falls before his greatness. The great service he rendered the fatherland pardons many things. Sister Theoneste told me one of his last utterances. He said to her: 'I don't wish to prevent you from praying for me, sister.' There was no sarcasm in this brief phrase, but profound respect for the mission of the sister who so devotedly attended him."

Felt End Approaching.

Clemenceau was a physician himself and for several months was under no illusions that the span of his life had not been measured. He felt the end approaching and even told friends that he would die this year.

Recently in receiving his former chief of cabinet, Emile Bure, he said: "The doctors are all wrong; I am not a sick man. I am just a dying old man trying to finish his task."

The Armistice Day celebration not quite two weeks ago, when he received a delegation of his Vendee friends and veterans, greatly fatigued the aged man. He stubbornly insisted on standing to receive them despite the pleas of the visitors that he save his strength.

"We make an appointment for next Armistice Day," they shouted on leaving. "Yes, but I may not be there," the 'Tiger" replied.

His Autobiography.

In his last work, his autobiography, Clemenceau replied to what he considered unjustified attacks upon some of his actions while he was Premier of France during the World War.

Clemenceau's doctors said that overwork on his book refuting criticisms attributed to the late Marshal Foch shortened his life by many months.

The wartime Premier had been spending six and seven hours daily at his desk through the summer and fall, and the labor proved too much. Mutinous to the end, Clemenceau refused to obey the entreaties of his doctors that he take a rest.

"Doctors are a lot of donkeys," he growled. "I must finish my work."

The first part of his memoirs has already appeared, and two volumes 'Au Soir de la Pensee" ("In the evening of thought") have been published in English.

Dr. Laubry, one of the closest personal friends of the dead statesman, shook his head over his patient. "That book will play him a trick yet," he said.

Foch's Criticisms.

The public first learned that there was a controversy when Raymond Recouly, a Paris journalist and author, issued a book accepted as having been inspired by Foch himself. Parts of it were even dictated by the Marshal and the entire work was reviewed and corrected by him in proof before it was published. The book came out a few days after Foch's death last spring.

It contained many criticisms of the Tiger's activities as war-time premier. One dealt with his alleged efforts to secure the removal of Gen. John J. Pershing as commander-in-chief of the A. E. F., and another with attempts to have the American troops incorporated with the French armies.

Clemenceau, with characteristic vigor, announced when Recouly's book appeared: "I hate to start a controversy over a coffin, but I am being attacked. I shall defend myself and write a book of my own."

The body of Marshal Foch was lying in state at that time.

Since April the "Tiger" worked diligently and daily with his old quill pen, whether living in his modest Paris home in the Rue Franklin or in the solitary villa in La Vendee where he spent his summers. His doctors felt all along that he was working too strenuously.

Meanwhile the book was progressing.

"My book will be ready about the end of October," Clemenceau told an Associated Press correspondent who visited him last summer in La Vendee.

But on returning to Paris, the "Tiger" suffered a heart attack aggravated by a point of congestion in the lungs. He rallied and appeared to have fought off the illness.

Then he insisted on taking up his work immediately, disregarding his doctors' advice to take a rest.

Takes Up Gymnastics.

During his convalescence the doctors were amazed to come in one day and find that he had gone to the limit of his efforts to speed up the writing of his book. He had summoned the athletic director who counseled him for 30 years and begun a program of gymnastic exercises.

These exercises weakened the "Tiger's" heart, and he was promptly rebuked by the doctors, who immediately issued an order barring the physical instructor from Clemenceau's house. But the "Tiger" himself performed his exercises from time to time, to the eve of his fatal illness.

Resembled His Father.

The elder Clemenceau was of stern stuff, authoritative and dominating. He was a doctor by profession and drove through the villages of La Vendee healing and commanding.

Family friends recalled today that the elder Clemenceau pushed his authority to the point of putting his own chair on a raised dais at the family dining table and when he died arranged to be buried in a standing position.

The Tiger inherited his father's dictatorial position in La Vendee, an agricultural region that was the scene of a great royalist uprising during the French Revolution. He was often called upon to arbitrate disputes between peasants. Clemenceau was an anti-clerical, but his ruling in one of these cases was in favor of the parish priest against a countess who insisted on bringing her dogs to mass on Sundays. Clemenceau obliged her to keep her dogs at home.

Clemenceau Visited in St. Louis

M. Clemenceau spent two days in St. Louis, Dec. 1 and 2, 1922, on his visit to the United States as an unofficial envoy of the French people. He was the guest of Joseph Pulitzer at his St. Louis County home. The first day of his stay was without prearranged ceremonies; the second day was given to a public reception.

On the second day of his stay, M. Clemenceau visited Washington University, St. Louis University and the Art Museum, in the course of a drive through the city and over the downtown parade route. He spoke in the afternoon at the Odeon, before a capacity audience. Speaking of America's relation to the League of Nations, and to the problems of France and of Europe generally, he said:

"I dare say you will be obliged to come sooner or later. You better take care that it will not be too late."

He summed up the matter presented in his speeches of the few days previous, in New York, Boston and Chicago. He spoke of France's situation at that time, and of the necessity, in his view, that the United States should return to the task which, he did not hesitate to say, this country had taken up and then had abandoned. He compared the taxes paid by the French with those of the Germans, saying the French had the impression that while they get the better of Germany in the war, in peace they were "getting the worst of it."

He declared that France's debt to the United States would be paid, and that talk of repudiation had been "a bad joke." In that connection he called attention to the losses of France, one-seventh of the population killed or maimed, and 6000 communities devastated.

One of his comments on American conditions was that the farmers did not seem to show such strength in politics as might be expected.

"TIGER" CALLED DEATH "A DREAMLESS SLEEP"

Excerpts From Clemenceau's Autobiography Differs With Orthodox View of After Life.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—Georges Clemenceau, veteran French statesman who died in Paris, held toward death the same fearless attitude that he did toward life and advised others to learn to accept it "as we find it." The last chapter of his autobiography, "In the Evening of My Thought," completed just before his death and published here by Houghton Mifflin Co., revealed the aged Tiger's opinion of death as "dreamless sleep." He watched its approach complacently and with complete imperturbability.

The chaper, entitled "And Hereafter," disagrees with orthodox views regarding life after death and criticised as lacking in "balanced judgment" those who found such views necessary to their happiness on earth.

"A dreamless sleep, that is, a purely negative state of unconsciousness, is all that we can anticipate of death," he wrote. "That is not very terrifying. An absence of pleasure; an absence of pain. To dread such a state surely indicates a lack of balanced judgment, since we enter it, by no means without satisfaction, at the end of every day when we have completed our daily tasks. Do we not seek to recuperate in sleep? Death is no more and no less than sleep. In the evenings, everyone looks forward to the approaching hours of unconsciousness. Insomnia is considered an unsurpassed evil. How senseless it is, then, to inveigh against a state the rhythmic of which we value so highlyZ"

Clemenceau would not be misunderstood, however, in creating the impression that he prized unduly the state of unconsciousness called death. He said:

"It would be pardoxical for me to maintain that life is a temporary woe, and death the supreme state of happiness. I do not in the least believe it. I fully appreciate the great achievements of consciousness with either attendant and inevitable sequence of joy and sorrow."

But these great achievements he described, in another part of the book as "wisps of smoke which they call glory" and said that the reason men lay such store by them is because "they find in them something that smacks of survival after death."

JAIL FOR PRINCESS' HUSBAND

Subkoff, Who Used Ex-Kaiser's Sister, Expelled From Germany

By the Associated Press.

BONN, Nov. 23.—Alexander Subkoff, Russian waiter, who married the late Princess Victoria, was sentenced today to a week of imprisonment for illegally entering Germany. His excuse was that he had been asked to attend a conference with solicitors of his wife, a sister of the former Kaiser, on the question of the divorce suit she had brought, and that he had remained to attend her funeral.

Subkoff had been expelled from Germany because of his escapades in riotous night life on money to provide which the Princess impoverished herself. Since he has already spent a week in jail after his arrest, he was taken tonight under police escort to the Luxemburg frontier and there released.

CONGRESS TO BE ASKED TO PAY EX-SERVICE MEN IN FULL

Representative Would Halt Tax Reduction to Disburse Estimated $3,465,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Congress at the regular session, which convenes Dec. 2, will be asked to direct the Treasury to pay all ex-service men in cash "the face value of their adjusted service certificates." Two bills, one by Representative Wright Patman (Dem.), Texas., and another by Senator Smith W. Brookhart (Rep.), Iowa, to that end will be pressed.

It is estimated by Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans' Bureau, that it would require approximately $3,465,000,000 to liquidate the obligations to the soldiers. He has submitted these figures to Patnam, who is the enthusiastic leader behind this campaign.

"If we go on like we are going now, doling out so much a year," said Patnam, "we will have taken care of the situation by 1946, by paying out $2,752,557,875.28.

"Now, if we will give the ex-service men cash and cut out the proposition to reduce the tax levy $175,000,000 a year and apply that amount to this purpose for the next few years we would do a great service to the men who fought the World War, and to the country. That much cash turned loose now would give new business life to every community in the United States."

CREW OF DISCOVERY WAITS FOR WEATHER TO MODERATE

Antarctic Explorer at Kerguelen Island Aided in Recoaling by Sealer's Men.

KERGUELEN ISLAND, Nov. 23. (By Radio Via London.)—The crew of the Discovery is busy putting the ship in trim while waiting for the weather to moderate. The recoaling, completed on the evening of Nov. 19, was hastened since the last message by the kind assistance of the crew of the small sealing vessel, Kilfenora, which had arrived a few days previously.

There followed a couple of days of cleaning ship and securing the deck cargo, which is voluminous. Much of the deck is covered with coal briquettes to the height of the bulwarks. We hope that the abatement of the weather will find us with the undesirable deck cargo consumed and the ship in better trim.

HOOVER NOT TO READ MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Vetoes Proposal That He Make Personal Apperance at Session.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23. — President Hoover today emphatically vetoed suggestions that he personally read his first annual message to Congress at the opening of the regular session the week after next.

The document in printed form will be delivered to the House and Senate by messenger and will be read separately in each chamber by the regular reading clerks, as was the case with his first communication to Congress at the beginning of the special session last April.

The chief executive devoted practically all of his time today to preparation of the document which he hopes to have ready by the middle of next week. Work on it was held up for several days by his conferences with business men here this week.

So far as the Senate is concerned, the point of chief interest in the message will be what the President has to say on the tariff. Mr. Hoover undoubtedly will devote some space to that subject and the senators as well as many others naturally are curious to know just what he will say in the light of the unusual situation in which that legislation was left by the adjournment of the special session.

Tax reduction by resolution, consolidation of the agencies of the government dealing with war veterans, transfer of the prohibition unit from the Treasury to the Department of Justice and a number of other recommendations will be contained in the document.

As is customary there will be a fairly full report on the state of the nation's foreign relations, and it is expected that the negotiations leading up to the forthcoming naval conference at London in January will be touched upon.

John F. Betts, Broker, and Home in Which He Took Fatal Dose of Poison

tions and give him a fresh start, friends say, but apparently, with his health failing, he did not choose to attempt another comeback.

"The sad part about his predicament," remarked an associate, "was that he was stuck, not on his speculations, but on the speculations of clients. He had realized that prices had gone too high, making speculation extra dangerous, and had sold out his own holdings. Some of his customers did not act so wisely.

"He lost about $300,000 attempting to carry customers when the market crashed. He refused to sell them out to protect himself—he was too kindly. Although they owed him heavily, he let them hang on, hoping stocks would recover.

Had Many Wealthy Customers.

"Many of his customers were wealthy. This sometimes proves embarrassing to a broker in an emergency. The broker values the rich man's account highly and hesitates to lose it by selling out the holdings when the margin is impaired. Having confidence in the wealthy man's ability to put up cash eventually, the broker is inclined to carry him along.

"When a small customer, not so well known to the broker, receives a margin call, he must produce cash or collateral at once. The rich man tells his broker: 'I'll send you a check tomorrow.'"

Betts presumably required margins of one-third to one-half, as do most brokers. That is, a customer wishing to buy $100,000 worth of stock must deposit $33,000 to $50,000, the broker lending the balance and holding the stock as security. Should the market value of the stock drop one-third to one-half, the broker would be entitled to sell the stock on the open market to recover the amount of his loan.

During the recent crash, some stocks dropped so abruptly that even the amount lent on them could not be realized by selling.

Secretary's Statement

While declining to estimate Betts' losses, Miss Rose McDonnell, his secretary for 15 years, and Anthony Koupal, associated in the business, declared the business was solvent.

"The greatest loss," said a lawyer for the firm, "is in the decline in the value of stock exchange seats. There are some accounts that won't be collected, but they are negligible. Every broker has such accounts.

"For instance, there is the customer who bought five shares of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. when he should have bought only three. There are many accounts between $800 and $1000. But they are a drop in the bucket.

"We don't know of any financial reason for this suicide."

Members of the Betts family declined to talk with police or reporters. A report that Betts was heavily insured could not be verified.

Born in Louisville, Ky., Betts moved to St. Louis in 1895. He was connected with the Drummond Tobacco Co. from that year until 1899. After that firm was sold to Eastern interests, he and John Drummond opened the Drummond-Betts stock brokerage house in 1900.

Failed in 1921.

A charter member of the St. Louis Stock Exchange, he was automatically suspended in 1921 when his firm failed with liabilities of $212,000. He went to work for the receiver at $50 a week as office manager, helping to straighten out the tangled affairs. Creditors were paid 60 cents on the dollar when the receivership was wound up and Betts was restored to membership on the St. Louis Stock Exchange, March 25, 1927. He made additional payments voluntarily to his creditors after that.

He was virtually a one-man company, with three modestly furnished offices on the eighth floor of the Security Building. He had been active daily on the floor of the St. Louis Stock Exchange until two months ago when he acquired his seat on the New York Exchange. Thereafter he remained at his desk, in touch with New York by direct wire. His office did not include that familiar appurtenance of big brokerage houses—a blackboard on which hour after hour boys chalk up the change in stock prices.

the public works program there was a private building program for next year totaling $16,125,000.

Appeal to Lumber Men.

E. L. Carpenter of Minneapolis, resident of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, issued a statement today to the lumber industry suggesting full co-operation with the movement undertaken by the Government to sustain present levels of industrial and commercial activities.

"In behalf of the lumber manufacturing industry," the statement said, "I have assured the President that all of its facilities will be available to aid in carrying out such constructive program for the stimulation of building and other business activities as may develop from the series of conferences which he is now holding and from the surveys which he is having instituted through the Department of Commerce with the aid of the United States Chamber of Commerce."

$2,000,000 Appropriated in Missouri, but Funds Are Not Available.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 23.— Gov. Caulfield tonight said he had not yet received President Hoover's request to Governors of the various States to speed up public works, in connection with the President's effort to stimulate industrial and trade conditions, and preferred not to discuss possible steps in Missouri until he had received the message.

The Governor pointed out that virtually the only public construction work in progress in Missouri, so far as the State government is concerned, is building of State highways, and that the Missouri Highway Commission has a program calling for the expenditure of $25,000,000 for next year. The annual highway program in Missouri has been near this figure for the last two years.

The active highway construction season will end soon, due to the weather and active work will not be resumed until spring.

Aside from repairs and minor construction contracts, virtually no building work is being done at the numerous State institutions. A new bill, carrying approximately $2,000,000 in appropriations for new buildings for State institutions, was passed by the 1929 Legislature, subject to State funds becoming available for the projects. Funds have not been available so far, and the Governor has been unable to release any of these appropriations.

The Governor said it might be possible for him to release a part of these appropriations before the close of the biennial period of 1929-1930.

YOUNG WOMAN GETS 25 YEARS FOR KILLING PARAMOUR

Illinois Farmer's Daughter, 6 Feet Tall and Weighing 230 Pounds, Pleads Guilty of Murder.

By the Associated Press.

KEWANEE, Ill., Nov. 23.— Laura Weaver, 21 years old, pleaded guilty to a first-degree murder charge today and was sentenced to serve 25 years in the State penitentiary at Joliet.

Miss Weaver, who is 6 feet tall, weighing 230 pounds, and possessed of herculean strength, had confessed that she strangled her common law husband, Wilmer T. Kitselman, June 30, with his own belt at Wyoming, Ill., and then carried the body to a lonely road where she burned it beyond recognition. Kitselman was 52 years old.

She declared the man had been inhumanly cruel to her, and her only regret in the killing was the sorrow she brought to her father, a wealthy retired Fox River Valley farmer.

She sobbed today as Judge Joseph E. Dailey of the Stark County Circuit Court imposed sentence. She will be taken to prison Monday and will be eligible for parole in 15 years.

TERMINAL TO CO-OPERATE IN EXPANSION PROGRAM

The Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis will co-operate with other railroads in President Hoover's movement to offset the wave of pessimism which resulted from the stock market decline by keeping business up to a high standard, Henry Miller, president of the association, announced yesterday.

"The Terminal Association's budget of improvements in 1929 was approximately $4,000,000 and the prospect for 1930 is that an even larger amount will be required owing to the steady growth in business," Miller said.

"The Terminal Association employs more than 6000 persons; its annual payrolls are in excess of $10,000,000; its annual outlay for material and supplies is more than $3,000,000; its annual fuel bill is in excess of $1,250,000, and its taxes exceed $1,500,000 a year. Thus, it annually distributes more money locally than any other St. Louis institution, and is an important factor in the public welfare of the commonwealth."

WIFE OF DENTIST IS SHOT IN QUARREL WITH HUSBAND

Mrs. Clara Bellows, 60, Wounded in Leg; Both Booked at Police Station.

Mrs. Clara Bellows, 60 years old, was shot in the left leg last night in a quarrel with her husband, Dr. Frank A. Bellows, 62, a dentist, at their home, 2631 Keokuk street.

At city hospital, Mrs. Bellows told police she had left the dinner table abruptly and had started out of the house when she was shot from behind. She declined to amplify her statement and said she would not prosecute her husband.

Taken into custody, Dr. Bellows refused to answer questions. Both were booked at Wyoming Street Police Station as suspected of affray. A .22-caliber pistol was seized in the house as evidence.

CITY PRISONERS TOO LAZY TO USE THEIR GYMNASIUM

So Room Will Be Converted Into a Dormitory for Use of Women.

A room on the sixth floor of the City Jail, used for the last three years as a gymnasium, in which prisoners were allowed to play ball and engage in athletic exercises, will be converted into a dormitory for women within the next week.

Warden Frank J. Primavesi stated yesterday that prisoners had become so indifferent to advantages of the gymnasium that the space would be used to relieve a temporary housing emergency.

"I don't know why they don't want to use the gymnasium," Primavesi explained. "They're too lazy, I guess. For the last year, I haven't been able to persuade any of them to go up there."

"We have 350 men in the jail now, with about 50 of them waiting to be taken to the penitentiary at Jefferson City, after quarantines for spinal meningitis there are eliminated. Fitting up the woman's dormitory will enable us to move the 15 women in jail into those quarters, vacating the two tiers of cells they now occupy, to allow us space for 43 men."

TWO ST. LOUISANS INJURED IN AUTO CRASH IN ILLINOIS

Their Auto Stuck and Overturned by Another Car, Driver of Which is Held After Chase.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLINTON, Ill., Nov. 23.—Two St. Louis youths, one of whom said he was W. C. Kounts Jr., 5264 Oleatha avenue, were injured when their automobile was struck from behind and overturned on Illinois Highway No. 2, south of here, this afternoon by a motorist who fled.

The youths were treated for cuts and bruises at Clinton city hospital, where they remained for the night. A third departed from the scene of the accident without giving his name. He was uninjured.

Highway Policeman Bert Taylo, passing the scene of the wreck, followed the other car and overtook it near Decatur, bringing the driver, William A. Lytle, of Chicago, back to Clinton, where he was placed in jail, charged with leaving the scene of an accident.

RIOT CALL AT OPERA HOUSE

Cast, Unpaid, Refuses to Go On—Crowd Breaks Office Windows.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—An audience of several hundred persons who had waited vainly an hour for the initial curtain to rise on "Aida," being given by the Cosmopolitan Opera Company at the Arlington Theater here tonight, made a rush for the box office when a man in the gallery shouted: "If this performance isn't going on, we want our money." The cast wanted their money, too, and had refused to go on the stage.

The crowd milled around the ticket office, demanding a refund. The announcement by one of the management that the refund would not be forthcoming until Monday was answered with a brick which shattered one of the box office windows. Instantly the crowd broke the remaining glass. A riot call brought patrolmen who dispersed the crowd. The "Aida" cast said pay was due since Nov. 11. The manager, Tomaso Nazzaro, said he had offered to split tonight's box office receipts, but when he went to the ticket office to get the money, it was missing.

Treasurer, Short $32,000, Held.

By the Associated Press.

FRANKLIN, Neb., Nov. 23.— George A. Carter, treasurer of Franklin County, was arrested today on a charge of embezzling $32,300 in county funds. County Attorney Leon Samuelson, who filed the complaint, said the charges were based on an audit of the treasurer's records by state checkers.

ROBBERS GET $580 IN FOUR STORE HOLDUPS

Thieves Pose as Customers at 5937 Easton, Then Produce Revolvers.

Four holdups of stores were reported last night between 6 and 8:30 o'clock, in which thieves escaped with a total of $580.

Three men, each armed, entered the grocery and meat market of Carl Wolff, 711 Academy avenue about 7:45 p. m., held up Wolff and three customers, robbed the cash register of $270 and fled.

About 8:30 p. m., two armed men held up a soft drink parlor at 1901 North Prairie avenue, took $52 from four customers and $70 from a till, and escaped.

George Meyerott, owner of a drug store at 3531 Delor street, was held up in his shop about 6 p. m. by two men with revolvers who took $50 from the cash register and ran.

Two men who walked into the shoe store owned by Jack Schneider, 5937 Easton avenue, about 6 p. m., said they wanted to buy some socks. When the clerk showed them a box of hosiery, they produced revolvers, forced Schneider and two clerks to a rear room, and escaped with $138.

E. P. ROSENBERGER FUNERAL AT MONTGOMERY CITY, MO., TODAY

St. Louis Attorney and Former Member of Legislature Ended His Life Friday.

Funeral services for Emil P. Rosenberger, an attorney who ended his life Friday at his home, 5569 Maple avenue, will be held at the Methodist Church in Montgomery City, Mo., at 1:30 p. m. today. Burial will take place at High Hill, Mo.

A Coroner's verdict of suicide was returned yesterday. Standing in front of a mirror in his bedroom Mr. Rosenberger shot himself through the head with a revolver. His body was found by a Negro servant. Mr. Rosenberger had been ill for five or six months and had lost 40 pounds in weight. He was 50 years old. He was a member of the law firm of Greensfelder, Rosenberger & Grand in the Central National Bank Building. Before coming to St. Louis in 1924 he practiced law for many years at Montgomery City, where he served as Prosecuting Attorney, Probate Judge and Representative in the State Legislature. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lucille Rosenberger, and three daughters, Elise, Selma and Mary Jane.

SUES TO AVOID TRUST PROVISION OF WILL

Mrs. C. J. Hood Holds It Offers Her $20,000 Clear Provided She Gets Divorce.

Suit was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Mrs. Adah C. P. Letson Hood to cancel provisions in the will of her grandmother, Mrs. Grace E. Letson Scully which left Mrs. Hood's $20,000 inheritance in trust as long as she was married. It will provided that if Mrs. Hood became a widow or divorced her husband she could have the property without restriction but otherwise the trust was to continue during her life.

Under the will Mrs. Hood is entitled to realty at 3415 Abner place and further, in the event she survived Mrs. Grace A. S. Evers, a daughter of testatrix, she will be beneficiary of a trust inheritance now enjoyed by Mrs. Evers.

It is alleged that the will as affecting the granddaughter's inheritance offends public morals and is contrary to public policy in that a reward is offered as an inducement for Mrs. Hood to obtain a divorce so she can have the property unrestricted. For that reason the trust restriction is void and should be set aside, the petitioner contends.

Mrs. Hood, who is the wife of Charles J. Hood, has an estimated present and contingent interest valued at $20,000 in her grandmother's estate. Charles H. A. Uetrecht is trustee of the Abner place property for Mrs. Hood's benefit. The suit seeks to have him removed, with title vested in plaintiff free; also that the provision continuing the trust on Mrs. Evers' share after her death be set aside.

Mrs. Scully died Feb. 27, 1921, leaving an estate of about $75,000. She lived at 2864 Arlington avenue.

ACCIDENT VERDICT IN DEATH OF BOY, 17, KILLED BY AUTO

Jesse Tipton Said to Have Stepped Backward From Safety Zone Into Traffic.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the death Friday of Jesse Tipton, 17 years old, 3401 Magnolia avenue, of head injuries suffered Thursday when he was knocked down by an automobile at Grand boulevard and Shenandoah avenue.

Witnesses testified Tipton alighted from a street car and stepped backward from a safety zone into the path of a machine driven by William Kella, 4814 Hamburg avenue.

AVIATION SPIES SENTENCED

LEIPSIC, Nov. 23.—Three persons were sentenced today to a total of 14 years imprisonment at the close of an aviation espionage trial before a Federal court.

The trial, lasted two weeks and was held in secret because of the technical and military importance of the testimony. The evidence showed that the accused maintained a well-organized office in Berlin, from which they carried on a widespread espionage service on German aviation for the benefit of an unnamed foreign power.

Attendance Increase Lowest Since War, U. S. Educational Bureau Reports.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.— The rapid increase in attendance at institutions of higher learning notable in the United States since the World War has apparently abated.

Commissioner Cooper of the Office of Education, in his annual report today to the Secretary of the Interior, estimated that the increase for the past year amounted to only 3 per cent in institutions on the approved list of the Association of American Universities. This is the smallest increase since the end of the World War.

Accompanying the slowing down of college attendance was a slackening of enrollment in the high schools of the country, and a falling birth rate.

These conditions, Cooper said, coupled with a continued increase in financial support for institutions of higher learning, are causing more stress to be laid upon the quality of work done by colleges and universities.

"Refinement of instructional procedure and more effective utilization of improved material facilities suggest that higher education is about to enter a new phase of development," Cooper reported.

Throughout the school systems of the country, Commissioner Cooper found that visual instruction, although not a new method, was receiving increasing attention. "The time is coming," the report says, "when school will not be properly equipped unless it has a modern motion picture machine."

Instruction by radio also is receiving much attention, many city schools having been equipped with receiving sets. The Ohio State Legislature has appropriated funds to be used for the extension of elementary education through the use of radio.

Adult education in the last year developed greatly the report says. In many states there is a distinct advance toward a better co-ordinated program for adult teaching.

SALESMAN'S SKULL AND ARM FRACTURED IN ROAD ACCIDENT

Auto Carrying N. G. Epstein, Kansas City, Mo., and Another Goes Over Embankment.

N. G. Epstein, 46 years old, a salesman of 3428 Troost avenue, Kansas City, Mo., suffered a fractured skull and left arm when his automobile went over an embankment on State Highway No. 40, just east of the Missouri River Bridge at St. Charles shortly after noon yesterday.

Epstein and A. H. Johnson of Kansas City were driving to St. Louis and were rounding a curve east of the bridge when the front left fender on the car caught on the rear end of a car driven by Alex L. Burkemper of Old Monroe, Mo., veered across the road and plunged through a guard rail down the embankment. Johnson was not injured. Epstein was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital at St. Charles.

FEDERALS DRIVE BACK REBELS IN CHINA'S CIVIL WAR

Reported to Have Captured Loyang and to Be Forcing Enemy Out of Honan.

THREAT AGAINST HANKOW CHECKED

Nationalist Planes Reported to Be Bombing Foe Moving Against Yangtse Cities.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 23.—Nationalist troops tonight appeared to have gained the upper hand in Honan Province, the rebellious Kuominchun troops being in retreat westward along the Lunghai Railroad toward the Province of Shensi.

Developments in the civil war in the adjoining Central China Province of Hupeh were uncertain, however, as the Nationalists strove to prevent the rebels from reaching the Yangtse River at Hankow.

Loyang, scene of hard fighting in Honan Province, had been abandoned by the Kuominchun forces to the attacking Nationalists, according to dispatches, the rebels continuing their retreat. The Kuominchun troops, it is thought, plan to withdraw into Shensi Province beyond the Tungkwan rail head, where the Nationalists are not expected to pursue. The rebels were reported to have cut the Lunghai Railroad west of Loyang, seeking to retard the Nationalist pursuit.

In Hupeh Province, the situation is less clearly defined. Hankow dispatches stated that Nationalist forces had begun to move westward from Tsaoyang, seeking to sweep the Kuominchun troops into Shensi Province, thus ending their threat against Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang, tri-cities on the Yangtse River. However, it was stated that "the Nationalists have not yet encountered the enemy, although Nationalist airplanes inflicted heavy damage on the enemy positions and Fancheng and Laohekow."

Further dispatches indicated a general belief that the failure of Hupeh hostilities to develop indicated that the Nationalists were striving to reach an agreement with the Kuominchun in that area.

Chiang Kai-Shek, president of the Nationalist Government, who has been personally directing military operations in Hupeh and Honan Provinces against the rebels, arrived here this afternoon, departing for Nanking, Nationalist capital, soon afterward. The serious menace to Canton caused him yesterday to withdraw 20,000 troops from the Honan battlefront and himself to hasten to Nanking to be in closer touch with the rebellion in South China.

Nationalist officials in Hankow are using strong methods to raise needed funds. Merchants of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang were forced to purchase 2,000,000 Mexican dollars ($1,500,000 gold) of bonds while additional taxes were levied on imports and exports passing through Hankow. Tax gatherers visited warehouses of foreign firms and some cargoes were seized. Foreign firms thus far, however, have refused to pay extra taxes, but have placed the question in the hands of the various consuls in Hankow.

Nationalist soldiers last night forced their way into a Hankow cinema house. Guards attempted to expel the soldiers, resulting in wholesale shooting. Two civilians in the audience were killed and many wounded.

A Nanking dispatch stated that the principal factor which is causing the "Kuominchun collapse" is an acute food shortage, adding: "Following their defeat at Loyang, 8000 Kuominchun went foodless for two days, finally joining the Nationalist forces."

800 Bills in "Prohibition Graveyard" at Washington

Many More Legislative Efforts to Modify Law Expected to Be Made at Coming Congress.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—There is a prohibition graveyard in the document room in the national Capitol, with about 800 marks designating the spot where as many legislative efforts to modify the law in fact or in effect lie dead and indications are plentiful that many more attempts will be made to change this statute during the winter.

Both wet as well as dry groups see reasons why the introduction of prohibition bills will continue in the new session of the Congress that convenes Dec. 2.

"This is the only means we have of expressing ourselves," said Congressman La Guardia of New York, a recognized leader of the wets, "and we will agitate until relief is obtained."

F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, said: "We will formulate a program of legislation which we will indorse and militantly sponsor during our convention in Detroit in January." He said the program undoubtedly would seek to better enforcement throughout the states, better enforcement particularly in the District of Columbia, and bigger appropriations for both.

La Guardia Not Optimistic.

Convinced that a wet bloc of 60 members of the House could enforce a demand for modification legislation by tying up other business, La Guardia, nevertheless, despaired for the near future. The wets in Congress are individualists, he said, and thus they render ineffective the strength they might have.

Of the veritable mounds of prohibition bills and resolutions that have grown in Congress since the Volstead act was passed, only five measures have been enacted. They are the Willis-Campbell act, prohibiting prescription beer; a measure providing confiscation of liquor carriers, the Five-and-Ten Jones law, the act setting up separate customs and prohibition bureaus in the Treasury, and the Harris amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill last winter, making an additional $1,719,654 available for enforcement.

Every wet bill and every resolution has died in committee, except a group sponsored by the new Ambassador to France, former Senator Edge of New Jersey. His bills to permit liquor manufacture in homes, to amend the definition of intoxicating liquor in the prohibition amendment, to permit the sale of 2.75 alcohol beverages and to provide a national referendum on prohibition got as far as being reported out by the Senate Judiciary Committee, adversely.

Several Bills Prepared.

Some of the measures which members said today they would push in the coming Congress would provide legacies for dependents of innocent persons killed by enforcement officers, prevent wire-tapping in obtaining evidence, prohibit the employment of spies and children in enforcement and lift the limits on liquor prescriptions.

The association against the prohibition amendment has elected to fight its battle in the states, while dry sentiment is what it is today in Congress.

5 NEW CARDINALS CREATED; ITALIANS STILL IN MINORITY

Sacred College Membership Now Is 62—Archbishop MacRory of Ireland in List.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 23.—Announcement was made today in Osservatore Romano of the nomination of five new cardinals, bringing the Sacred College membership to 62, of whom 33 are non-Italians. The list includes three non-Italians of whom the Most Rev. Joseph MacRory, Archbishop of Armagh, Ireland, is one.

Others appointed are Mgr. Cerejeira, Patriarch of Lisbon; Archbishop Verdier of Paris, Archbishop Lavitrano of Palermo and Archbishop Minoretti of Genoa.

The selection of Archbishops Cerejeira, MacRory, Lavitrano and Verdier had been expected, but the nomination of Archbishop Minoretti came as a surprise though there is precedent for bestowing a cardinalate on the Archbishop of Genoa.

Pope Pius has let it be known that by elevating Archbishop MacRory he wished to show his affection for Ireland, "The Mother of Saints" in the person of the primate of Ireland.

It is understood that Archbishop Verdier will come to Rome to receive the Red Hat from the Pope's hands at a public consistory Dec. 19 instead of receiving it from President Doumergue indirectly through another French cardinal.

When Cardinal Cerretti, who was then nuncio at Paris, was elevated in 1925 the stage seemed set for the President of the republic to resume the historic custom of bestowing the Red Hat sent from Rome, but it was recalled that President Doumergue was the first Protestant French Chief of State since King Henry IV. The difficulty was solved by President Doumergue's receiving the Red Hat from the Pope's special emissary and handing it to the late Cardinal Dubois who was then Archbishop of Paris. Cardinal Dubois thereupon invested Cardinal Cerretti with the hat.

Mgr. Verdier will not be consecrated Archbishop of Paris until after he has been made a cardinal.

JENNINGS ROAD WIDENING URGED BY ASSOCIATION

Many Property Owners at Meeting Agree to Donate Ten-Foot Strip on Each Side of Highway.

A campaign has been undertaken by the Jennings-Woodland Improvement Association to bring about the widening of Jennings road, St. Louis County, from 40 to 60 feet, between West Florissant aveune and Hall's Ferry road, closely paralleling the northern city limits. The association has announced that county officials have declined to consider paying for paving of this road with bond funds unless it is widened.

At a meeting at Corpus Christi Hall, Jennings, Friday evening, property owners of this section who were present were unanimous in agreeing to donate the necessary land, the association announced, and it was indicated that many who were not there would do so. A 10-foot strip on each side of the road is needed. The organization believes the County Highway Engineer may be able to start plans for the improvement within a month.

With its extensions, Jennings road connects St. Charles road, Wellston, with Riverview drive, between Baden and Chain of Rocks. This route runs close to the city limits, but is somewhat more direct than Goodfellow avenue and Kingshighway Northwest as a means of reaching the new bridges at Chain of Rocks and Fort Bellefontaine. It crosses several main lateral roads. Between St. Charles and Natural Bridge roads the route follows Kienlen avenue, part of which the county has paved. Between Hall's Ferry road and Riverview drive the county recently opened a new and paved road, Chain of Rocks drive.

Residents of Jennings favor the widening project because of the hazard of traffic congestion and the danger to school children who are forced to walk in the road at present. C. M. Andrews is chairman of the association's Road Committee and Lee Orf president.

$2,000,000 GIFT TO CHICAGO U.

John D. Rockefeller Jr. Gives Money for International Building.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 23.—John D. Rockefeller Jr. has given $2,000,000 for an international building at the University of Chicago. Announcement of preliminary plans for the club home was made last night by Dr. Frederic C. Woodward, vice president of the university. Bruce W. Dickson, adviser to foreign students at the Midway, has been working on plans for the international house for three years.

International house will provide dormitories and club house facilities for 500 foreign students attending school in Chicago. Its facilities will not be limited to students attending the university, but will be available to as many of the city's 1500 foreign students as it can accommodate.

PUBLIC DOMAIN COMMISSION STARTS WORK AT WASHINGTON

Seeks Plan for Turning Over Surface Rights of Government Lands to State.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The Commission on Conservation and Administration of the Public Domain, appointed by President Hoover to formulate a policy for possible turning over of surface rights to Government lands to the states organized today.

James R. Garfield, chairman of the commission said that Monday he would present an estimated budget as a basis for congressional appropriation and would assign committees to study various phases.

A suggestion that the Federal Government finance the building of dams and the states take over the further reclamation development was discussed. E. C. Van Patten, commissioner from Oregon, contended that giving the public lands to the states would require a new reclamation act in that the Federal Government would not have authority to construct reclamation projects on State property. H. O. Bursum of New Mexico said the objects of the commission if attained would bring immediate profit to his State of $200,000 annually.

MRS. LOUISE W. KNAPP DIES; ILL FOR MONTH

She Was Member of Old St. Louis Family; Funeral Services to Be Tomorrow.

Mrs. Louise Whittemore Knapp, 4619 Pershing avenue, widow of Harry G. Knapp, widely known real estate dealer of 20 years ago, died yesterday at her home, following an illness of about a month. She was a member of a long-established St. Louis family, and had been active socially. She was 64 years old.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10 o'clock at the Knapp residence. Dr. Karl M. Block of St. Michael's and All Angels Episcopal Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mrs. Knapp was the former Louise Whittemore, one of the daughters of the late Robert B. Whittemore, president of the Levering Investment Co., and a financial power in the city of his day. The family lived at one time at Seventeenth and Olive streets, then a fashionable residential section. They moved later to 329 South Eighth street, a section also including many fine homes of the period.

Mrs. Knapp was married in 1891. Mr. Knapp was the son of George Knapp, editor of the Missouri Republican, which later became the St. Louis Republic under the ownership of D. R. Francis.

Mrs. Knapp is survived by two daughters, Misses Eleanor and Louise Knapp four sons, Robert, George, Churchill and Harry Knapp, all of St. Louis a sister, Mrs. Thomas Powell of Chicago; and by six brothers, Clinton, Lawrason L., and Robert Whittemore of St. Louis; John R. Whittemore of Santa Barbara, Cal.; Audenreid and Allen Whittemore of New York.

Gene Tunneys Returning to U. S.

NAPLES, Italy, Nov. 23.—Gene Tunney and his wife, the former Polly Lauder, today were bound for United States soil, which they have not trod since before their marriage in Rome more than a year ago. The former heavyweight champion and his wife embarked from here aboard the liner Vulcania late last night.

GERMAN PSYCHOLOGIST TO LECTURE AT WASHINGTON

Dr. Hans Prinzhorn Known for Investigations With Prisoners and Insane.

Dr. Hans Prinzhorn, professor of psychology at the University of Frankfort, Germany, will lecture on "The Biological History of Mental Drama of Personality" at Washington University medical school at 8 p. m. Friday, under the auspices of the school's departments of phychology and neuropsychiatry and of the German Society of St. Louis. He will be a guest while here of Dr. Georg A. Arens, German Consul.

An outstanding psychologist, Prinzhorn is known for his investigations with prisoners and the insane and his collaboration in works on "Nietzsche and the Twentieth Century" and "On the Critique of Psychoanalysis." He attended the recent Psychological Congress in Boston.

CLEMENCEAU, DOCTOR TEACHER, GIANT OF FRANCE IN WORLD WAR

and it was largely through his insistence that she obtained the vast Saare coal fields and a large part of the reparations.

Shot by Anarchist.

Early in 1919, while the peace conference was at its height, Clemenceau was dangerously wounded by an anarchist, who made a dramatic attempt to assassinate him. The Premier was proceeding at the time from his residence to a committee meeting to be held in the rooms of Col. House, at the American headquarters in the Hotel Crillon. As his automobile sped through the boulevards, the anarchist sprang from behind a kiosk and sent a volley of shots at the Premier, two of which took effect one in the right shoulder and another in the breast.

Because of his advanced age—he was then 78—and suffering, as he was, from diabetes, the wounded Premier was at first thought doomed, but he fought death as he had fought the war, and his iron will carried him through. Three weeks later he was again at the head of the peace conference.

When the would-be assassin Emil Cotin, was sentenced to death for his attempt on the Premier's life, the latter recommended that the punishment be changed to imprisonment.

"How long shall we give him?" asked the Minister of Justice.

"About 10 years," said Clemenceau. "I'll be dead and gone before he comes out, in case he should like to use me for a target again."

Clemenceau made his second visit to this country in November, 1922, coming, as he expressed it, "to present the case of France to the American people." There was a feeling that the United States was losing some of its traditional sympathy for France because of the latter's reparations policy and other post-war conditions, and therefore Clemenceau decided to come here unofficially to defend the position of his country. He addressed capacity audiences in New York, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Washington and Philadelphia, and was given tremendous public ovations. There was wide interest in Clemenceau himself, but his mission was not regarded as having been entirely successful.

When he embarked for home someone asked if he would return to America again.

"Yes," he replied. "I will come again, but I will be a ghost."

The "maker and breaker of ministries," as Clemenceau came to be known because of the power he once held in the political affairs of France, came to the United States for the first time in 1884. He was 25 years of age, and had a physician's certificate in his pocket and a case of new surgical instruments as his baggage. He had no friends here and hardly any money.

He had spent a short time in prison for shouting "Vive la Republique" on the streets of Paris, and upon his release had decided to visit America, that he might "see what a real republic looks like." He began the practice of medicine, as several generations of Clemenceaus had done before him, but when his earnings were not sufficient to support him he wrote articles on American life for the Paris Temps. To further increase his income, he took a position in the New York public library.

Married in America.

Just at this time a Miss Aiken had started a school for girls in Stamford, Conn., and, happening to hear of Clemenceau, she induced him to accept a position as professor of French in the new school. Miss Aiken was not long in learning that the young Frenchman also was an expert horseman, and upon her suggestion a course in horsemanship was added to the curriculum, with the professor of French at its head.

Among the pupils he took for long rides through the countryside was a Miss Mary Plummer of Boston, a very pretty young girl, whose father, a prominent physician of Springfield, Mass., had died a few months before. Clemenceau fell in love with the girl, and, upon the completion of her studies, they were married in New York. The ceremony was purely a civil one, as both the groom and his bride were free thinkers without religious affiliations. Several Tammany Aldermen witnessed the wedding, which took place in 1869.

Twenty-three years later, and after bearing him three children, Mme. Clemenceau obtained a divorce from her distinguished husband, and returned to the United States, making her home in Illinois. A few years later Clemenceau married a Parisienne.

Returns to France.

In the year 1870, when the power of Napoleon III was waning rapidly, Clemenceau returned to France and throughout the Franco-Prussian War and the siege of Paris he was Mayor of the Montmartre district. In 1871 he was elected to the General Assembly, and five years later became a member of the Chamber of Deputies, where he soon became a leader of the radicals. Even then he was making a reputation as the destroyer of men's careers.

He increased his political power by journalistic activities, which had interested him for several years. In 1880 he founded La Justice, a daily newspaper, of which he became chief editor, and with the help of this weapon he destroyed half a dozen ministries in as many years. One of his insistent demands throughout this period, and of his whole political career, in fact, was the complete separation of church and state. For this reason he never had the support of the Clericals.

Clemenceau used to tell a story on himself to illustrate the opinion the Clericals held of him. When he was being carried into his house after the attempt on his life by the anarchist, a priest belonging to a congregation adjoining the Premier's garden rushed up and offered his services.

"I don't think I shall need you this time," said Clemenceau, "but if you wish to be agreeable to me, you might have that big tree in your yard removed. It keeps the sun away from me."

Priest's Retort.

"It shall be felled today," replied the priest. "I should not like to be responsible for keeping you from enjoying the only sight of heaven which a sinner such as you are is likely to have."

Powerful as he was for more than 20 years after 1870, Clemenceau fell in 1893, and fell so hard that his return to politics was believed to be hopeless. He was disgraced, finished. He was accused of complicity in the Panama Canal scandal, and while he met every charge against his integrity, and the attack on him in the Chamber broke down completely, his constituents turned against him and for nine years he had no connections whatever with the Government of France.

He devoted his time to writing and to the moulding of public opinion, and in 1902 the same constituency that had forsaken him in his hour of trial returned him triumphantly to the Senate. In the spring of 1906 he was appointed to public office for the first time in his life, becoming Minister of the Interior, and in November of that year, upon the retirement of Sarrien, he became Premier.

In 1909 his old enemy, Delcasse, rose up suddenly and overthrew the ministry, yet the power of Clemenceau was not broken. He kept his place in the Senate, and in 1912 brought down the ministry of Caillaux. A year later the Briand Government crumpled and fell, and when the World War began Clemenceau entered the cabinet of Rene Viviani, where he continued to criticise and attack.

Defeated for Presidency.

After the war and the peace conference, and while still Premier, his name was put in nomination for the presidency of France, but a revulsion from everything savoring of the war had set in and Paul Deschanel was elected. With characteristic vigor Clemenceau announced that his public service was at an end, and a few weeks later he sailed for India to hunt tigers.

"The deliverer of France," which is one of the names applied to Clemenceau, was born Sept. 28, 1841, in the Province of La Vendee. He was a true child of the Revolution, and was proud to relate that his father, too, had been imprisoned by Napoleon III at the time of the coup d'etat that destroyed the Second Republic.

While a medical student in Paris Clemenceau developed an interest in politics and drew up plans for a model government. He was never so happy as when exhorting his friends and followers to fight for a government based upon public order and the respect of individual rights."

Mongolian Features.

Physically, Clemenceau was short and stocky, with a large head inclined noticeably forward on broad and stooping shoulders. His features were of a pronounced Mongolian type. This was illustrated by an anecdote told during the war.

It seems Clemenceau was visiting the trenches, and a poilu, recalling that his features seemed familiar, asked an officer who the stranger was. Deciding to have a little sport with the soldier, the officer described Clemenceau as a rich and powerful Chinese mandarin, who dressed in European fashion in order that he might visit the trenches without attracting attention.

"He might better raise an army of 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 Chinese and give us a lift against the Germans," was the poilu's reply.

HOOVER GETS REPORT ON U. S. ARMY COSTS

Program to Reduce Expenditures Likely to Start Fight in Congress.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Recommendations of the army general staff which President Hoover hopes will point the way to a drastic cut in expenditures for the country's military forces and materially aid tax reduction have been placed before the President.

The President is expected to transmit his conclusions early next month to Congress, where differences on the subject already have been voiced. Chairman Reed of the Senate Military Affairs Committee has expressed the opinion that further economies might injure the efficiency of the army.

In ordering the survey by the general staff early in the summer, President Hoover said the purely military expenses of the United States constitute a military budget greater than that of any other nation, and at a time when he considers there is less danger of war than at any period within the last 50 years.

The possibility of tax reduction, he added, was dependent to a large extent upon an ability to curtail military and naval expenditures.

Estimates place the purely military outlay for 1933 at $803,000,000, an increase of $120,000,000 as compared with last year. The increase is half of the estimated total increase in Government expenditures in 1933 as compared with the 1929 fiscal year. The pre-war annual average expenditure for the army and navy was $246,000,000.

Trouble is foreseen in Congress when cuts are attempted, with the prospect of sharp division within the army itself over the question. Although the general staff's findings have been guarded, suggestions for pruning already have been directed at some of the many garrisons scattered through the Western states.

In ordering the survey by the general staff early in the summer, President Hoover said the purely military expenses of the United States constitute a military budget greater than that of any other nation and at a time when he considers there is less danger of war than at any period within the last 50 years.

KNABE
ANNIVERSARY DESIGNS

Eight Special Models at 75% Of Custom-Built Prices

To permit you to share in this celebration and show our appreciation of Knabe's following, we have created eight new beautiful Knabe Baby Grand and Ampico Baby Grand designs which—during the Anniversary only—will be sold at prices hundreds of dollars less than regular prices.

One, for example, is a lovely Adam period model whose custom-built price would ordinarily be $1600. During this Anniversary it is specially priced at only $1185. It will be delivered to your home upon a first payment of only $118.50.

Other special new Anniversary period design Knabe Baby Grands, offered during this celebration (only) at similar reductions, are: William and Mary, Queen Anne, a Louis XVI, and Hepplewhite.

A limited number of
J. & C. Fischer
BABY GRANDS
Harpsichords

Never before sold at less than regular price of $845

Anniversary Price Only $695 $69.50 Down

The Fischer has long been a companion piano to the Knabe—Knabe designers have lent their skill and artistry to the creation of this splendid Baby Grand.

Because of this Knabe 92nd Anniversary, Fischer is offering, at a special Anniversary price, a limited number of these most popular Baby Grands as a compliment to Knabe, in commemoration of Knabe's 92-year contribution to musical art.

Marshall & Wendell
Ampico Baby Grands at $995
The Lowest Price in History!!

The smallest size Ampico Baby Grand ever built—it can be graciously accommodated in the smallest room. Offered at the lowest price in history—several hundred dollars less than ever before. There is no longer any need to deny your family the entrancing, restful music that only the Ampico can provide. You can bring it into your home, during this Anniversary, at an investment of only..... $7 A Week

Another Anniversary Special
HAINES BROTHERS

INCOME TAX CUT OF $160,000,000 UP TO CONGRESS

Proposed Reductions First on Program on Reconvening — Leaders Pledged to Enactment.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Income tax reduction—$160,000,000 worth—gets the first attention of Congress when it convenes in regular session a week from Monday.

This Christmas present to Federal taxpayers seems destined to be given about Christmas time with the leaders of both parties in both the House and Senate pledged to its enactment. The Congress returns to the tariff, prohibition and numerous other controversial problems.

Aside from the proposal to slash the normal income tax rates of both individual and corporation taxpayers by 1 per cent, President Hoover has not disclosed the program he will submit to the first regular session of Congress in his administration.

However, the unsettled tariff legislation coming over from the extra session promises to demand attention for some time to come. Reorganizaiton of the prohibition service and its transfer to the Department of Justice from the Treasury is expected to be recommended by the chief executive.

Vare Fight in Senate.

While the House is busy starting the appropriation bills and getting the tax reduction resolution under way, the Senate will take up the three-year-old dispute over the right of William S. Vare, Senator-elect from Pennsylvania, to a seat. Vare's right was challenged first by the special Senate committee which inquired into his three-cornered primary campaign and reported expenditures of more than $600,000. Also William B. Wilson, the Democratic opponent, contested Vare's election on the charge of fraud. The sub-committee inquiring into that contest will report next week. Vare has been denied the oath of office.

By previous agreement, the Vare case will be taken up at the outset of the session. Lines have been fairly well drawn in the Senate during the three years of dispute and an early decision is apparently in sight.

It appears unlikely, however, that the Senate will be able to dispose of more than the Vare case and the tax reduction resolution before the Christmas holiday, after which it will resume the tariff wrangle.

Unsettled Future Ahead.

This is the long session of Congress and with such an unsettled future ahead, few predictions are being made on when it will end. Some say it will be impossible to adjourn the meeting before the end of the summer. Others, however, believe the approaching primary campaigns will aid in bringing about an earlier adjournment as members look to work at home.

A weary Senate membership which has been working since last April with only two of the summer months off is planning no preparations for the regular session during the coming week. Even the enlivening lobby investigation has been deferred until after the recess.

Over in the House where the extra session program was concluded last June, some of the committees are already at work. The Appropriations Committee is busy preparing the first of the annual supply bills and three of these are intended to be put through and sent to the Senate before the Christmas recess.

Mr. Hoover is busy at work outlining his first message to Congress on the state of the Union. The message probably will be delivered on the second day.

Organization Difficulties.

Organization difficulties are in sight in the Senate but leaders are hopeful of smoothing over the troubles. Senator Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, will return this week from a three week's rest in Florida where he was sent by physicians. He will take command again and seek to mould the faction-split Republicans into a working unit.

A party conference probably will be held at the outset of the session when the Senate Republican organization will be fixed. Some trouble looms in the selection of a successor to Senator Edge, of New Jersey, on the Finance Committee. Edge has resigned to become Ambassador to France.

The Western Republican Independents will support Senator La Follette of Wisconsin for this committee on which they now have no representation. They have indicated that they will carry a contest t othe floor if he is not given the assignment.

New Fight on Bull Fighting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 23.—The Mexican Chamber of Deputies today was studying a measure introduced by Deputy D. F. Sotelo Regil, which would prohibit bullfighting and cockfighting. Two attempts to end bullfighting in Mexico have given way to popular desire in the past. In 1914, Gen. Funston, commanding American detachments at Vera Cruz, barred the sport there. The next year the late President Carranza outlawed bullfighting but the order later was rescinded.

NEW DEACONESS HOSPITAL ROOF AFIRE, DAMAGE $5000

Boiling Kettle of Tar Ignited Atop Building Nearing Completion.

Fire damage estimated at $5000 to the roof of the new seven-story Deaconess Hospital, under construction at 6150 Oakland avenue, facing Forest Park, resulted when a kettle of tar, which was being heated over an oil burner, boiled over shortly before noon yesterday.

The liquid was ignited and flames spread rapidly over an area 50 feet square. Four engine companies answered the alarm and extinguished the blaze, which for a time was spectacular because of the dense clouds of black smoke which arose from the burning tar.

Early estimates placed the damage at $400 or $500, but after examination of the structure Arthur Frankie, secretary of the Dickie Construction Co. which is erecting the hospital, said the loss would be more than 10 times this figure, owing to the necessity for replacing the roofing already laid.

SIX PARIS, ILL., STILL OPERATORS CONVICTED

Terms Range From 18 Months to 90 Days — Two Defendants Acquitted.

Six of eight defendants charged with conspiracy to violate the Volstead Act in the operation of a still near Paris, Ill., were found guilty by a jury in Federal Judge Wham's court in East St. Louis yesterday, and sentenced to terms in jail and penitentiary.

They are: Willard Large, Paris, Ill., 18 months in Leavenworth penitentiary, Rudolph Berkley, Taylorville, Ind., 18 months in Leavenworth, Orville Large, nephew of Willard Large, six months in Danville jail, William McCleaverty, of Chicago, 18 months Federal reformatory at Chillicothe, Arthur Faut, of Chicago, a year and a day in Chillicothe and William Mushett, of Terre Haute, Ind., 90 days in Danville jail and $500 fine.

Julius Ugi of Indianapolis and John McCleaverty of Chicago, brother of William McCleaverty, were acquitted. Of the rest of the 15 originally indicted, three are at large, three have been acquitted on directed verdicts and Thomas B. Jeffers pleaded guilty and testified for the Government. Jeffers will be sentenced tomorrow.

The jury was out two and a half hours, returning its verdict at 8 o'clock last night.

The still was operated near a roadhouse operated by Willard Large. It was raided last March.

Maximum sentence for conspiracy is two years in prison, $10,000 fine, or both fine and imprisonment.

CONGRESS LIKELY TO INVESTIGATE U. S. POWER BOARD

Part of Accounting Work of Commission Transferred, as Trust's Secret Memorandum Urged.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—With remarkable exactitude, the activities of the Federal Power Commission continue to follow the course of procedure mapped out in the confidential memorandum, apparently written by some one in the Power Trust, which was published in the Post-Dispatch last July.

Frank E. Bonner, executive secretary of the Commission, has recommended, and Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur has approved, an order directing that some of the accounting work of the Commission be turned over to the accounting units of the Departments of War, Agriculture and Interior.

This development, which was forecast as desirable in the secret memorandum, has been so strongly opposed by Charles A. Russell, the Solicitor for the Commission, and William V. King, Chief Accountant, that at least three and perhaps four congressional committees probably will investigate the commission during the next session.

Those Planning Inquiries.

The three committees which already have plans to investigate the Commission are: The Couzens sub-committee of the Interstate Commerce Committee for establishment of a power and radio commission; the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, and the State Appropriations Committee. The fourth committee that may investigate is the House Appropriations Committee.

The confidential memorandum bitterly attacked the methods of William V. King and insisted that the Commission's accounting should be removed from his supervision.

After recounting that King had applied the "prudent investment" theory of valuation to public utilities accounts, the memorandum said: "Despite our efforts to curtail the work of this department (King's accounting division), it appears to be expanding. Some of the activities of this department have very critical aspects for the electrical power industry as a whole."

Recommendations Followed.

The memorandum continued: "We have made representations to the Water Power Development Committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce that this accounting work could be better done by the Departments of War, Interior and Agriculture than by the commission's staff directly.

"If this committee is successful in presenting this argument to the secretaries who form the commission, and further direct enlargement of the accounting staff is prevented, it is believed that these departments will not have men specially trained for this work, and at least they will be removed from the direct supervision of Mr. King."

By the Wilbur-Bonner order, the procedure suggested by the secret memorandum is followed to the letter, although Wilbur and Bonner deny that accountants in the War, Interior and Agricultural Departments are less competent tha nthe Power Commission 23 accountants to pass on public utility financing.

Wilbur's Explanation.

The Power Commission proper is composed of the Secretaries of Interior, War and Agriculture. Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture, and the Acting Secretary of War were not consulted about the order, Wilbur said today.

Asked for an explanation of the order, Wilbur said: "The accounting work of the commission has been piling up for the past five years. Today, because of inadequate accounting personnel, not a single accounting case is ready for presentation to the commission.

"We had an emergency case which demanded an immediate decision. Mr. King told Mr. Bonner that he did not have men to work up the case. Mr. Bonner then asked the Departments of Interior, War and Agriculture if they had accountants available for the work. He found that the accounting staff of the Engineer Corps of the Army was available and he subsequently made his general recommendation that some of this work should be turned over to these departments. Mr. King will continue to govern the accounts before they are acted upon by the commission."

Work Seriously Impaired.

Secretary Wilbur frankly admitted that the work of the commission was seriously impaired by the conflicting attitudes of Bonner on the one hand and King and Russell on the other. Bonner has sought to impress his views on the accounting and legal divisions, and the two division heads with congressional support, have strenuously resisted what they believe to be his "Power Trust" ideas.

In the Senate, Senators Walsh and Wheeler (Dems.), Montana; Senator Couzens (Rep.), Michigan, and Senators Frazier and Nye (Reps.), North Dakota, have backed King and Russell against Bonner.

Walsh, Wheeler and Frazier forced an open hearing by the entire Power Commission on a Flathead Indin reservation water-power site application, after Bonner apparently had discriminated in favor of the Rocky Mountain Power Co. and against another applicant, W. A. Wheeler, not a relative of the Senator.

Bonner had insisted that he would hold an initial secret hearing, and even his order for an open hearing called on the applicant, Wheeler, to show cause why the permit "should not be granted" to the Rocky Mountain company.

Bonner to Be Called.

Russell, as Solicitor for the commission, attended the public hearings on the Flathead petitions and questioned witnesses until he was ordered by Bonner to keep away from the hearings. Russell took his case to Senators Wheeler and Frazier, who immediately demanded that Russell be instructed to attend the hearings. Secretary Wilbur issued the necessary order. Secretary Wilbur had nothing to say today on this phase of the case.

Senator Wheeler said today that Bonner would be called before the Indian Affairs Committee to explain his actions in the Flathead case.

"Several Senators, including myself, on the Indian Committee, were shocked at Mr. Bonner's seeming partiality to the Rocky Mountain Power Co.," Wheeler said. "When the regular session begins, Bonner will be called upon to explain not only his part in the Flathead case, but also in recommending the order to allocate some of the accounting work to other departments of the Government. The Indian Committee is interested in how the Power Commission's valuations are made. Upon the commission's valuation depends what price the Government will have to pay on recapture of these power sites after the 50-year leases have expired. Although the Power Trust has disclaimed responsibility for the secret memorandum, it seems to be more than a coincidence that Bonner is following the path laid down by the memorandum."

"Something Strange," Says Nye.

Senator Nye said today that as a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee he would demand that Bonner, Russell and King testify before the committee and give a true account of affairs in the commission. He stated that he particularly wanted to know what recommendations Bonner had for the position of executive secretary.

"I shall insist," he said, "that the commission be given adequate funds to build up its own accounting personnel. There is no reason why the commission's accounting work should be turned over to untrained men in other departments. There is something strange in this effort to get this valuation work from the supervision of Mr. King."

The Wilbur-Bonner order is only one of several "coincidences" between activities in the Power Commission and the changes forecast by the confidential memorandum.

Bonner succeeded O. C. Merrill as executive secretary of the commission on July 1. Commenting on Merrill, the memo said: "It is rumored that Mr. Merrill may be persuaded to accept some other more lucrative and less trying position. The secretary commissioners may be persuaded to appoint as his successor some engineer who may be quite naturally sympathetic toward the development of an accounting force and its activities as previously outlined.

Merrill Got Better Job.

"No candidate for this position can be openly presented until Mr. Merrill definitely announces his intention of resigning. It is anticipated that the agencies and the forces opposed to our industry in national legislation will not have their attention directed to this matter and it is hoped that discreet representations can be made to the secretary commissioners."

On July 1, Merrill's resignation and Bonner's appointment as his successor were announced. Merrill left the commission to become executive secretary of the American Committee of the World Power Conference, which is financed by the electrical industry as represented by the National Electric Light Association, the General Electric Co., the Western Electric Co., the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and other large power and financial organizations.

As executive secretary, Merrill received $7500. In his new position, he is reported to get getting well over double that figure.

COMPARES POWER TRUST TO FORCES IN DARK AGES

Greenville (Tex.) Mayor Urges Consumers to Throw Off "Yoke of Imposition."

By the Associated Press.

FLORENCE, Ala., Nov. 23.—Likening the activities of power companies to those of predatory forces of the dark ages, Joseph F. Nichols, Mayor of Greenville, Tex., asserted in an address before the Public Ownership League of America here today that before the yoke of imposition can be thrown off by power consumers, utilities must be operated by the municipalities.

Cities, he said, are the only agencies in this nation to check and curb such forces and influences of the privately owner power companies.

"The electric power trust is the most influential and widespread of predatory forces in the United States and is inimical to the continued prosperity and the general welfare of the nation," he asserted.

An appeal for national and State legislatures to enact laws which will guide national and State commissions in placing valuations on public utility properties was made by Dr. John A. Ryan, director of the National Catholic Welfare Conference of Washington.

"Both Congress and the State legislatures," he said, "should fix the maximum return allowed utilities. This rate should be high enough to attract new capital, but no higher."

Tune in on "Mr. and Mrs." ....Cartoonist Briggs' "comic section of the air"! Graybar Hour, 8 to 8:30 every Saturday night. Columbia Broadcasting System.

Now . . . indoor sunshine!

Simply touch the handy lever of this Graybar Sunshine Health Lamp and let your body absorb health! A convenient source of necessary sun-rays for children. . . "shut-ins" . . . adults whose occupations keep them indoors during most of the sunlight hours.

The Graybar Lamp has an effective safety device. To prevent over-exposure, the current automatically goes off at the end of 7 minutes.

This lamp is compact . . . goes where it's wanted. (Height, 20 inches. Weight, 24 pounds.) And costs only $49.50

(NOTE: In case of any specific ailment, a doctor should be consulted.)

A 3 mile walk in 3 minutes

No need for the busy business man to take "time out" for his exercise now. He can have a complete "work-out" in a few minutes, with the Graybar Stimulator. No wonder he feels better, all day—and shows it! (Friend Wife likes the Stimulator, too. It trims up her figure . . . and tones up her health!)

Varying gradations of massage. Simplicity of construction. Easy operation. And the price (it's hard to believe!) is only . . $59.50

To sew is to rest now. You just relax when you sew with a Graybar portable electric Sewing Machine! A built-in motor (which you can hardly hear) does all the heavy work! A handy sewing-light makes night sewing easy. And when you finish... just tuck your Machine away on a handy shelf—out of sight! $75.00

Introducing an "indispensable"... Once you've owned a Handy Cleanerette you'll wonder how you ever got along without it! Just the thing for cleaning upholstered chairs . . . the interior of your car . . . and any awkward corner. This "handful of vacuum cleaner" also cleans drapes, curtains, mattresses . . . to perfection! Price? Moderate! . . . $13.50

(Let your dealer tell you about the useful new Vagorette Set!)

A word about wash "hour"

The Graybar Two-Speed Clothes Washer just "eats up" a heavy wash... thus turning a day's task into an hour's! It has a fast speed to wash everyday things quickly and thoroughly . . . and a slow speed to wash "dainties" as gently as your own hands would! . . . Easy to clean...Self-emptying $165

The life of any party . . . GRAYBAR SUPERHETERODYNE RADIO

WHAT zest, and gaiety, and "sparkle" the Graybar Superheterodyne Radio adds to social affairs! How that colorful music does make the party "go"!

Guests instantly notice this "different" quality of the Graybar Superheterodyne. They comment upon its unusually rich, vibrant, mellow tone; upon its remarkable ability to "get the station" quickly; upon that special sensitiveness so very rarely encountered even in radios which are more expensive.

It all comes down to the circuit . . . the splendid Superheterodyne circuit, which has never, in all radio history, been equalled for mechanical precision and for hair-breadth accuracy of reproduction.

Of course you would hope, and expect, to find a cabinet worthy in every respect to house this unusual instrument. And you do! Trained craftsmanship, working with the finest materials obtainable, have indeed produced a beautiful thing.

In every detail, this radio reflects Graybar's long radio experience (including the outfitting of 150 of the leading broadcasting stations in this country) . . . and Graybar's 60-year reputation as distributor of everything electrical.

Nowhere in all radio tube-dom are there better tubes than RCA Radiotrons, Graybar believes. That's why Graybar distributes them.

Which price includes an improved electro-dynamic speaker!

(Note to home makers: The simplicity of the cabinet design harmonizes charmingly with almost any type of furniture.)

SEIZURE OF AUTOS BY DRY AGENTS UP TO SUPREME COURT

Government Asks for Ruling as to Procedure Under Prohibition or Internal Revenue Laws.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The Government urged the Supreme Court today to decide a prohibition question of prime importance to automobile manufacturers and agents, and it is likely a ruling will be made on how seized automobiles not paid for are to be dealt with.

The issue is whether the Government should proceed against such machines under the prohibition law which would give those holding a lien on any vehicle an opportunity to protect their interests, or under the internal revenue laws, when lien holders of a machine ordered forfeited would be unable to recover anything.

The controversy reached the Supreme Court in a case from Western North Carolina, brought by the Richbour Motor Co. when a Ford coupe it was selling on deferred payments was seized by a Federal prohibition officer for transporting liquor. The Government decided to ask the forfeiture of the machine under the internal revenue laws on the ground it was being used to defraud the Government of revenue, and the lower Federal courts sustained that position.

Pointing out that automobiles of a value of more than $2,000,000 are seized annually for illicit transportation of liquor, the company, in behalf of the automobile industry, insisted that those holding liens on the seized machines should have a chance under the prohibition law to protect their interests. It maintained that when the charge is illegal transportation, the prosecution has no discretion and must proceed under the prohibition law.

The Government stated in the memorandum filed today that a decision by the Supreme Court was desired because the issue presented was constantly arising in the enforcement of prohibition.

WHITE OAK LODGE HUNT

GERMAN BARON ENDS FLIGHT OF 21,000 MILES ROUND WORLD

Receives Hearty Welcome in Berlin But Is Delayed On Last Lap.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—After most of the 3000 guests who had assembled in the largest public hall in the city to welcome him had dispersed early today, Baron Friedrich Karl von Koenig-Warthausen completed his 21,000-mile air trip over Europe, Asia and America.

He received a hearty welcome from the few who remained and gave a short account of his trip through fog between Bremen and Berlin.

Baron Koenig passed through St. Louis in his flivver airplane in the course of his flight around the world. He landed here Oct. 16 from the Southwest and left the next day for Chicago. His flight was broken by ocean voyages between Singapore and Japan, between Japan and San Francisco and between New York and Bremen, Germany.

ST. LOUIS TO REPEAT PLEA FOR DIRECT NEW YORK AIR MAIL

St. Louis' request for direct air mail to New York and the Southwest will be presented at a hearing of the Interdepartmental Committee on Airways on three proposed Southwestern routes tomorrow by a delegation which departed yesterday for Washington.

Routes to Los Angeles which would leave St. Louis with its present inadequate service have been proposed from Atlanta through Birmingham, Fort Worth and Dallas, and from New Orleans through Houston, San Antonio and El Paso.

The St. Louis delegation will favor a line from St. Louis through Tulsa, Fort Worth and Dallas, and stress the case presented by the Interdepartmental Committee last fall, that good economics and navigation demand that the first and most important leg of any new transcontinental line should be a direct route from New York through St. Louis to the Southwest.

PRINCIPIA DAD'S CLUB DINES

Fathers of students from 21 States attended a banquet of the Dads' Club of Principia Academy at the City Club last night. The meeting closed the Dads' Day program, which included three football games and a girls' hockey contest.

Among the speakers were Frank E. Stevens, president of the club; William G. Masters of Louisville, Ky.; George A. Andrews, dean of the faculty; John Bennet, president of the Chicago Principia Club, and Arthur T. Morey of the board of trustees. About 450 men and boys attended.

DOWNTOWN HOLIDAY PARKING RESTRICTIONS

Bar in Effect on Olive Tomorrow, Washington and Locust Next Monday.

For the fourth year, daytime parking will be prohibited for a period of several weeks preceding Christmas on the three principal streets of the downtown retail district, to reduce traffic congestion.

Beginning tomorrow, the rule will apply to Olive street, between Fourth street and Twelfth boulevard. Beginning a week from tomorrow, it will apply to Washington avenue and Locust street, between Fourth and Twelfth. The arrangement will continue until Dec. 24.

While the ordinance permitting one-hour parking on these thoroughfares remains unchanged, the bar will be established as a police regulation by agreement of the police and street departments. Policemen will be stationed on the three streets to direct motorists not to stop.

Traffic in the narrow canyon of Olive street, east of Twelfth, has increased 27 per cent in volume, as established by a count at eleventh street, since Olive was widened west of Twelfth last year, Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks related in a letter to Chief of Police Gerk. Brooks explained this as due to the tendency of traffic to continue in a straight line, even when a street becomes narrow. This fact and the 30-second space between trolleys in Olive during rush hours has congested the street, Brooks said, and bad weather adds a further complication.

Trolleys are delayed from 5 to 20 minutes during rush hours, in Olive and Washington downtown, because of traffic congestion, Brooks asserted, while five to 15 minutes are lost in Locust street and 5 to 10 minutes in Pine street. An average of 50 cars daily are turned back at Twelfth or elsewhere on these streets, the director went on, because of the congestion. Much of the delay, Brooks thinks, is due to persons trying to park cars east of Twelfth or commercial vehicles awaiting curb space to make deliveries.

$5,500,000 LACLEDE GAS BOND ISSUE AUTHORIZED

Will Be Used to Pay Back Company and for Improvements and Additions.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 23.—The Missouri Public Service Commission today authorized the Laclede Gas Light Co. of St. Louis to issue and sell $5,500,000 in first mortgage collateral and refunding 20-year bonds to reimburse the company treasury money expended from income and sources other than sale of securities, for plant additions and improvements.

The bonds are to be sold at not less than 94 per cent of their par value and are to bear interest at a rate not to exceed 5½ per cent.

In support of the application the Laclede company submitted evidence that it had expended $9,321,936 for construction and plant additions since 1919, against which $3,000,000 in securities had been issued, leaving $6,321,936 in such expenditures not covered by securities, except short term notes. The company stated work now in progress would cost an additional $1,000,000.

In its order the commission stated its policy was not to authorize bonds in excess of 70 per cent of amounts expended for additions and construction, and that the proposed bond issue was nearly $400,000 in excess of 70 per cent of the amount expended or committed to work under way. The commission held that in this case the total assets of the company, when considered with the total outstanding funded debt, justified authorization of the $5,500,000 issue proposed.

The order provides that $2,100,000 of the amount shall be used for retirement of short term notes, the proceeds of which were used for construction, and $1,000,000 for construction now in progress. The balance is to reimburse the treasury for money used from income and other funds for construction and additions.

NO FORMAL SERVICE AT J. BOYLE PRICE FUNERAL

Body Cremated in Presence of Six Intimate Friends, as He Directed.

The body of J. Boyle Price, 5638 Kingsbury boulevard, member of an old St. Louis family, was cremated yesterday in the presence of six intimate friends without prayers and with no formal funeral services, in accordance with his wishes. In a sealed note given two years ago to George C. R. Wagoner, an undertaker, to be opened after his death, Mr. Price expressed the desire that his funeral be conducted in this manner.

Mr. Price died of heart disease Friday at his home. He was 57 years old and had retired three years ago as advertising manager for the Lambert Pharmacal Co. because of ill health.

His widow, Mrs. Jane Taylor Price; a daughter, Jane, and a half-brother, Nathaniel McDonald, survive. He was a son of William M. Price and a grandson of the Rev. Joseph Boyle, for whom Boyle avenue is named.

Those present at the cremation were McDonald, Samuel Plant, Clarkson Carpenter, Harry January, Charles Ewing and Pelham Turner.

$200,000 Fire in Dwight, Ill.
By the Associated Press.

DWIGHT, Ill., Nov. 23.—Fire in the downtown district today destroyed seven business houses and caused damage estimated at $200,000. Fire-fighting equipment was called from Morris and Pontiac before the flames were brought under control. The fire started in a barber shop, where a gasoline heater exploded.

WOMAN, WHO TOLD OF ROBBER TYING HER UP, FINDS JEWELRY

Mrs. Louise Watson, 50 years old, who reported Friday that an armed Negro had bound her in her home at 5141 Rosa avenue and robbed her of jewelry valued at $550, informed police yesterday that she had found the jewelry in a laundry bag hanging on her bedroom door.

When her husband, William B. Watson, vice president of the Watson Realty Co., 5463 Gravois avenue, arrived home Friday afternoon in response to her telephone message that she had been robbed, he found her lying on the kitchen floor in a hysterical condition with hands and feet tied with neckties.

After turning away a Negro who came to the house and asked for work, she said, she went back to her reading. Whereupon, a second Negro entered the back door, tied her hands and feet and ransacked the place, taking the jewelry from a dresser drawer. Before fleeing, he forced her to drink something from a bottle, and she collapsed after crawling to a telephone and calling her husband.

SAYS HUSBAND DESERTED HER TO STUDY AERONAUTICS

Mrs. Leo Moser Jr. Obtains Divorce From Son of Restaurant Keeper Who Left $526,000.

Mrs. Edwa Robert Moser, 7164 Northmoor drive, University City, obtained a divorce from Leo Moser Jr., at Clayton yesterday.

The Mosers were married in 1921, She testified he deserted her and their four children Nov. 2, 1928, going to California to study aeronautics. Custody of the children was granted Mrs. Moser. She did not ask for allmony and, through stipulation, both parties relinquished dower claims. Moser, who is in California, did not contest.

Moser is 36 years old, a graduate of St. Louis University and served overseas during the World War. His father, who operated the Silver Moon Restaurant and the Moser Hotel, died in 1922, leaving an estate of $526,000 to his widow, who lives at 4491 West Pine boulevard.

Before her marriage Mrs. Moser was Miss Edwa Robert, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John G. Robert of Clarksville, Mo. The wedding took place at the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes with Archbishop Glennon giving the blessing.

DEPOSITORS GET BACK 98 PCT. OVER PERIOD OF 14 YEARS

Final Dividend of 3 Pct. Ordered For Broadway Bank of St. Louis.

A final dividend of 3 per cent in favor of depositors of the Broadway Bank of St. Louis, which failed 14 years ago, was ordered yesterday by Circuit Judge Hartmann. With this payment the amount received back in dividends will total 98 per cent.

Judge Hartmann further directed that the liquidation of the bank, which has been in charge of E. H. Benoist, acting for the State Finance Department, be wound up so that no additional expense may be entailed. Benoist reported he was ready to comply with the order, all outstanding approved claims having been settled.

By agreement of S. L. Cantley, State Finance Commissioner, Benoist, as liquidating officer, was allowed an additional fee of $6500, making his full compensation $24,978, and his attorney, W. M. Fitch, also was allowed an additional fee of $6500 or a total of $14,739.

FARM CREDIT BODY SOON TO LIQUIDATE

Only $26,000 of $31,000 Remains Outstanding—Loans Less Than Anticipated.

The Southeast Missouri Agricultural Credit Corporation, formed by the aid of St. Louisans last March to finance planters handicapped by a series of unfavorable seasons, will soon be able to liquidate, its president, W. R. Humphrey, announced yesterday.

Humphrey said that only $26,000 of the $31,000 which it advanced remains outstanding, and that most of this amount is expected to be repaid in the near future. At the beginning of this year, after seasons of flood and heavy rainfall, it was estimated that Southeast Missouri farms needed $1,000,000 capital.

The Credit Corporation was organized following a meeting called by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, which was informed of the situation by Julian Friant of Cape Girardeau. St. Louis business men agreed to subscribe $150,000 capital stock, provided Southeast Missourians would subscribe $50,000.

Its 317 loans, Friant said, amounted to $81,563 and gave financial assistance to about 500 families. In explaining why the amount lent was not larger, Friant wrote:

"We got started late, the first loan not being made until May 10. The river, as you will recall, remained at flood stage for a long time this spring. At Cape Girardeau the record shows that it stood against our levees for 77 days, and naturally the corporation was very careful not to get in a position where a great loss might be sustained.

"The chief reason, however, why more money was not loaned was because the organization of this bank and the knowledge that this money was available for crop loans opened up reservoirs of credi. from many other sources that were absolutely closed previous to that time. Merchants, banks, cotton companies and even some landlords, knowing they had something to fall back on in case they got into a pinch, changed their program and furnished large amounts of capital that would not have been available had the bank not been organized."

Auto Bombed in Williamson County

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Nov. 23.—Wheat futures ran up in the late trade and closed 2¾c higher following bullish report on Argentine rust by a Chicago observer. Corn closed lower.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was steady to 1c higher. Receipts were light and there was nothing very choice on the tables, but the demand was limited. There was some call for sound wheat of the lower grades, and offerings cleared pretty well. Sales were reported on a basis of about 6c above the Chicago December price. No. 2 red sold about 3c above. Hard wheat, following futures was steady to 2c higher, but the basis was unchanged. Offerings were a little freer than early in the week and the demand although limited was a little better, too. Sales of No. 2 hard were on a basis 1c above the Chicago December price, 1c to 2c and 1¼c above and No. 3 yellow corn. The mills were local mills and offerings cleared pretty well. Corn was 2c to 3c lower than Friday's late figures. There was a somewhat better demand at the revised quotations. Shippers, elevators and industries were the buyers. There were only two cars of old corn on sale. Oats were down ½c and 1c. The decline of perhaps, which were not heavy, cleared pretty well. Country buyers furnished the main outlet.

Cornmeal unchanged to ¼c higher wheat reached to fractionally 5c lower. Offerings in early period. Liverpool wheat closed unchanged to 1d lower. Winnipeg was down fractionally. Corn also declined fractionally.

Chicago wheat opened at $1.32. May wheat $1.32⅜. December corn 87½c, and May wheat 93⅜c.

Chicago shipments, which were 59,400 bushels, compared with 47,600 a week ago and 126,000 a year ago, included 30 cars local and 6 through. Receipts, which were 65,800 bushels, compared with 227,200 a week ago and 151,210 a year ago, included 46 cars local and 1 car through. Oats receipts, which were 44,000 bushels, compared with 19,800 a week ago and 128,000 a year ago, included 17 cars local and 3 through. Hay receipts were 12 cars local and 2 through.

LAST-MINUTE BUYING SENDS WHEAT PRICE UP SHARPLY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Report of crop damage in Argentina came just at the last today and threw the wheat market here into an uproar and Chicago cash interest cabled a bullish report from Rosario. Immediately the buying of Chicago wheat for future deliveries began on the part of a house with European connections, and the majority of traders here joined in, stimulated also because of reports that export interest in December wheat continued. There was mentioned as much as 16,000,000 bushels this week.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were greatly unsettled, 2c to 2½c above yesterday's finish, despite the fact that most of the time today the market was lower. Corn closed ⅝c to ¾c down, oats ⅛c to ⅝c advance and provisions varying from 2c decline to 5c advance.

Action of the Chicago wheat market during the final hour today was in sharp contrast with spasmodic earlier advance due to Argentine reports about black rust. Aside from Argentine developments, buyers appeared to be somewhat impressed also by evidence that preparations to avoid heavy declines of wheat here on December contracts and substantial progress will in advance of the first delivery day a week from Monday next.

Indications that a liberal curtailment of the United States wheat visible supply today would be shown Monday counted for much in the buying. Private estimates of the decrease ranged from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 bushels, but the actual figure will not be known until Monday.

On the other hand, world's available stocks of wheat were reported increased 54,000,000 bushels during October to about 140,000,000 bushels larger than a year ago. Something of an offset, though, was a comment that zero weather of late and possibly done damage to domestic winter wheat, chiefly the crop before this plant was dormant. It was remarked in this connection that serious damage of such nature was inflicted upon the 1909 crop east of the Mississippi during late autumn. Export demand for North American wheat today appeared substantial.

Enlarged receipts of corn, together with favorable weather for shelling, tended to pull the corn market down. Oats were responsive to the influence of wheat rather than of corn.

In the provision market, lard was easier, but meats advanced.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—An extra dividend of 25 cents was declared today on the common stock of the United States Playing Card Co., in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $1, both payable Jan. 1 to stock of record Dec. 21. Three months ago an extra dividend of 75 cents was declared.

With the declaration of a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents, payable Dec. 15 to stock of record Dec. 15, the common stock of Daniel Reeves, Inc., New York chain grocery store organization, was placed on a $1.50 annual basis, compared with the previous basis of $1.20 annually.

An extra dividend of 50 cents has been declared on the common stock of the Kimberly-Clark Corporation in addition to the regular quarterly payments of 62½ cents a share on the common and $1.50 a share on the preferred. All are payable Jan. 1 to stock of record Dec. 12.

Directors of the Pacific Portland Cement Co. have declared a special dividend of $2 on the common stock, payable Dec. 18, to stock of record Dec. 14. This is the first dividend declared since the merger with the Mission Cement Co.

Directors of the Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada, today declared the usual final dividend of 10 cents a share on the $5 par common stock and a quarterly of 7½ cents. The quarterly is payable Dec. 30 to stock of record Dec. 6, and the final Dec. 30, to stock of record Dec. 16. The quarterly dividend of 5¾ cents places the stock on a 7 per cent annual basis compared with 6 per cent previously paid.

WALL STREET SENTIMENT IMPROVING

Slowly Is Passing From the Depths of Pessimism to Borders of Optimism—Bearish News of Early Autumn Has Been Followed by Constructive Developments.

STOCK AND CURB EXCHANGES WERE CLOSED YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.

THE New York Stock and Curb exchanges and other leading security markets of the country were closed today in keeping with the reduced trading schedules necessitated by the vast accumulation of work coming from the recent heavy selling. The markets will resume full five-hour trading schedules on Monday, but will be closed next Friday and Saturday, as well as Thanksgiving day.

The St. Louis Stock Exchange was closed yesterday.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"Sentiment in the stock market slowly is passing from the depths of pessimism to the borders of optimism. The bearish news of early autumn has been followed by constructive developments. At no time in history has a major bear movement in the stock market emerged 98⅛ points as from panic stages with so strong a basis immediately available on which to work as now. Hoover's program to sustain the general level of prosperity, the decline in stocks to prices at which they yield more than bonds, 10 successive cuts in bankers' acceptance rates within a month, two successive reductions in the rediscount rate, a $3,217,000,000 drop in brokers' loans, and the advent of 3 per cent call money on the outside market constitute an agenda of helpful news that scarcely could have been expected on the very heels of a market collapse.

Bear Market Compared.

"Up to this week those who lost heavily in the recent debacle had been interested chiefly in comparing the 1929 rich man's panic with the other four major bear markets of the last quarter of a century. They observed that the 1929 drop was 48 per cent as against a 1903 decline of 35 per cent, a decline in the 1907 panic of 45 per cent, a 1916-1917 shrinkage of 40 per cent and a 1919-1920 fall of 44 per cent. They observed further that the comparison became even more odious when measured in points rather than percentages. The 1929 decline from the extreme high to low ran 183 points. While in percentages the previous bear markets were nearly as sharp, only 26 points were lost in the 1903 decline, 43 in 1907, 44 in 1916-1917 and 53 in 1919-1920. The 1929 decline further was concentrated within a nine weeks' period, whereas the former declines each ran from nine to 13 months.

Recoveries From Other Breaks.

"What interests the market now is whether the recovery will be rapid or slow and how long it will take stocks to get back to recent peaks. There are those, of course, who think that the market will never get back to its levels of early September, but for a half century the market has been running into these major bear movements and has been in time recovering all that was lost and more. The rich man's panic of 1903 brought a decline of nine months. In less than a year all that was lost had been recovered. The market then kept on going up for another year. The decline at the time of the 1907 panic ran for 11 months. In two years the market recovered all that was lost. The war decline of 1916-1917 ran for 13 months. Within a year and a half that loss was made up. The deflationary market of 1919-1920 brought a decline of 13 months. It took the market four years to get back what had been lost, but it then kept on going up for another four years without any serious setbacks.

Money Rates Turn Down.

"Whatever other handicaps to a rapid recovery in the stock market may develop, apparently tight money will not be a serious obstacle. Rates have turned definitely downward. The distorted relationship between brokers loans and market values at last has been corrected. This week's further sharp drop in brokers' loans and simultaneous rise in prices put the two curves in their most favorable recent position. Brokers' loans at 3 1/2 now stand comfortably below market values at 1744. What the market most needs now is real information on the trend in industry and light on the question whether 1930 will be a depression year or one of normally good business.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 23.—A fumbled and battered Jayhawker marched quietly on Mt. Oread tonight, unmindful of the victory screams of Missouri's Tiger, triumphant this afternoon over the ancient foe in the annual football classic.

Before 31,500 shivering spectators, Big Six record for attendance, the Bengal plucked the Jayhawk feathers to the tune of 7 to 0 in a thrilling and closely-contested battle. The crowd exceeded the record gathering of 1926, when more than 27,000 persons saw the teams in action here.

A lion's share of the honors in victory goes to Russell Dills, 145-pound Albany, Mo., speedster, who piloted Missouri to victory and scored all of his team's points. It was Dills, starting his first game at quarterback, who shot in behind Capt. Steward Lyman, Jayhawker left halfback, to half turn and take a well aimed pass from Capt. John Waldorf for a touchdown. A few seconds later, this same Dills skirted the Kansas left end behind excellent interference, to place the ball behind the goal line for the extra point and a 7-0 lead. Last year at Columbia, Dills

Cleveland Backfield Star Being Tackled After Making a Gain Against Soldan

Soldan won a close game from Cleveland to clinch the high school title, yesterday. Cleveland's great drive in the first half made that team seem the winner. Ralph Prinz, of Cleveland's backfield, is being tackled, in the above view.

By Harold Tuthill

A slim youth threw his 150 pounds against a punt and the ebb of defeat was turned into the tide of victory. That, rhetorically, describes the manner in which Vance Wright brought the championship of the City High School Football League to Soldan yesterday afternoon at the Public School Stadium, before a crowd of 10,000. The losing team was Cleveland and the score was 14 to 12.

Roosevelt became the runner-up to Soldan by sending Beaumont down to a 21 to 0 defeat in the preliminary to the final game of the afternoon's double-header.

Wright's feat was great only because Dave Cook, who had been repressed in three previous league games, tore off a 54-yard end run for a touchdown to bring Soldan within striking distance in the second half.

Cleveland Ahead at Half.

Soldan was on the losing end after the conclusion of the first half because Cleveland swept the "Cookies" off their feet with a dazzling passing attack that brought two touchdowns, but no extra points.

Before the Soldan backs could properly appreciate the strength of the Carondelet school's attack, Ralph Prinz had passed six yards to Mike Cianciola, who raced nine yards for a touchdown. This occurred within the first 5 minutes of the opening whistle. Bieber's pass to Jansen for the extra point was grounded.

Soldan took so long in recovering from this blow that Cleveland scored again on a pass. This time it was from Kenneth Bieber to Harold Vogt for 23 yards. Prinz's puny effort at place kicking for the extra point was low.

The Cleveland backs were not content with the two scores so they slashed their way through the line and passed over Soldan's heads to carry the ball down to the West Enders' 13-yard line.

Soldan's Awakening.

The play-by-play account reveals the awakening of the Soldan eleven.

Starting the second quarter, Prinz made four yards through the line. Bieber added three. Cianciola lost two yards. Bieber passed to Jansen, but Cleveland failed to make the yardage and lost the ball on downs. From this point until the remainder of the game the Cleveland attack was stopped with no appreciable gains.

Wright Blocks Cleveland Punt and Cook Falls on Ball for Score

Whatever Coach James F. Cook told his Soldan squad in the interim of the halves, it was enough to unleash suppressed desires for victory, since a rejuvenated eleven took the field at the third quarter, 10 of whom were so willing to sacrifice themselves that they provided Dave Cook, star quarterback, with splendid interference as he side-stepped and slipped his way through the Cleveland team, 54 yards for a touchdown. When Dave added the extra point by place-kicking, the score was Cleveland 12, Cook 7.

The spirit of Jimmy Cook in his charges made Vance Wright wait for his chance to block one of Prinz's punts. Cleveland protected Prinz ably enough until the final quarter.

Cleveland exhausted its vast resources of deceptive formations and had failed to move from its own 22-yard line. On the fourth down, the tackles spread out, Prinz moved back to kick and the guards looked up to be sure that nobody should come through.

Wright leaped through the breach between the tackles and guards, jumped up in front of Prinz's foot and the ball started to roll towards Cleveland's goal line. Cook pushed the ball over and fell on it for a touchdown. After he added the extra point the score read: Soldan 14, Cleveland 12.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 23.—A bumbled and battered Jayhawker marched quietly on Mt. Oread tonight, unmindful of the victory screams of Missouri's Tiger, triumphant this afternoon over the ancient foe in the annual football classic.

Before 31,500 shivering spectators, Big Six record for attendance, the Bengal plucked the Jayhawk feathers to the tune of 7 to 0 in a thrilling and closely-contested battle. The crowd exceeded the record gathering of 1925, when more than 27,000 persons saw the teams in action here.

A lion's share of the honors in victory goes to Russell Dills, 145-pound Albany, Mo., speedster, who piloted Missouri to victory and scored all of his team's points. It was Dills, starting his first game at quarterback, who shot in behind Capt. Steward Lyman, Jayhawker left halfback, to half turn and take a well aimed pass from Capt. John Waldorf for a touchdown. A few seconds later, this same Dills skirted the Kansas left end behind excellent interference, to place the ball behind the goal line for the extra point and a 7-0 lead. Last year at Columbia, Dills

Notre Dame Defeats Northwestern, 26-6, For Eighth Victory

By the Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 23.—Notre Dame smashed Northwestern's well-clawed Wildcats, 26 to 6 before 55,000 shivering spectators today to win their eighth consecutive game of the season and send them bounding along in the direction of a national championship.

The game was so lop-sided that it was hardly a contest. A stone wall Notre Dame line supported by three young men who certainly are not full-blooded Irishmen—Jumping Joe Savoldi, Frank Carideo and Merchmont Schwartz—simply ran the Northwestern players ragged.

This trio scored three touchdowns in the second period, and another in the third, tucking the game safely away for the Rockneless Ramblers, while Northwestern managed to score its single touchdown on a blunder in the fourth when the third string Notre Dame team was in there trying to emulate the achievements of the regulars.

The victory was costly to the

STANFORD WINS FROM BEARS BY 21 TO 6 SCORE

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 23.—Back of the early season form that stamped it as a potential champion, a smashing, crashing Stanford Cardinal eleven crushed the coast conference title hopes of California today and sent the previously unconquered Bears tumbling to a 21-6 defeat.

A crowd of 89,000 persons thrilled to the dazzling line and aerial attack of a rejuvenated Cardinal team that saw and seized its chances, snatched at every opportunity and fought on from opening kickoff to closing gun.

Three times Stanford cleats engraved their touchdown message in California turf. Only once was a harassed Bear able to reach the scoring ground of its traditional gridiron foe.

Thus, over the prostrate form of its oldest college rival, Stanford battered its way to its greatest triumph since 1892, a triumph that sealed the wounds of defeat inflicted by Southern California and Santa Clara in earlier games.

A Welcome Victory.

Never had a Cardinal victory been so welcome, so desired as the one today. And not since 1926 had a California eleven been so badly beaten as the one that tottered off the field as dusk settled over the great earthen home of Stanford's football clan.

Beaten on the line and outmaneuvered in the air, California saw its championship hopes fade before an attack that was superior in every way.

From the time Stanford kicked off until the last gun the Cardinals dominated the play.

One Stanford touchdown came from a California fumble but in the same fashion was California's lone score posted on the board. Each were made in the opening period. The Cardinals capitalized on a blocked kick in the second period and in the fourth quarter smashed over again after a 62-yard advance.

Des Jardins Shoots Four Goals and Flyers Lose to St. Paul, 4-3

By W. J. McGoogan

Vic Des Jardins, speedy forward of the St. Paul hockey team scored four goals which enabled his team to defeat the St. Louis Flyers 4 to 3 at the Winter Garden last night and gain an even break in the two-game series.

Des Jardins counted three times in the first session, slamming the puck home before the game was a minute old, scored his second at the 17-minute point and again when there remained but six seconds of the session left to play.

In the meantime the Flyers were able to score but once, due to a shot by Billy Hill from the St. Paul blue line.

Dennie Breen put the Flyers within one goal of a tie when he scored early in the second period, but Jamieson's men were unable to count again during the remainder of the 20 minutes. However, they did succeed with the aid of some good fortune in stopping Des Jardins so when the third period opened the score stood 3 to 2 in St. Paul's favor.

Jamieson sent four men down the ice at the start of the final period in an effort to knot the count but the Flyers were unable to score and Des Jardins seizing an opportune moment took the puck down and shot it past Kearney for his fourth marked of the contest.

This last score made it look

High Spots in Saturday's Games

CHICAGO, defeating the University of Washington, threw 35 passes and completed 18 of them for the amazing yardsgained total of 305.

Five Stanford players handled a lateral pass which led to the Cardinals' first touchdown over the California Golden Bears.

Carideo, Notre Dame quarter, ran 85 yards against Northwestern after intercepting a forward pass.

Dave Cook of Soldan scored his team's 14 points, which brought victory over Cleveland and the High School football title.

Oregon Aggies forward passed to two touchdowns and handed Detroit first defeat since early in the 1927 season.

Ohio Wesleyan made 19 first downs to West Point's seven but lost the decision, 19-6.

Follet, New York University back, ran 70 yards to touchdown which broke 7-7 tie with Rutgers.

Nagurski, big Minnesota fullback, closed his Big Ten career by scoring his team's two touchdowns against Wisconsin.

In the Michigan-Iowa scoreless tie, the Wolverines twice held fast after Iowa had worked the ball downfield to the four-yard line.

PURDUE CLOSES ITS MOST SUCCESSFUL SEASON, DEFEATING INDIANA, 32-0

HOOSIER ELEVEN UNABLE TO STOP NEW BIG TEN CHAMPIONS, LED BY WELCH, YUNEVICH AND HARMESON

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 23. — The rollicking "Riveteers" from Purdue drove a final rivet in their claim for the mythical national football championship here today by swamping their most traditional rival, Indiana, 32 to 0, before a shivering throng of 25,000 spectators at Indiana Memorial Stadium.

It was a glorious end to the most glorious campaign in Boilermaker gridiron history—a campaign that swept before it the Kansas Aggies, Michigan, Depauw, Chicago, Wisconsin, Mississippi, Iowa and Indiana, clinching the Big Ten title and retaining possession for Purdue of the old oaken bucket a trophy emblematic of football supremacy between the two Indiana schools.

An Easy Victory.

Purdue won as it pleased today. Indiana didn't have a chance. Outcharging, outguessing and outpassing their rivals, the Boilermakers pushed over touchdowns in every period and as the game ended they had the ball on Indiana's eight-yard line and going steadily toward another touchdown.

"Pest" Welch and Glen Harmeson, who ended their college football careers today, were the principal ramrods in the vicious and relentless attack today. They gained most of the ground and scored a total of 19 points between them.

Harmeson was the first to start the big parade over the Indiana goal line. A long pass hurled by Harmeson to White, took the ball to Indiana's eight-yard line. Yunevich and Welch pounded the Hoosier wall for six yards and Harmeson capped the drive by circling his right end for a touchdown. His kick for the extra point from placement sailed squarely between the uprights.

Alex Yunevich, the line-busting Lithuanian, took the whole Indiana eleven along with him shortly after the second period opened, splashing over from the eight-yard line for the second Boilermaker touchdown.

The Purdue team, studded as it was in the line by second string men, resembled a tornado in the third period and the Boilermakers crashed through for 13 more points to end any doubt left as to the outcome. Standing on Indiana's 49-yard line, Welch heaved a pretty pass to Harmeson. He nipped it on the Hoosier 20-yard stripe, side-stepped three Indiana tacklers, and galloped over. White's kick for placement for the extra point was wide.

"Red" Sleight, Purdue tackle, broke through the Indiana line shortly after the third period opened, blocked Balay's punt and recovered on Indiana's 25-yard line. Welch converted the break into another touchdown, immediately skirting through his left tackle for 25 yards to the Indiana goal. Harmeson's try for the extra point was good.

The final touchdown came shortly before the end of the one-sided tussle with Sleight again laying the ground. The big Purdue red head was off like a streak after a Purdue punt and when Garrison, Indiana sub quarterback, fumbled, he snatched the ball in midair on the goal line and fell over for the touchdown. Caraway's try for the extra point was wild.

Michigan and Iowa Play to Scoreless Tie.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 23. —Michigan and Iowa fought their hearts out here today by the final game of the season but both teams failed to score. The Hawkeyes, making possibly their last appearance in the Big Ten, had the advantage of offense. Michigan, with its back to the wall, had the advantage of defense but its line was porous to the rushes of Haggerty in midfield.

While Iowa rushed Michigan back to its goal line twice and had the ball in Michigan territory much of the time, the Wolverines gave the Hawkeyes a fright when two forward passes carried the ball well down into Hawkeye territory and Joe Gembis went back to try for a place kick. Referee Nichols waved the ball wide as it passed high over the goal post but other officials seemed to think differently. After a conference the referee's decision was upheld.

The game developed a new star for Iowa in Loris Haggerty. With Captain Willis Glassgow and the great Oran Pape failing in their specialty of circling ends and cutting off tackle, Haggerty battered the center of the Michigan line as it has not been battered since the Purdue tussle.

With its line rather consistently outplayed on offense, Michigan failed to get going. Maynard Morrison was responsible for most of the Michigan first downs. The Wolverines were dangerous only with the forward pass.

Minnesota Wins Over Wisconsin U., 13-12.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 23. —Plunging for two touchdowns, Bronko Nagurski ended his gridiron career for Minnesota today by leading his mates to a 13-to-12 victory over Wisconsin's fighting Badgers. It was the final game of the season for both teams.

One successful kick out of two attempts for point after touchdown executed by Arthur Pharmer, Gopher halfback, who also ended his Big Ten career, was Minnesota's slight margin of victory.

Wisconsin brought the crowd of 55,000 to its feet less than three minutes after the opening kickoff by combining a Gopher fumble and two passes into a touchdown. Despite the well below freezing temperature, Russell Rebholtz, Badger halfback, hurled both passes with deadly accuracy, Behr and Gantenbein receiving them.

Gantenbein carried the ball over for Wisconsin's first touchdown, but an attempt to score by forward pass spoiled Wisconsin's chance for a point after touchdown.

After Wisconsin's touchdown, Minnesota's defense held stubbornly and in the second period Nagurski, Pharmer and Reibeth opened an offensive that was good for 13 points.

In the third period the Badgers threatened to tie the score when Russell Rebholz, this time at the receiving end of the Wisconsin aerial game, caught a long pass over the goal line, but Lusby's attempted kick for the extra point after touchdown was unsuccessful.

A freak wind, blowing from the open end of the horseshoe stadium, led to this opportunity for Wisconsin by stopping the usually dependable punting by Pharmer. One of his kicks sent the ball far over the Wisconsin secondary defense, when the wind caught it and sent it back for an 11-yard loss.

Reibeth, Minnesota's sophomore half, fumbled the kickoff at the start of the game on his own 30-yard line and thus paved the way for the Badgers' first score.

SCORES 7 POINTS TO WIN FOR TEAM

NOTRE DAME BEATS NORTHWESTERN, 26-6, FOR EIGHTH VICTORY

undefeated Notre Dame eleven because Tim Moynihan, the big 190-pound center, sustained a broken right leg after the scoring orgy in the second period, and had to be carried off the field. The injury ends his football career at Notre Dame as next week's contest with the Army was to have been his last.

Notre Dame opened up with its shock troops, keeping the regulars, with the exception of Schwartz and Jumping Joe Savoldi on the sidelines and plowed through the Wildcats for five first downs before the game was hardly under way. There wasn't a scoring threat, however, until the second period opened, when Schwartz, Savoldi and Carideo got into action behind the first string Notre Dame line and thrilled the capacity crowd with some sensational galloping. Schwartz started the ball rolling when he tore off a 40-yard run that brought him to Northwestern's 40-yard line. Then, behind a solid, oblique wall of interference, Joe Savoldi galloped another 40 yards for a touchdown. Carideo added a point with a place kick.

Carideo Scores on 85-Yard Run.

A few seconds after this scoring venture, Schwartz passed to Brill for 25 yards, placing the ball on Northwestern's 10-yard line. Then Schwartz skipped around right end for another touchdown with Carideo adding the extra point. Carideo then decided to do some important scoring himself and speared a Northwestern pass while standing on his own 15-yard line and galloped away for 85 yards and Notre Dame's third touchdown. His kick for an extra point failed, however.

Notre Dame scored its final touchdown in the third period when Savoldi broke away on a 32-yard run that brought him to Northwestern's seven-yard line. A pass put the ball on the one-yard line and then jumping Joe jumped over center for the Notre Dame fourth touchdown. Carideo's kick was too low.

When virtually all of Notre Dame's regulars had been removed from the lineup, Northwestern's Wildcats still were clawing and scratching. In desperation they resorted to a flock of forward passes, but were unable to connect with one that would produce a touchdown. They managed to score, however, when a bad pass from Yarr, one of the Notre Dame centers, hit Shea, one of Notre Dame's numerous backfield players, and bounded across the goal line. Marvil, Northwestern tackle, pounced on the oval for a touchdown, but Bergherm's effort for the extra point failed. Northwestern came within an ace of scoring another touchdown a few seconds later when Baker dropped a perfect pass from Bergherm as he was racing over the five-yard stripe with no one near him.

The statistics show convincingly Notre Dame's superiority over Northwestern. The Hoosiers gained 220 yards to 211 for Northwestern, ripping off 277 from scrimmage to 132 for the Wildcats. Notre Dame completed two out of six passes for 46 yards, while Northwestern completed five out of 24 for 79 yards. Five Northwestern passes were intercepted to one for Notre Dame. Notre Dame made 11 first downs and Northwestern 9.

Lieb made numerous substitutions to save his regulars for the important Army game. The injury to Moynihan appears certain to handicap the team, although Nash and Yarr turned in creditable performances after the big center was removed from the field.

TIPPETT'S OFFER FOR USE OF COLISEUM FOR BOUT IS TURNED DOWN

Jack Tippett, boxing matchmaker, in quest of a site for bouts for which he has been granted a permit, for Dec. 17, has made an offer of $4000 for use of the Coliseum on eight nights, he reports, and the offer has been declined, for the present, at least.

The Coliseum is in receivership and the manager for the receiver stated, Tippett said, that the offer could not be accepted because of an arrangement for bouts under auspices of the Stockham Post of the American Legion, for which Tommy Sullivan is matchmaker.

Tippett holds his bouts under the charter of the Walter J. Hatsfeld Post, under which the recent Arena fights were held.

SUMNER AND VASHON PLAY THANKSGIVING FOR CITY NEGRO TITLE

The Sumner High School Bulldogs meet the Vashon High Wolverines Thanksgiving day at the Public High School Stadium to decide the Negro High School football championship of 1929. In 1927 Vashon High beat Sumner, 7 to 6 to win the title, while last year the Sumner team won, 8 to 0.

The silver loving cup will go to the team winning the title.

The Vashon Wolverines have not lost a game this season while the Sumner Bulldogs have dropped one game. The Vashon line averages 174 pounds; the Sumner line 161 pounds.

Sumner's second team was defeated by the Negro High School eleven at Webster yesterday. The score was 7 to 6.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 23.—A University of Illinois team at the peak of its power, crushed Ohio State here today, 27 to 0. It was Ohio's annual homecoming game and 65,000 spectators attended.

Both teams were fighting for honors of undisputed second place in the Western Conference, but the vaunted Ohio State defense that beat Michigan, Iowa and Ohio Wesleyan at the beginning of the season was helpless before the powerful mixed attack of the Illini.

Zuppke's men made 25 first downs on the trickiest spinner and reverse plays that Ohio State has faced all year, and worked a forward pass attack that was bewildering. Ohio State played with spirit but without confidence.

Illinois Scores Early.

Illinois opened the game by pushing to Ohio State's 25-yard line, where the Buckeyes held. Ohio State punted and Illini gave the ball to Art Schultz. He hit the line for 18 yards, added two more first downs, and Doug Mills plunged from the two-yard line for a touchdown in less than eight minutes of play. The place kick failed.

Zuppke had started a second-string backfield, but then he sent in his regulars, Peters, Yanuskus, Robinson and Timm. Illinois got the ball on a fumble by Caffee. Peters passed to Yanuskus and the quarter ended. Two minutes later, Olaf Robinson, fullback, shot six yards through center for the second score. Peters' dropkick was wild.

Ohio State never got closer to the Illini goal than the latter's 27-yard line. This came near the close of the half. Yanuskus stopped that drive when he intercepted a pass.

An Illinois pass, Peters to Yanuskus, who ran 30 yards, made the third touchdown of the first half.

Zuppke Substitutes Freely.

Zuppke substituted freely in the final half, but Ohio State could not control or advance the ball consistently. Mallin, Illinois end, scored a safety on Ohio when he blocked a McConnell punt and knocked it behind Ohio's goal, in the third quarter.

DES JARDINS SHOOTS 4 GOALS AND FLYERS LOSE TO ST. PAUL, 4-3

pretty blue for the Flyers for there were only a few minutes left to play. But Rennie, St. Paul defense man committed an offense for which he was assessed a minor penalty and Jim Searborn followed him off the ice a moment later for stalling. These successive penalties roused the ire of Borland and he protested to Referee Chambers in a manner which offended that officials dignity and Borland was sent to join his mates in the cooler only, where they were told to rest but two minutes. Mr. Borland was handed a five minute suspension.

This left St. Paul but two men to aid their goaltender in defense of the net and the Flyers, with all their men on the ice, seemed to have a glorious opportunity to knot the count.

Over-Anxiety.

The spectators thought so, too, and they yelled loud and long for a score. But during the bedlam Flyers were too anxious and while they whanged away with gusto, missed shot after shot until Goyer, within a few feet of Stark managed to steady himself and get the puck past the goalie for what proved to be the final score of the game.

For although two of St. Paul's men did get back on the ice, they were short one defender for the remainder of the contest. The Flyers swarmed around the mouth of their opponents' goal and banged away at every opportunity trying for the tying goal, but were unable to make it.

The attendance was announced officially as 2008.

Nobby Clark, St. Louis defense man, broke the middle finger of his left hand during a scrimmage and will be out of the game for about six weeks. Coach Jamieson said he would try to get another man to take Clark's place during his absence.

Des Jardins' three goals in the first period were made possible by sloppy work on the part of the St. Louis defense men and goaltender Kearney. The first shot was from the right wing and Kearney, if he saw the puck at all, misjudged it completely. The second came after Des Jardins had sent a high lob from center ice into the mouth of the Flyers' goal which Kearney stepped and handed to Clark, but Clark failed to clear it properly and Des Jardins, following the puck in closely rammed it home. The third came from a scrimmage from in front of the net and Coach Jamieson said he was largely to blame for it.

Billy Hill's score in the opening session was a long shot from the St. Paul blue line which caught Stark napping.

Goal Judge Oscar Blankenmeister failed to see Breen score his goal in the second session and Dennie had t ram it home again when Blankenmeister failed to raise his hand.

Chief Bolleau played his usual scrappy game which the fans like, but the Chief had a couple of great chances to score in the final period and failed to do so.

The Flyers scored a goal which didn't count for it was made after Chambers had rung his bell for a face off.

The management of the Winter Garden announced that Bobby McLean, champion speed skater would give exhibitions there on Wednesday and Thursday nights and would work out every day until then.

Duluth calls here for games Wednesday and Thursday nights. The Hornets are due to arrive in St. Louis tomorrow and will have an hour a day to workout at the Winter Garden. The other hour each day will be utilized by the Flyers.

Last season Duluth finished one place ahead of the Flyers in the final standing, pulling up in fifth place, while St. Louis was sixth and last.

Missouri Scores on Pass to Beat Kansas

returned a kick of 100 yards for a touchdown against Kansas.

Missouri received the opening kickoff, after Capt. Waldorf had won the toss and elected to defend the north goal, with the wind behind the Tigers. An exchange of punts found Missouri in possession of the ball on their own 47-yard line. Lee Derry, Poplar Bluff sophomore, failed to gain on the first play but on the next try tucked the oval under his arm and sprinted 23 yards to the Kansas 20-yard line, where George Atheson, Jayhawker guard, nailed him from behind. Dills, Waldorf and Derry ran the ball for a gain of four yards and then the Tiger captain dropped back and shot a beautiful pass to the speeding Dills, who was over the goal line in a flash.

The Jayhawkers came back with a superb drive, with Capt. Lyman and Schmidt lugging the ball, and a 15-yard penalty on Ray Smith, Tiger center gave Kansas the ball on the Tiger 12-yard stripe.

Then Hubert Campbell, Odessa, Mo., end, broke through on two plays to spill Lyman and Fisher for substantial losses and Missouri took the ball on a short punt from Lyman. The second period found play fairly even, with a 35-yard return of a punt by Dills a bright spot in the play. Neither team threatened to score, however.

At the start of second half Art Lawrence, premier Kansas passer, who gave the Tigers chills at Columbia last year, entered and game and shot a 20-yard pass to Ramsey, Jayhawker end, who was smeared in midfield. Two plays backed the Jayhawker up 10 yards and then Lawrence fumbled as he prepared to punt and the ball rolled back of him to his 26-yard line where Campbell snared it. The Jayhawkers stiffened, and after making a first down on the eight-yard line, the Tigers were held for downs, Schepflin and Atkeson stopping Waldorf on the last play.

Two Kansas Bids.

Kansas made two genuine bids for scores in the final period, but the stout Missouri forwards outcharged the Jayhawker line and on both occasions turned back the Crimson and Blue threat. Early in the period a pass, Lawrence to Lyman, netted 10 yards. Then Lawrence passed to Smay for four yards and to Fisher for a first down on the Tiger 11-yard line. Two line plays gained two yards, a pass failed and Derry knocked down the last aerial offering by Lawrence. A penalty for roughing cost the Tigers 15 yards late in the game and a short kick by Campbell gave Kansas the ball on the Tiger 27-yard marker. A pass, Lawrence to Fisher, netted 12 yards and a first down on the Missouri 15-yard line, but there the Tigers braced again and a short pass from Lawrence to Lyman failed to make the necessary yardage.

Kansas played without Jim Bausch, 200-pound Big Six star, while Missouri had Waldorf for most of the game, but victory came to Coach Gwinn Henry's charges through the line-puncturing ability of Dills and Derry and the superior play of the Tiger forward wall, which out-charged the Jayhawkers. Campbell, at end for Missouri played a great game, while Kilgroe, Hudgens and Smith were outstanding. Lawrence, Lyman and Fisher led the Kansas attack and Atkeson and Schepflin played well in the line.

Alumni of both schools thronged Lawrence for the big game, coming by rail, automobile and air. Several thousand Columbia rooters and the school band and pep clubs were on hand and the big concrete horseshoe with a seating capacity of more than 24,000 was nearly filled.

TULSA WINS OVER MINNEAPOLIS, 1-0, IN OVERTIME PERIOD

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 23. — Burr Williams' goal two minutes and 10 seconds after the start of the overtime period, enabled the Oilers to defeat Minneapolis 1 to 0 at hockey here tonight, sweeping the two-game series with the powerful Miller club and climbing into the undisputed lead in the American Hockey Association as St. Louis dropped a thrilling encounter to St. Paul 4 to 3.

The brilliant Tulsa defenseman, a home product, scored unassisted hitting the rebounding puck into the Minneapolis cage past goalie Malsed, who had stopped a first shot. The two sextets had battled viciously through the first 60 minutes each lacking the offensive power it took to tally but making up for this in pugnaciousness, four fistic frays occurring during the first two periods.

FOLLET RUNS 70 YARDS TO SCORE FOR NEW YORK IN WIN OVER RUTGERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Rutgers, most ancient rival of New York University, bobbed up today with a dogged eleven that fought the Violets on even terms for more than three periods, menaced continually with brilliant forward passes, and went down to desperate 20 to 7 defeat only in the final minutes of play.

Two sparkling dashes, the first by the Negro backfield ace, Dave Myers, for 44 yards and a touchdown, and the second by Beryl Follet, blonde speedster, for 70 yards and the final score, broke a 7-7 deadlock in the fourth quarter.

Rutgers outgained the Violets in the twenty-sixth game of a series that opened in 1892, counting 13 first downs to 11 for New York University with Grossman pegging brilliantly to his ends and backs. The Scarlet gained 136 yards on passes alone. Rutgers has won 12 games with one tie, in the 26 meetings with New York U.

SOUTH CAROLINA FIGHTS HARD BUT LOSES TO FLORIDA

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 23. — Flashing surprising resistance in the earlier stages of the game, the South Carolina Gamecocks threw a real scare into the ranks of the Florida Alligators here this afternoon, only to succumb finally to a decisive defeat by the score of 20 to 7.

At half time the score stood 7—7, but a considerable portion of the first period the Gamecocks combatted the 'Gator second stringers. It took the varsity to flatten the stubborn birds but that outfit, once in the game, manifested a superiority that could not be denied.

Cawthon scored a brace of the Gator touchdowns, one in the first period and a second in the fourth. Bethea counted the other Gator touchdown in the third. All were on telling thrusts on the flexible gamecock line. A pass, Rhame to Stoddard, resulted in the Gamecock touchdown in the second period.

CHICAGO BEATS HUSKIES, 26-6, WITH FORWARD PASS ATTACK

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Amos Alonzo Stagg, the 67-year-old wizard of Chicago football, tossed aside the line-smashing offense for which Maroon teams have been famous, and sent out a host of forward passers who heaved Chicago to a 26-to-6 triumph over the Washington huskies today as 25,000 persons watched the game.

The victory was the most sensational for Chicago on its own field in many years, and the brilliant passing offense bewildered not only the Huskies, but even Maroon partisans. The triumph also gave Chicago's second in intersectional competition, Princeton previously having fallen before the Maroons in the East.

So varied was the Chicago scoring game that the Huskies from the Pacific Coast could not figure out where to watch and after the early part of the open period, charged back and forth in desperate helplessness. Ben Wattenberg, not even rated as a regular until last Saturday, sprayed passes all over the field in the first two periods, with Van Nice, Knudson, Paul Stagg, Capt. Kelly and Jersild all snagging them for long gains. After Coach Stagg pulled Wattenberg in the second period, Van Nice, Temple, Bluhm, Heywood and Burgess took turns throwing the ball to teammates for more gains.

Washington came all the way from the coast to see more forward balls in the air than they have seen in all of their previous games together. Chicago attempted 35 passes, and completed 18 for the amazing total of 295 yards. Fourteen fell harmless and three were intercepted.

STANFORD WINS FROM BEARS BY 21-6 SCORE

game" was the turning point in the season career of California's game little coach, "Nibs" Price. With its ending crashed the hopes of the Bear leader for the first conference title under his regime. In the four years his teams have met the Warner-coacher products Price has three times come out second best. Last year his team was tied by Stanford in a closing rally that brought the score to a 13-13 total.

Stanford's victory today gave five teams a claim to the championship. As the situation now stands, California, Southern California, Stanford, Oregon and Washington each has a conference defeat charged to it. Southern California has yet to meet Washington State in the final conference game with indications pointing to a win for the first-named eleven.

Plenty of Power.

The Cards overpowered their rivals in the second period, scoring once and missing another touchdown by a three-yard margin. Blocked California kicks were responsible in each case.

In the second half the Cardinals pounded a battered Bear from one end of the field to the other. A penalty for roughing sent Coach Warner's warriors back half the distance to their goal line, a matter of 27 yards, but a crushing offensive won back all the yardage and two more to spare.

Just after the last quarter got under way, Stanford pushed over its third touchdown. Moffatt dashed eight yards to score and kicked the try for point from placement.

The Bears were on the defensive for most of the remainder time.

Temple Eleven Wins Over Drake

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23. — Temple University won a hard-fought football game from Drake University on Temple Stadium today, 16 to 14.

Temple scored first with a placement field goal, followed closely by a touchdown. Drake showed great power in the last period and scored two touchdowns, but could not overcome the Philadelphia team which managed to put over another touchdown.

Fifteen thousand chilled spectators saw the battle. Snow fell at times.

A placement goal from the 17-yard line by Bonner in the first period and Schultz's touchdowns in the first and final periods, gave Coach Heinie Miller's team its first intersectional conquest.

Drake, outplayed in the first half, put over two touchdowns in the final quarter, when Chris Vlasakeles and Dick Neubert smashed their way over the final stripe. Capt. Jack Barnes added the points with perfect placement kicks.

Temple's additional point was the result of Drake being offside, when Shultz made his second score.

HARVARD TRIUMPHS OVER YALE, 10-6, FOR SECOND SUCCESSIVE TIME

CRIMSON MARCHES 82-YARDS FOR TOUCHDOWN; ELI SCORES ON FORWARD PASS BY BOOTH

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 23—With one of the most dramatic strokes of the football season, Harvard converted the return to the game of the celebrated Albie Booth to its own advantage today, and beat Yale 10 to 6, for the second year in succession on a half-frozen battleground before a roaring crowd of 58,000 spectators.

Yale sent her little Boy in Blue into the game early in the second period to lead what looked like a triumphant drive but two swift breaks," a blocked kick by Booth each time, enabled Harvard to counter-attack and win the game with a brace of smashing, slashing scoring drives.

Both's Drop-Kick Blocked.

The Elis were hammering toward the Crimson goal early in the second quarter when little Albie came out to the field to shed his heavy wraps and attempt to drop-kick a field goal from the 25-yard line. The ball scarcely had left his toe before it was blocked by the surging Crimson wall, bounding off the chest of the alert Jim Douglas, Harvard end, and recovered on the 41-yard line.

From there, the Crimson marched 82 yards to a touchdown, covered by Fullback Wally Harper after a brilliant advance featured by a lateral pass, Devens to Mays, which the latter converted into a Shortly after the kickoff, Booth, punting from near his own goal, again was smothered. Again Douglas, in the ubiquitous Crimson end, was on top of the mighty Atom to block and recover the ball on Yale's 17-yard line. This time, the blue braced and prevented a touchdown but Barry Wood, the sophomore Harvard quarterback, calmly drop-kicked the pigskin between the uprights from the 15-yard line at a difficult angle.

Booth Pass Nets Score.

Fighting desperately to check the Crimson rush, with less than 5 minutes to play, before the end of the half, Yale's big captain, Gripper" Greene, broke through to block Wood's punt, giving Yale the ball on Harvard's 18-yard line. Two passes thrown by Booth failed but on the third, after a five-yard penalty, the Eli ace tossed to "Hoot" Gibbs who took the ball on the 15-yard line and fought his way across the goal line for Yale's only score. Booth's drop-kick was not blocked but it went wide of the uprights.

Thus, all the scoring, most of the thrills and drama of this forty-minute battle between the Crimson and the Blue, was confined to a second period in which Yale's greatest weapon was turned against it.

Booth, whose inspiration to the Eli attack had all year been in evidence the moment he stepped on the field, had the strange experience of seeing his appearance signalize the victorious Crimson drive. Until Booth entered the game, Yale held what little edge was to be had in a strictly defensive battle. From the moment he came in, Harvard, instead of Yale, seemed inspired.

A Clean-cut Triumph.

It was a clean-cut triumph for the Crimson over its ancient foe, with the Harvard sophomore field general, Barry Wood, outshining his more famous rival, Booth, and the Crimson forwards more than holding their own against the great Blue line. Harvard held tenaciously, with magnificent fighting spirit, to its slim lead throughout the second half. At least three times Yale threatened to put over the touchdown that would give the Elis the lead, penetrating once to the Crimson 18-yard line a sustained drive of 60 yards, but these Harvard forwards were not to be battered down.

Led by Ben Ticknor, who played a brilliant game at center, and backed by two sensational ends in Jim Douglas and Dick O'Connell, the Harvard line displayed aggressiveness, courage and stamina sufficient to meet every emergency. In the final analysis, it was distinctly a triumph for this Crimson line, alert to seize every advantage.

Booth, who played throughout the second and third periods, made his last desperate effort to rally the Blue late in the third quarter, but it was through the air, rather than his customary whirling, zigzag fashion that Booth engineered the last big Eli threat.

Yale March Halted.

On a series of well-executed forwards, tossed by Taylor as well as Booth, Yale swept from around its own 20-yard mark to Harvard's 18-yard line. Booth darted off tackle for a yard, but was thrown for a loss on the next play. Twice he tried the ends, but he was smothered each time, and Harvard, to an accompanying roar from its partisans, took the ball on downs.

Twice later Yale got inside Harvard's 35-yard line, but lacked the punch to penetrate the scrappy Harvard defense.

Booth was taken out early in the final quarter, replaced by Don McLennan, but there was not much menace left in the Eli attack.

Each Make Nine First Downs.

Although "breaks" played a conspicuous part in the fray, played on a half-frozen gridiron with snow scraped off and banked at either end of the field, Harvard gave a convincing exhibition of both offense and defense. The Elis were favorites but their attack lacked the finishing punch, especially with Booth unable to get away. The nearest Albie came to being shaken loose was at the outset of the third quarter when he took Ticknor's kick-off, fumbled the ball at first, dodged hither and yon, and finally dashed for the side lines. He was almost clear after covering 25 yards, but was collared from behind and thrown to the ground. On no other occasion was Albie able to travel more than six or seven yards before being tackled, so closely did the Crimson defense watch him.

There was not much to choose between the teams, as far as the figures showed. Each registered nine first downs. The Elis held a slight margin at rushing and an edge in the forward passing, but it was unproductive. Yale completed six out of 11 passes for gains of 60 yards. Harvard completed two forwards out of five for gains of only 11 yards, but the Crimson laterals were a decisive factor.

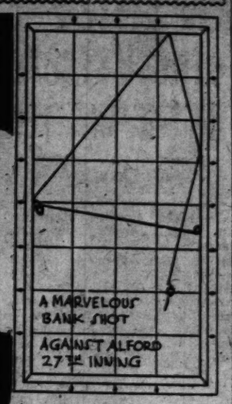
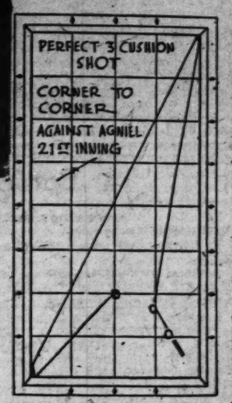
Gene Deardorff and Some of the Billiard Shots That Gave Him a Tie for First in Southern Tourney





ST. LOUISAN HAS CHANCE FOR HIGH BILLIARD HONOR

Gene Deardorff, St. Louis billiard player, who ignored the temptation of money prizes and obtained special permission to compete in the Southern sectional three-cushion billiard tournament as an amateur, has a chance to gain the honor of being the first amateur ever to break into the play for the world championship.

Deardorff and Tiff Denton, Kansas City professional and a former world titleholder, finished in a tie at the end of the round robin of five games each in play in the sectional event during the past week at Peterson's parlor. Each won four games and lost one, Denton being the only player to defeat Deardorff, and that in the final game of the meet.

The play was to determine the man to compete with winners in three other sectional tournaments and four seeded players in New York in January for the championship, now held by Johnny Layton.

Victories over Earl Agniel, Dr. L. P. Macklin, Ed Zomzow and Charles Alford of Independence, Kan., gave Deardorff his high standing. And in winning over Agniel, who turned professional for this tourney, Deardorff set a world amateur record by scoring the required 50 points in 40 innings. The old record was 50 points in 42 innings.

Deardorff, who has the experience of playing through to the city championship, is up against a stiff proposition in his playoff with Denton at 100 points in two blocks of 50 each next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings at Peterson's. The long match is believed to give the professional an advantage.

Soldan Beats Cleveland, Wins High School Title

Barnes went through center for the score. Gorman Broe's place kick for the extra point was blocked.

Roosevelt did not fare so well in the second quarter, failing to score in this period, but after the half, Broe passed to Ken Koerner from the Beaumont 20-yard line for a touchdown. Again Broe missed the place kick.

Bill Hundhausen ran around right end from the Beaumont 37-yard line for a touchdown and later caught a 12-yard pass from Broe to lay the ball on the losers' 25-yard line. On the third down, Broe skirted left end for a touchdown. The only extra point of this game was made when Broe passed to Jerry Eynatten behind the goal line. This was Eynatten's second successful catch in two weeks.

The final touchdown was made on a pass from Broe to Koerner, who fell over the final line making the score 31.

The differences between the Roosevelt and Beaumont teams is illustrated in the number of first downs made by the two. Roosevelt had 13 as compared to Beaumont's one. Neither team was penalized during the game.

The final standings of the schools:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Soldan	4	0	1.000
Roosevelt	3	1	.750
Cleveland	2	2	.500
Central	1	3	.250
Beaumont	0	4	.000

Notes of the Games.

The size of the crowd climaxed a rather successful attendance for the high schools. Unofficially about 37,000 persons saw the five double-headers.

For the last two games there has been a box containing 12 seats in front of the west stands. The seats were not used until several hundred youngsters clambered down from the stands onto the field after the end of the second game yesterday.

The two heroes of the Soldan game, Vance Wright and Dave Cook ended their local football careers in a blaze of glory. After Cook finishes his captaincy of basketball and track he will prepare to enter the University of Illinois next fall. Wright has not yet decided where he will go.

Although Wright seized the star's spotlight he was out-played generally by Joe "Red" Mosar of Cleveland.

In addition to the peculiar triple quarterback formation Cleveland used, there was a split fine play and an unbalanced box formation, none of which was as successful as Bieber's accurate passes.

DETROIT BEATEN AFTER TAKING 22 STRAIGHT GAMES

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Nov. 23.—The Oregon Aggies swept over a frozen gridiron here today and administered a 14 to 7 defeat to the University of Detroit. It was the first defeat that team had suffered since early in 1927, after 22 victories and one tie.

With the ground hardened by frost both teams resorted to numerous punts and forward passes. All the touchdowns were scored by the aerial route. Oregon and Detroit each completed passes close enough for the man at the receiving end to cross the line and in the third quarter Oregon intercepted a Detroit pass and brought in the deciding score.

The Aggies executed a triple pass in the first period, Buerk to Hughes to Sherwood, which put the ball on Detroit's 30-yard line. The play then see-sawed about center field. Oregon failed to gain at the line and Detroit then started a march down the field. Brazil made 12 yards off tackle, added five more and Storen carried the ball to a first down on the Aggies' 30-yard line. A series of short smashes by Storen, Berg and Brazil netted two first downs and Brazil passed to Young who made a touchdown. Vachon kicked the extra point.

The Aggies even the count in the second period. A Detroit punt brought the ball to the Aggies' 45-yard stripe. Hughes and Buerk with two line smashes and a pass brought it to first down on Detroit's 20-yard line. Metten, a sub, made it first down on Detroit's 12-yard line. Buerk then passed to Sherwood for a touchdown. Thompson was sent in and kicked the extra point.

Detroit failed to gain consistently either by passes or line plays in the third period. The Aggies had better luck with their passes. Near the end of the period McKaiip, Aggie left end, snatched a pass which Storen had intended for Brazil and plunged over for a touchdown. Hughes' attempt at goal failed, but Detroit was ruled offside on the play for the extra point and the point was awarded to the Aggies.

Sick Billikens To Rejoin Squad

The Billiken football squad ended a week of intensive training yesterday afternoon with an hour's signal drill, Coach Jewel Browning, freshman coach was in charge of the varsity squad in the absence of Coaches Heartley Anderson, Chili Walsh and Christie Flanagan who were in Chicago for the Notre Dame-Northwestern football game.

The six members of the squad who are on the hospital list with severe colds will join the squad again tomorrow. They will take no part in any heavy work but will try to get back in shape for the Washington game next Thursday. The three regulars and three first team substitutes who have missed the majority of practice sessions this week are Capt. Joe Lintzenich, regular fullback, Titus Cornell and Firpo Joseph the regular tackles, Fred Fox and Rufus Schultz, substitute tackles and Maróne Antoon, husky reserve guard.

With the return of the regulars to the squad Coach Anderson will have at least two men at every position on the team for the Washington U. Bears.

Coach Anderson intends to have his boys taper off during the next three days and he will take no chance of an eleventh hour injury that might break up his starting lineup.

Reports on the tickets from both the St. Louis and Washington University box offices state that the tickets are going fast.

MEXICO (MO.) ELEVEN ENDS SEASON WITHOUT AN INCOMPLETE PASS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO, Mo., Nov. 23.—The Mexico High School Bulldogs have completed their seven-game schedule without an incomplete forward pass all season. Coach Eldon Reed's eleven, runner-up in the Central Missouri Little Ten Conference, tossed successful passes to win in two games and completed five in the Columbia game, the only defeat of the season. In the Columbia game one heave was intercepted.

The team won from Fulton, Louisiana and Shelbina, and played a scoreless tie with Moberly without using a pass.

Capt. Billy Rodenbaugh tossed all the forward passes of the year into the arms of Joe Place, his backfield mate, except one which went to Glenn Kellerhals.

EAST SIDE MERCHANTS TO PLAY SCOTT FIELD

Jack Morgan's East St. Louis Merchants will face the Scott Field Aviators in an independent football game this afternoon at Parsons Field on the East Side for the benefit of the East St. Louis Community Chest Fund.

Morgan has many of the former football stars of East St. Louis and Belleville signed to play against the Aviators and the game is scheduled to start at 2:30 o'clock.

ST. LOUIS TEAM PLACES THIRD IN MID-WEST EVENT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 23.—Pop Stein's Sixth Floor team was high for the six teams from St. Louis and East St. Louis rolling in the annual Middle-West Tournament here tonight on the late squad. The team rolled 2725 which places it in third place. The Old American Shingle team of Kansas City is leading with 2934 the Fords of Enid, Okla., are second with 2888 and then comes Pop Stein's with a big drop from the two leaders, Pop Stein led his team with games of 221, 181 and 182 for a total of 535. L. Watkins was second with 532. The other St. Louis and East St. Louis teams bowled disappointing scores. Chicago, Milwaukee, Peoria and other cities east of the Mississippi River will in all probability be eliminated from competition in future Middle-West Tournaments at the meeting of the Association to be held at the Muehlebach Hotel tomorrow.

Only cities bordering on the Mississippi who have supported the Middle West in the past will be allowed to bowl, such cities as East St. Louis, Ill., St. Paul and Minneapolis being included.

Chicago has only three teams entered and Milwaukee one. Chicago, Milwaukee and Peoria do not seem to care what action the delegates take.

If the new rule is adopted the Association no doubt will favor sending the tournament to Omaha or Des Moines and the re-election of all the present officers except those east of the Mississippi.

Rolla Miners Win Over Redmen, 28-0

MUSKOGEE, Ok., Nov. 23.—The Rolla (Mo.) School of Mines football team crushed the Northeastern State Teachers College eleven of Tahlequah here today, 28 to 0, with a sweeping attack of straight football interspersed with bits of the overhead game at opportune moments.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Miners recovered a Redman fumble on their 26-yard line and smashed their way to the Northeastern 12-yard line, where Schofield passed over the goal line to Malick and Kelly added the extra point with a lateral pass. A few minutes later the passing combination worked again after the Miners had recovered a fumbled kickoff. Thornton, substituting for Hyland, tossed 26 yards to Malick and Hyland kicked the extra point.

Malick scored the third touchdown on a pass from Hassler, after the Miners had marched almost the length of the field and Schofield ran around left end for the fourth touchdown, in the last period.

The lineup:

MINERS.	Position.	NORTHEASTERN.
Lundgren	L. E.	Clark
Parker	L. T.	Kambeitz

DUQUESNE DEFEATS HASKELL IN FINAL QUARTER, 7 TO 6

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 23.—A last-period aerial onslaught gave Duquesne University a 7 to 6 victory over the Haskell Indians here today. Outplayed by the Lawrence (Kan.) eleven, 12 first downs to five, the undefeated Dukes scored late in the final quarter on a pass from Capt. Donnelli to Fratt, right end, a 47-yard gain. Donnelli's placement provided the margin of victory.

The Indians had scored early in the second quarter in a drive from the Haskell 24-yard line, where the Indians had gained the ball on downs late in the opening period. With Johnson carrying the ball most of the time through tackle, guard and center, the Indians backed the Dukes to the Leyden men's one-yard line and Johnson plunged center for a touchdown.

NEBRASKA WINS, 10 TO 6, OVER KANSAS AGGIES; RETAINS LEAD

MANHATTAN, Kan., Nov. 23.—Sweeping through the Kansas Aggies for 8 points in the first period, the Nebraska Cornhuskers piled up enough of a margin to withstand a last-half Aggie threat and win the annual football game today, 10 to 6. The victory left the Nebraskans still in the lead for the Big Six title race and needing only a victory over Iowa State Thanksgiving day to assure their second consecutive championship.

Forward passes led to the Aggie touchdown in the third period and another seemed imminent as the teams changed ends of the field at the close of the third period but in the final quarter all the Aggies' strategy could not avail and the Cornhuskers were holding the upper hand when the game ended.

One touchdown and two safeties, the last one given intentionally by the Aggies in a last desperate effort to maintain possession of the ball for a final offensive, constituted the Nebraska scoring.

Nebraska won without the aid of Clair Sloan, its backfield ace, who was left at home with injuries. In his place was "Red" Young, who scored the touchdown.

All Aggie regulars were in shape and a good share of them got into the game before Coach "Fo" McMillin played his last card—and lost.

The lineups:

KANSAS AGGIES	Position.	NEBRASKA.
Wiesman	L. E.	Moran
Freeman	L. T.	Richards
Tackwell	L. G.	Jeffries

Army Defeats Ohio Wesleyan

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 23.—Army's football team said goodbye to the home folk today by defeating Ohio Wesleyan, 19 to 6, in a game in which the visitors from Delaware, O., were in the game from first to last.

It was the last appearance of Capt. Keener Cagle, Herts Murrel, Buster Perry and Herb Gibner at Michie Stadium and two of the quartet said their farewells with touchdowns. Cagle and Murrel counting one each. Perry played a great defensive game and Gibner was a star of the starting team which did so well that Coach Biff Jones let it play half the game.

Army has two games left to play but one is in New York and the other at Palo Alto, Cal.

If they pull off in football on first downs Ohio Wesleyan would have won handily. The latters ran up a total of 19 to 7 for the Army, almost the same score of points by which Army won.

Lineup:

ARMY.	Position.	OHIO WESLEYAN.
Carlmark	L. E.	Siegenthaler
Prince	L. T.	Henderson
Humber	L. G.	Nieberg
Miller	C.	Blair

Cagle	L. H.	M. Franz
Murrel	F. B.	McKinley

Score by periods:

Army	0	0	13	6	—19
Ohio Wesleyan	0	0	0	6	— 6

Army scoring: Touchdowns—Cagle (substitute for Gibner), Murrel (substitute for Golden), Humbie (substitute for Saurez). Points after touchdowns—Glattly (substitute for Stuart) (placement), Ohio Wesleyan scoring: Touchdown—Wertz. Referee—W. T. Halloran, Providence. Umpire—W. H. Elcock, Dartmouth. Linesman—A. C. Tyler, Princeton. Field Judge—S. S. Scott, Michigan.

COMPLEX SYSTEM OF RATING LETS PURDUE KEEP BIG TEN TITLE

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 23.—The system of rating football teams, evolved by Prof. Frank G. Dickinson of the University of Illinois, agrees that Purdue, victorious over its five Big Ten opponents, is champion of the Western Conference.

The system, which gives more credit for defeating first division teams, than for victory over second division elevens, places Northwestern second, Illinois and Minnesota tied for third, Iowa fourth, Ohio State fifth, Indiana and Michigan tied for the next position and Wisconsin and Chicago tied at the tail end of the list.

The standing, according to Dickinson's system:

Team.	Points.
Purdue	20.00
Northwestern	19.00
Illinois	18.00
Minnesota	18.00
Iowa	17.50
Ohio State	16.25
Michigan	15.00
Indiana	15.00
Wisconsin	12.00
Chicago	12.00

Temple Eleven Wins Over Drake

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—Temple University won a hard-fought football game from Drake University on Temple Stadium today, 16 to 14.

Temple scored first with a placement field goal, followed closely by a touchdown. Drake showed great power in the last period and scored two touchdowns, but could not overcome the Philadelphia team which managed to put over another touchdown.

Fifteen thousand chilled spectators saw the battle. Snow fell at times.

A placement goal from the 18-yard line by Bonner in the first period and Schultz's touchdowns in the first and final periods, gave Coach Heinie Miller's team its first intersectional conquest.

Drake, outplayed in the first half, put over two touchdowns in the final quarter, when Chris Theodoseoten and Dick Nesbitt pushed their way over the final stripe. Capt. Jack Barnes added two points with perfect placement kicks.

Temple's additional point was the result of Drake being offside when Schultz made his second score.

E. St. Louis Beats Granite City, 37-0

East St. Louis High School overwhelmed Granite City High, 37-0, in their football game at Granite City yesterday afternoon.

The victory means that East St. Louis and Belleville will go into their Thanksgiving day game at East St. Louis each with a record of five victories and no defeats in the Southwestern Illinois High School Conference and with the title hinging on the result of their meeting.

East St. Louis was unable to score in the opening period against Granite City but counted two touchdowns in the second, one in the third and three in the fourth quarter.

Cassidy, quarterback, made the first two touchdowns, the opener on a 50-yard end run and the second on a 30-yard end run.

Martin, halfback, went over in the third period, and in the fourth quarter Beasley, Warfield and Nieman made touchdowns. Kirchoff kicked the only point after touchdown.

Wallgren Will Play Fessenden For 18.2 Honors

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The next challenge match for the national amateur 18.2 balkline championship will be played in Milwaukee, it has been announced by G. Raymond Collins, president of the National Billiard Association of America. The match will be played in three 300-point blocks between W. C. Wallgren of Everett, Washington, the defending champion, and R. V. Fessenden of Madison, Wis., challenger, in the Plankinton Arcade, Nov. 25, 26 and 27.

Wallgren won the championship by defeating Percy Collins of Chicago in a sensational match in Everett last month. The next player eligible to challenge is Alex Emslie of Milwaukee.

Milwaukee also will be the scene of the national amateur three-cushion championship match between Perry Dickens and Max Shimon, both of Milwaukee, at the Plankinton Arcade, Dec. 2, 3 and 4. Dickens gained the title through the disqualification of Charles E. Jordan, recent winner of the Western sectional professional three-cushion tourney. Jordan will compete in the world three-cushion tourney in January.

Fairview Girls Win Warrenton Basketball Meet

By the Associated Press.

WARRENTON, Mo., Nov. 23.—The annual Central Wesleyan college basketball tournament for high schools was won by the Fairview High School girls, St. Louis County's only representative and by the Warrenton boys. Fairview defeated the Pacific, Mo., High School by the score of 13 to 12 in an overtime period. Warrenton defeated Auxvasse, Mo., High School by a 31 to 12 score.

This was the fourth consecutive time that Warrenton has won this tournament. By winning, Warrenton and Auxvasse are entitled to represent this section of the State at the District Tournament held at Kirksville, Mo., in December.

LEHIGH WINS FROM LAFAYETTE TO END TEN-YEAR FAMINE

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 23.—Lehigh ended a 10-year losing streak against Lafayette today by gaining a 13 to 12 victory. A placement kick for extra point by Davidowitz in the first period proved the Brown's margin of triumph.

Bateau soon to be best form and aided by improved handling, was hurried to get clear of interference, went to the leaders steadily when racing on the outside, eased becomingly under strong urging and in a game finish was up in the last few strides. Victorian, taken up sharply when crowded sixteen to the first turn, had racing room on the inside to reach a forward position, moved into the lead when taken to the outside entering the stretch and bore right at end. Balko set a good pace, saved a lot of ground and held on resolutely. Hot Toddy showed a good test. Donnay made up a lot of ground from a slow beginning. Princess Tina quit early. Sunbeam stopped badly and had no interference. Glen Wild and Petee Wrack were never factors.

$2.00 mutuels paid: Bateau, win $29.70, place $8.20, show $4.20; Victorian, place $3.30, show $2.70; Balko, show $4.00.

By the Associated Press.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 23.—Shades of one of the greatest thoroughbreds ever to step a hoof on American turf dashed to fame over a snow-covered Bowie track today as Bateau, daughter of Man O' War, won the Southern Maryland Handicap and $39,600.

Repeating the performances of her great sire, Bateau put up a game finish to nose out Victorian and carry the silks of W. M. Jeffords to victory. A length back of the Warm Stable's color bearer was Balk from the Sagmore Stable with K. E. Hitt's Hot Toddy fourth.

While run in a flurry of snow, the track was in good condition for the rich event that attracted the leading handicap horses of the country, with the exception of the Le Mar Stock Farm's Misstep, which was scratched. In accounting for the coveted purse the Amazon daughter of the super-horse stepped the mile and sixteenth in 1:46 2-5.

Bateau Wins by a Nose.

Balko, always a front runner, set out to burn up the track from the start, but Sun Beau, winner of many fall handicap stakes, was right after him with Victorian third. Meanwhile Eddie Ambrose on Bateau was biding his time. Around the turn Victorian moved up fast, going into what appeared a safe lead at the top of the stretch. But Bateau started her drive at the same time and all through the stretch the Jefford's filly fought Victorian for the lead, finally drawing up on even terms and going out in front by a nose in the final stride.

Rated as an outsider, Bateau paid $29.70 to win, $8.20 to place but only $4.20 to show. Victorian, which was made the favorite paid $3.30 to place and $2.70 to show while Balko, a field horse was worth $4 to run third.

St. Tuscan won the first event, leading home a big field. Titus was second and Flying Max third. St. Tuscan led all the way to win by a length, an dpaid $17.00.

Ned O, regarded as the best juvenile in Maryland by many horsemen, added another purse to his list when he won the second race. He carried 118 pounds, trailed the field as usual and getting through on the inside, ran into the lead and won by four lengths. Plucky Play was second, a head before Valenciennes.

Ned O has been insured by his owner, G. W. Foreman for $50,000.

The Rolling Plain Stable's Sandy, heavily played, scored handily in the third race at six furlongs, with Baron King second and Water Lad third. Greenock and Mowlee ran head and head for half a mile, then Mowlee dropped back. Sandy drew out in the stretch to win by a length and a half, while Baron King beat Water Lad a head.

Foreman Scores Double.

R. T. Wilson Jr.'s African, favorite, won the fifth at a mile and one-sixteenth. He got up to win in a hard drive by half a length from Coin Collector, with Searcher third.

Searcher was sent into the lead at the half mile and, showing good speed, led to the stretch, where he weakened slightly. African, coming strong, won going away by half a length. Coin Collector beat Searcher a length for the place.

Foreman scored a double when his Equation won the sixth race. Equation galloped behind the pacemaker to the stretch, where he took the lead and won by three lengths.

Stage Struck won the seventh race, with Fair Lark second and Boyish Bob third.

WESTERN M. A. VICTOR OVER PRINCIPIA, 7-6

By James M. Gould

Western Military Academy gained and Principia lost possession of a coveted athletic emblem yesterday when the Cadets from Alton won from Principia's Junior College eleven, 7-6. The flag has been in competition for seven years and changes hands when the possessor thereof loses to the other in any branch of sport.

There was little to choose between the two teams yesterday. After a scoreless first period, Principia got going and a forward pass, Moore to Lack, gave the St. Louisans a touchdown. The drop-kick for extra point was low and wide. Principia maintained this one-touchdown lead until the final period when the Cadets staged a storm which brought them a touchdown. They rushed for the extra point and made the two yards which meant a victory.

Beginning the game, Western worked down into Principia territory but was stopped on Principia's three-yard line. This was a fine example of courage on the part of the Principians. When the second period arrived, the tide of battle turned to favor of Principia, but the stubborn defense of the Cadets held until Lacke gathered in a long forward from Moore and dashed for the count. As the third period came and passed, the Cadets' attack seemed to reach top form. Capt. Healey, whose play all season in the Preparatory League has been of high caliber, began a one-man march which culminated in the fourth quarter with a 40-yard run to Principia's one-foot line. Healey was chosen to rush it over and he made good as he did on a plunge for the extra point.

The game, cleanly and cleverly played by two well-coached teams, was the principal athletic feature of Principia's annual "Dad's day."

The lineups:

WESTERN	Pos.	PRINCIPIA
Bruno	L. E.	Everett
Byram	L. T.	Sterns
Costa	L. G.	Nolte
Stough	C.	Spivy
Boggess	R. G.	Hunn
Nichaus	R. T.	Ballhorn
Young	Q. B.	Howell
Smith	L. H. B.	Lacke
Altman	R. H. B.	Chase
Besley	F. B.	Moore

Officials—Referee, Gould (West Point); umpire, Thumser (Washington); head linesman, Berger (Washington). Time of quarters—12 minutes.

Substitutions: Western: Stumpf for Nichaus; Principia: Woodward for Everett, Mann for Moore, McCormick for Chase, Wilson for Ballhorn and Hicks for White.

Scoring: Principia: Touchdown, Lacke; Western: Touchdown, Healey; point after touchdown (line-plunge), Healey.

FIRST HALF SEMIFINALS IN EAST SIDE LEAGUE

Dan Menendez's Spanish-Americans and Ralph Thomas' Edgemont Blue Jays clash in the second and feature game of the East St. Louis Municipal Soccer League's program at Jones Park this afternoon. The Slacks play the Waverlys in the curtain raiser.

These teams are evenly matched and a hard battle is expected despite the fact that it doesn't promised to mean much in the final standing. The Spanish-Americans, a game and a half margin of leadership over Edgemont in the first half race. To day's games are the semi-final of the first half and the Spanish-Americans should have no trouble with the Slacks in one of the finale tilts next Sunday.

*Field.

St. Tuscan outran his field to first turn was steadied under slight restraint, shook off best contention from Parading Lass to prevail by a length, which should have been enough to withstand Titus. Latter on outside in early racing, saved ground when entering home stretch and came gamely. Flying Max racing with the pace from the beginning continued gamely under a drive, but was unable to get to the leaders at end. Parading Lass tired when the pace was game. Mary Elaine was outrun. Easter was shuffled back early. Prince Toy stopped.

St. Tuscan, $17, $6.70, $5.40; Titus, $4.90, $3.90; Flying Max, $17.20.

SECOND RACE—$1500, 2-year-olds, seven furlongs—Start good, won easily, place driving. Went to post at 1:37; at post 1 minute. Winner, ch. g., 2, by Camp Fire—La Flambeau. Trainer, J. Collins. Time, :23 3-5, :47 3-5, 1:13, 1:26. Value to winners, $10,50, $250, $150, $50.

HORSE	WT.	PP.	ST.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockey.	Equivalent Odds to 1
Ned O	118	3	7	7°	7°	7°	7°	1°	C. Quattlebaum	1.25

Shan Tung	103	2	8	8°	8°	8°	8°	8°	W. Cannon	63.10

Ned O, as usual outrun in the early stages, was shaken up when leaving the back stretch, had racing room on the inside of the leaders and, reaching the front, rapidly drew out at last furlong. Plucky Play, rated after quick first half mile, worked his way through tight quarters when making his run and, in a game finish, outstayed Valenciennes. Latter made a determined move through the final stages after being taken up and fanned wide. Choie Boy had much early speed, but tired. Star Board raced prominently for six furlongs. Sidney had excuse. Mad Hattie quit and when unable to get to the leaders.

$2 mutuels paid: Ned O, win $4.50, place $4.10, show $2.80; Plucky Play, place $9.20, show $6; Valenciennes, show $5.30.

THIRD RACE—$1300, all ages, six furlongs—Start poor, won easily, place driving. Went to post at 2:07; at post 1 minute. Winner, br. g., 6, by Sam Mak—Alliance. Trainer, C. M. Odom. Time, :23 3-5, :47 2-5, 1:13. Value to winners, $1050, $250, $150, $50.

Dewagtac	119	7	7	7°	7°	7°	7°	7°	R. Workman	2.60

Sandy nursed along when moving into a Priest lead after the break, saved ground when shaken up to get clear when opportunity presented throughout the stretch and was under mild restraint nearing the end. Baron King taken back in the early stages, slipped through on the inside at stretch turn and closed rapidly in the final furlong. Water Lad unable to outgame Sandy, which leaders early, closed willingly and fast in the final issue. Bramablan was away very slowly and could not reach a forward position. Greenock was away a little late, but never figured when leaving the back stretch. Mowlee quit badly after half mile. Dewagtac had no speed.

$2 mutuels paid: Sandy, win $4.60, place $3.10, show $2.40; Baron King, place $8.40, show $5.10; Water Lad, show $8.20.

Eskimo	107	3	1	1°	1°	1°	5°	5°	A. Robertson	11.15

African, trailing off the leaders for the first seven furlongs, remained on the outside for clear racing room, closed stoutly when called on and wore Coin Collector down to get up in the last 20 yards. Coin Collector entered contention swiftly after five furlongs, raced Searcher into submission and fought it out willingly. Searcher displaced Eskimo when ready, saved ground, faltered in the closing drive. Host, taken in hand and rated early, made his run at the turn of the back stretch, but was not good enough. Fair Beth acted perfunctorily at the barrier. She raced under a strong rating and had no request. Eskimo stopped.

$2 mutuels paid: African, win $6.50; place, $3.70; show, $2.70. Coin Collector, place, $5.40; show, $3.70. Searcher, show $2.80.

SIXTH RACE—$1300, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, mile and one sixteenth; Start good; won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:46; at post 5 minutes. Winner, b. g., by Dominoes—Alice Hoag. Trainer, J. W. Collins. Time, :24 3-5, :50, 1:16, 1:41 3-5, 1:50 2-5. Value to winners, $650, $300, $100, $50.

Blade	107	8	8	8°	8°	8°	8°	8°	A. Robertson	23.10

Equation favored by improved handling and avoiding crowding after the break, was rated on near attendance of the leaders, reached the front with a rush when shaken up and was well in hand at end. Fair Class, fourth early, made a stout effort when opening clear ground on the inside at the far turn and finished gamely to outlast Fair Gold. Latter hurried to the front, was steadied there and held on well under a drive. Referendum, wore out the trio. Dealy raced below his recent races. Sanford stopped. Blade was badly shut off and almost fell at first turn.

$2 mutuels paid: Equation, win $6.90, place $4, show $3.80; Fair Class, place $15.40, show $9.50; Fair Gold, show $6.30.

SEVENTH RACE—$1300, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, mile and one-sixteenth; Start good; won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:20; at post 1 minute. Winner, ch. g., 4, by Sir Barton—Ballet Dancer II. Trainer, W. H. Flory. Time, :23, :50 1-5, 1:15 4-5, 1:44 2-5, 1:55 2-5. Value to winners, $650, $300, $100, $50.

Gus	107	9	9	9°	9°	9°	9°	9°	J. Serio	53.75

Stage Struck, placed favorably and tackle somewhat rough when moving to the front on the back stretch, was shaken up to get clear when opening and drew away rapidly. Fair Lark improved his position steadily, gained a slight lead momentarily at far turn, but was no match for the winner. Boyish Bob followed Fair Lark on every move, pressed into a very close lead but began tiring when leaving the back stretch. Eldonian broke fast, but was never able to enter contention. Proposal, Grand Jay, Tarquin and Gus were outrun.

$2.00 mutuels paid: Stage Struck, win $6.70, place $4.70, show $3.50; Fair Lark, place $4.10, show $4.10; Boyish Bob, show $3.70.

Winter Racing Season to Open Thanksgiving Day On New Orleans Track

Winter racing will begin Thanksgiving day with the open... of the Jefferson Parish Fair Association's 29-day meeting at Jeff... son Park, New Orleans. As usual, the Thanksgiving Day Hand... one mile and 70 yards, worth $5000, will feature the opening d... program. Two previous winners of the Thanksgiving Day Handicap are again entered. They are Phil Reuter's good German colt, Galahad, and the fleet McTinkle, which races in the silks of C. A. Coyle. In winning the event last year, Galahad earned $3725. In 1927 the race was worth $3300 to McTinkle's owner. Prior to 1927 the Thanksgiving feature was run at one mile.

500 Horses at Southern Track.

More than 500 horses are already stabled at the Southern track and a large number of owners, now campaigning in Maryland, have asked for accommodations. Some of the outstanding stables in the East have signified their intention of competing in both the Thanksgiving day and Christmas Handicaps. Harry Sinclair's Rancocas Stable, Greentree Stable and the joint stable of R. T. Wilson and W. J. Salmon have reserved from 20 to 75 stalls each for their thoroughbreds, which are intended for winter racing.

Other prominent owners who will campaign at the New Orleans course are John J. Coghlin, George Collins, Mose Goldblatt, H. P. Whitney, Ed McCuan, E. K. Bryson, Phil Reuter, W. J. Potter and the Reichert Bros. of Belleville, Ill.

My Dandy, star of the Fairmount Park summer meeting, may race for the first time on the Jefferson Park track. He is scheduled to start in the opening day feature along with his stable companion, Brown Wisdom. Both horses, the property of the Reichert Bros., are stabled at the old Tijuana track but will probably be shipped to New Orleans for the opening day feature race.

My Dandy has won more than $55,000 in stakes and purses this year and if he performs as well on the Southern track as he did on Middle West courses, he may give the handicap stars which raced at New Orleans last year some trouble.

Horses Eligible for Big Race.

Among the horses eligible for the Thanksgiving Day Handicap are Karl Eitel, from J. J. Coghlin's stable; Wilson-Salmon's Black Diamond and Sun Fire; C. A. Coyle's Sea Rocket; W. J. Potter's Genuine; Peter Peter and Comet from Clyde Phillips' stable; Three D's Stables' Calf Roper; George Demarest's Extreme and George Collins' Thistle Fyrn and Saxon.

The Jefferson Parish Fair Association will offer no purse less than $1000 to horsemen with overnight handicaps of $1200 and $1500. Bears' Regular Team to Start Billiken Game

By Henry L. Freund

The Washington University football squad after resting yesterday and again today, will resume work tomorrow to perfect plays to be used Thanksgiving day against St. Louis U. The Bears concluded a week of severe training on Friday during which three scrimmage sessions were held as well as a long dummy scrimmage against aerial plays.

The Thanksgiving day game will be played at Francis Field this year instead of Sportsman's Park as the added stands at Washington are expected to be sufficient to handle the crowds. The advance sale of seats has been the largest in the past two years and the attendance record for Francis Field is expected to be broken. The kick-off is scheduled for 2 o'clock.

Dr. Sharpe announced that he planned no changes in his lineup. The only position at which the starter is in doubt is at right guard. Bob Watson played this position on the first team in every scrimmage the past week with Senn on the second team. Senn is suffering from an injured side and shoulder, but will be ready to play Thursday.

The Washington starting backfield is a certainty with Sammels, Waid, Ax and Hornsby. Rawdon will be able to enter the game at any time at either fullback or halfback. If Ax leaves the game Waid or Springer can shift to quarterback. Ax and Rawdon will be playing their last game for the Bears as both of these backs graduate in June.

Springer is a certain starter at one end and George Coover at the other. Glaser and Paris will be at the tackles and Capt. Jablonsky and either Senn or Watson the guards. Gus Butz will have the call at center over Glen Anderson. Glaser, Paris and Jablonsky will be the linemen who will be in their last college game. Rollo Stocks, a reserve tackle, is also a senior.

BURROUGHS & WESTERN TEAMS BREAK EVEN

The Western Military Academy "B" team lost to John Burroughs "B" team 7 to 6 yesterday afternoon while the Western "C" team defeated John Burroughs "C" team 7 to 6. The games were played at Alton, Ill. yesterday afternoon.

UNIVERSITY CITY TEAM READY FOR GAME IN SOUTH

With all members of the regular squad in good condition, the University City High School football team, co-champions of the County League, is set to depart Wednesday for the South, where it will play a post-season game with Tuscaloosa (Ala.) High School team at Tuscaloosa, Saturday. Eighteen squad members are expected to make the trip, with Coaches Muhl and Shemmer.

In Tuscaloosa High, the local aggregation will be meeting a team that has scored 364 points to its opponents' six points in eight games this season. Tuscaloosa elevens have been undefeated for the past five years, and have won intersectional games from Senn High of Chicago, McKinley High of Washington, D. C., and Lakeland High, Florida State champions.

The heaviest man on the Tuscaloosa lineup is Hundermark, a tackle, who weighs 210 pounds. The probable Tuscaloosa lineup and weights: Bagwell and Echels, ends, 160 and 145; Lewis and Hundermark, tackles, 165 and 210; Joyner and Prewitt, guards, 140 and 160; Clements, center, 170; Caffee and McCraw, halfbacks, 135 and 150; Hughes, fullback, 180; Roberts, quarterback, 165.

University City players, who will likely make the trip, follow:

Ends—Brownstein, Schoenthaler and Lionberger.

Tackles—Lamb, McElree and B. Gruner.

Guards — Convey, L. Shaefer, Pergament and Mazza.

Centers—Joplin and Campbell.

Backs—Feldman, McMurry, Vescovo, Deckert, Johnson and Bickel.

Coaches—Muhl and Shemmer.

WILD TURKEY HUNTING SEASON TO OPEN DEC. 1

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 23.—Wild turkey hunting, with the season opening Sunday, Dec. 1, in more than a dozen counties in the Ozarks, promises to be one of the most successful in years, the turkey crop having been on the gradual increase for the last few seasons. The 1929 crop on the State parks and game refuges has been fairly large but contrary to previous practices hunting is no longer permitted on those ranges.

Wild turkeys, once plentiful throughout the State had nearly reached a state of extinction before the Game and Fish Department began to propagate and protect them. The wild turkey is now given the benefit of game law protection, hunting of this bird being permitted only during December, when one bird fills the bag limit.

Counties where turkeys are said to be the most plentiful are Crawford, Dent, Texas, Shannon, Wright, Ozark, Taney, Howell, Oregon, Carter, Ripley and Mississippi. Experienced guides to conduct wild turkey hunts may be employed in some sections of the hunting country.

Hunters must possess a game farm permit if they keep their live wild decoys in captivity, according to game and fish laws. Birds held in pens or which have their wings clipped are considered held in captivity, it has been ruled.

Missouri anglers will be given the opportunity next summer to try their luck fishing for descendants from the very brown trout which Calvin Coolidge, as President, angled for at Cedar Island Lodge at Br

Eddie Shea, the Chicago feather- ight, has signed to meet Bushy ham, former holder of an Na- al Boxing Association title, in the 10-round main event of the Arena fight card, to be Tuesday night, Dec. 3. The nouncement was made yesterday Matchmaker Tom Packs. Gra- m has been under contract for than a week, while Shea's e was obtained when his man- Joe Glasier, was in St. Louis Thursday with Eddie Anderson, rable mate of Shea's.

Graham, a product of Italy, born ngelo Genaci, has been fighting about eight years. Most of his g campaigning has been as a tamweight. He jumped to the atherweight division only a few nths ago. As a bantamweight met and defeated most of the men in his division, his rec- d including victories over such as Irish Johnny Curtain, Abe Goldstein, Buddy Taylor, California Lynch, Frankie Genaro, Davey ad and Chick Suggs. Sprinkled rough this record are only a few eats. He lost a return match to rankie Genaro, lost to Joe Lynch, Tony Canzoneri and to Fidel La Barba.

Eight Fights This Year.

This year Graham has fought ght times, according to available ords, winning five of the eight nts. He lost on a foul to Kid Kaplan in seven rounds, and re- ntly lost to Andy Martin in a ston match. His victories were the expense of Eddie O'Dowd, ree; Videl Greggorio, Babe Kel- Archie Bell, and on Nov. 1, his most recent bout, he was d to a draw by Cecil Payne in our at Louisville.

It took considerable persuasion close the match with Shea, ac- ding to Packs, who declared that Chicago Italian at first refused sign for a bout with Graham. a offered to meet any other ponents that Packs would name, luding Benny Bass. Bass, how- r, refused to meet Shea at this e, and then Packs finally ob- ned Shea's acceptance for a tch with Graham.

Shea the Hardest Puncher.

Shea has appeared twice in St. uis. He slapped over the faded Al O'Dowd here in one round August at the Battery, and gave Benny Kaiser a hard beating on first Arena fight card a few eks ago. As previously told, Harry Tuttle, ervise King Tut, one of the ntry's ranking lightweights, has signed for another 10-round h on the card. Packs has sev- possible opponents in view and probably be able to announce opponent within the next or three days.

Packs said he is considering a second bout between the two lo- heavyweights, Dave Knost and Privac. Such a match, Packs eves, has possibilities from the point of local interest. Privac Knost have met only once. In bout, an amateur event, Privac the decision.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Riding Us Again.

THE baseball world is beginning to talk about us again. Not so long since they tried to sell one St. Louis club up the river to Detroit. It took nearly two years to herd that canard into a corner and spear it.

It was thought the idea had died; but it is bobbing up again, with the whispering campaign that has been going the rounds since the season closed.

Attention is being called to the fact that visiting clubs of both leagues lost money by coming here last season. Receipts were featherweight in the last half of the season, neither local club attracting much attention.

One traveling secretary of a big league club let it be known that his team bathed in red ink on every trip to the Mound City.

It Can't Be Done.

NOW, we are told by Stony McLinn in the Public Ledger of Philadelphia, that he "heard a number of men who hold important positions in baseball wishing there were some way to wipe St. Louis off the big league map."

McLinn continued his comment:

"The two Missouri clubs were financial flops for visiting teams last season, it is reported.

"The Cards and Browns had good ball teams. Both were in the pennant race at some time in the season. And the Nationals were pennant winners the previous season.

"It was suggested by one major magnate that the St. Louis Nationals could be transferred to Detroit, perhaps the best baseball city in the majors, everything considered.

"Pittsburg was suggested for the St. Louis American League franchise, as was Milwaukee. Other Western cities were mentioned — Cleveland, for example—as the location for a National League franchise. Detroit and Cleveland certainly and Pittsburg perhaps would support continuous big league ball.

"That St. Louis will give up either of its franchises, let alone both of them, is improbable. The Missouri metropolis is one of the oldest cities in major league baseball and is rich with traditions.

"However, if it be true that the other teams travel to St. Louis at financial loss and inconvenience to players, then something may be done to remedy that condition one of these days."

Some Day, Perhaps.

DOUBTLESS a readjustment of major league baseball circuits could be made, to some advantage. Cincinnati, in the National League, is a very weak population center. Milwaukee is a better city with a livelier baseball interest, if we believe fans from that town.

However, as pointed out before, to throw a city of half a million persons into the same league with another city of 7,000,000, is certain to breed inequalities, both financial and playing.

But territorial and franchise rights are solidly protected and no member of either circuit can be pitchforked out. Unanimous consent would have to be obtained.

Even if changes are desirable, therefore, they will be effected with great difficulty. The afflicted clubs will, therefore, have to go on suffering from emaciated receipts in all probability.

Only Flag Winners Wanted.

MANY observers are saying that it isn't the size of the town that affects baseball attendance, but the closeness of the race. They point to what happened in New York, last year, where the mob deserted both parks for the last month of the season. It is even reported that both Giants and Yanks came dangerously close to losing money last year.

If that is true, the trouble would seem to be that fans today will turn out only for a team that is actually in the pennant race!

Two or three years of runaway races in the American League explain the apathy, in that circuit, in cities having first division clubs. Last year's indifference in the National was due to the same situation—the Cubs opened up a big gap and maintained it.

There is also a growing interest in pennant winning and a comparatively weak interest in baseball itself. The large increase in the proportion of boys and women in baseball attendances has resulted in a demand for dramatic incident rather than sound and scientific baseball.

Time was when throngs turned out to see a crack team on display for the sake of the baseball it could show them. But today, if a club has not a battery of home run clouters and a chance of winning the pennant, it might as well resign itself to a red ink season at home.

It Seems Unfair.

THE campaign of the United States Golf Association to obtain the repeal of the existing Federal law taxing club dues and initiation fees 10 per cent will be resumed at the next session of Congress. The law has hit golf and sporting clubs a hard blow and some of the effects of its operation are pointed out in a bulletin issued by the United States Golf Association.

A previous attempt to have the law changed not only failed, but a new tax was added consisting of 10 per cent of any amount paid as the price of shares of stock, bonds or other securities, ownership of which is a conditional membership, regardless of the person to whom the payment is made.

If a man buys a share of stock in order to join a club, he pays 10 per cent of its price in taxes to the Government. If he resigns and sells his share to an incoming member, that person also pays 10 per cent. If the share changes hands 10 times the Government will have received in taxes the equivalent of that stock's full face value. Theoretically, it would be possible for the Government to receive in taxes an amount equal to or greater than the amount required to build and finance the club.

Handicapping Health.

THE tax is a deterrent to the promotion of country and outdoor clubs and therefore an actual handicap to public health. Plus the tax on dues and initiation fees, the added tax seems to work a genuine hardship on Mr. Average Man's endeavor to sandwich in a little fresh air with his daily intake of smoke and city dirt.

Millers Oppose Tabler Team in Soccer Feature

THE Ben Millers, tied with the Madisons for first place in the St. Louis Soccer League, will meet the Tablers in the second and feature game of this afternoon's double-header at Sportsman's Park. The Madisons face the Hellrungs in the opener, starting at 1:45 o'clock.

Pat Walsh will be in goal for the Madisons, with James O'Neil replacing Eddie Hanson. Harry Bochnicek will replace Jimmy Cronnin on the Tabler forward line. Al Rudge, regular center forward of the Hellrungs, has recovered from an injury and is ready to get into the game.

Anything can happen as regards the standings, with the possibility that any one of three elevens, the Madisons, Millers or Tablers, showing the way after the round.

MEXICO CITY BASKET CHAMPS WILL PLAY HERE

The championship basketball team of Mexico, representing the Mexico City Y. M. C. A., will appear in St. Louis in a game against the Downtown Y. M. C. A. quintet Jan. 25, it was announced yesterday by Ralph Foster, physical director of the downtown organization.

The visiting team, which will make a tour of the Mid-West during the holidays, besides its game with the Downtown "Y," has games scheduled with Notre Dame, Kansas University and Drake, in addition to a number of games of minor importance. According to information received here, the Mexico City team has been together for several years, starting as an Employed Boys' team. It won the highest basketball honors in Mexico City last year when it won the basketball championship of the Federated Athletic League of Mexico.

Ralph Kurz, freshman coach at Washington U., will coach the Downtown "Y" squad. Practice will get under way Tuesday. The squad will be composed of virtually the same men who made up the team last year, with the exception of Ted Saussele, a star of last year, who will not return. Last year's players who will report include Brimmer, Moffatt and Layton, forwards; Hagerling, Ostrander and Wacker, guards, and Steinhoff, center. New men who will turn out include Sullins, Buel and Otten, all of whom have had experience in college basketball.

The Downtown Y. M. C. A. team will play its first game of the season on New Year's afternoon, opposing the Y. M. C. A. College quintet of Chicago in a game at the Downtown Y.

ST. LOUIS U. MIDGETS BEAT BEAUMONT, 14-0

In a game played on the Beaumont Field this morning, the St. Louis U. High Midgets closed their football season by defeating Beaumont, 14—0. The Midgets have won six straight this season.

The first St. Louis touchdown came in the first quarter when Powers, fullback, slipped around right end for 35 yards. The extra point was also made by Powers, who plunged the necessary distance for the counter. The second St. Louis score came after the Midgets had brought the ball down the field for four first downs. Donnelly plunged six yards through right guard for the touchdown. A pass, Priesmeier to Keefe, was completed for the extra point.

The victory gave the Class "C" city championship to the Midgets. It was the third championship that the teams of Coach Klemm have gained this year. The Minims hold class "B" titles in both the city and county.

GOLFERS SEEK TO END TAXES ON DUES AND MEMBERSHIPS

By W. J. McGoogan

St. Louis golfers, through the District Association, will co-operate with the United States Golf Association in a national movement for the repeal of Federal taxes on dues and initiation fees imposed upon members of golf clubs, John J. Nangle, president, said yesterday.

In a recent circular the U. S. G. A. appealed to all social, athletic and sporting clubs for aid in combating the tax, which it considers oppressive.

An effort was made last year to have the taxes which existed then removed, but the result was the Federal Revenue Act of 1928 which continued the 10 per cent tax on dues and initiations in effect and added an additional 10 per cent tax on any amount paid as the purchase price of shares of stock, bonds or other securities, ownership of which is a condition of membership, irrespective of the person to whom the payment is made.

John G. Jackson, general counsel of the U. S. G. A. conferred with Treasury Department officials recently and it is likely that the association will sponsor an amendment to the Internal Revenue Act of 1928 for the repeal of the tax.

Will Appeal to Congressmen.

It is in connection with this effort that Nangle says the District Association will appeal to St. Louis Representatives in Congress and to the two Missouri Senators for aid.

"These taxes work a hardship on golf clubs," Nangle stated. "And when I say that the District Association is in favor of their repeal I am sure that I speak the sentiment of ALL golf clubs. When an assessment is made upon members of a club, it is necessary to add the 10 per cent tax."

In its circular, the U. S. G. A. cites the working of the tax law as follows:

IF a golf club is organized and financed by the sale of shares of stock to the members, a tax of 10 per cent of the cost of these shares must be paid to the Federal Government. It, as is usual, ownership of a share of stock is required in order to qualify for membership, then, when a resigning member sells his stock to an incoming member, the latter must again pay to the Federal Government 10 per cent of the purchase price as a tax. It follows that if a complete turnover in club memberships occurs in 10 years, the Federal Government will have received in that space of time taxes equal in amount to the total cost of buying and building the club properties. This feature of the act is particularly oppressive and burdensome. Moreover, the statute results in discrimination between old clubs, which have completed their permanent financing before the tax law was put in effect, and new clubs presently formed and which have not completed their financing. Instances of hardship resulting from the added tax which have come to the attention of the U. S. G. A. are, for example, a club which assessed each of the members to pay off its capital indebtedness secured by a mortgage. A tax of 10 per cent had to be paid on this assessment. In another case, a club had sold $50,000 of 5 per cent bonds for the construction of a course and clubhouse. Two hundred and fifty members paid dues of $100 each, upon which the Federal tax is $2500, the exact amount of the bond interest. In 1929, the club defaulted on its bond interest, which it could have paid had it not been for the tax. This default resulted in serious injury to the club's credit.

It is the belief of the Executive Committee of the U. S. G. A. that the entire tax on athletic and sporting clubs is fundamentally wrong in principle and that it would be a better policy on the part of the Government to promote rather than to tax health-giving outdoor sports. The old objection to the removal of this tax, that golf is a rich man's game, would certainly not be advanced at this time by anyone at all familiar with the development of golf in this country.

68 ENTERED IN LEAGUE OFFICERS' TENPIN TOURNEY

Sixty-eight entries have been received for the second annual Officers' Club individual handicap tournament which will be held on Peterson's drives, Dec. 14 and 15. Thirty-one different leagues are represented among the various entries. The tournament will be four games across eight alleys, total pins to count.

Presidents, vice presidents, treasurers and secretaries of all the leagues that are members of the Greater St. Louis Bowling Association are eligible to compete.

Entries close Dec. 7. The entry fee is $1, with bowling extra, and can be made to George F. Fishwick, president of the Officers' Club, 511 Chamber of Commerce Building, or at Peterson's alleys.

Cash prizes along with a medal donated by Charles C. Peterson will be awarded the winners.

McBride Star, Who Played as Guard for Two Years Is Now Prep League's Best Fullback

Carter Failed When Given Tryout as Halfback—Leads Circuit in Scoring With 20 Points.

By Robert W. Herr

A transformed guard, who never played in the backfield prior to this year, is leading the Prep League in scoring, and gives evidence of being one of the best fullbacks who has ever played for a league eleven. He is Joe Carter of McBride High School, who is sure of a place on the league's All-Star team.

In the fast-moving backfield quartet of McBride's championship eleven, Carter is outstanding, and no other fullback of a Conference team has approached his performance. For the past two years he has played in the line, and this season he came out as a candidate for guard.

To say that Carter had never played in the backfield until this year is not strictly accurate. He began his football career as a line candidate in 1927 and became a regular guard that year. Last season Coach Toddy Kamp, in a search for backfield material, decided to make his husky guard into a halfback. Accordingly, Carter was shifted and began an early season game in the backfield, but the effort was a dismal failure. Both Carter and Coach Kamp admit that, as a halfback, in 1928, Carter was terrible. So the aspiring back was returned to his line position after the game and played through the season at guard.

As the 1929 season got under way, Kamp was again in need of good backs. Carter was again working in the line. The coach had not quite decided that his guard would never make a back, and the guard still had backfield ambitions. The shift was made by mutual consent, therefore, and Joe began his career as a fullback. From the first night of practice in the new position, he starred, and he continued to show improvement as the season progressed.

JOE CARTER.

The explanation is difficult. Kamp admits that particular pains were taken in teaching Carter the fundamentals of backfield play, and Carter merely says that he should have tried the fullback position two years ago. That he is a natural ball-toter seems evident from his record. He leads the Prep League with 20 points, and has scored 22 of the 42 points counted by McBride this season. He is a powerful plunger, a clever broken field runner and can kick and pass. He has played every minute of every game.

Carter is 18 years of age, stands 5 feet 11 inches in height and weighs 182 pounds. While football is his principal sport, he has also played baseball and worked in the sprints on the track team. He is in his senior year at McBride and will probably enter college next fall. He is the son of Mrs. Mary Carter of 4053 Maffitt avenue.

INJUSTICE IN SOCCER LAW

Rule Calling for Ejection of Player by Umpire for Misconduct Penalizes Team and Not Offender—Levying of Fine on Guilty One Proposed.

By Herman Wecke

According to the rules which govern the game of soccer, the game shall be played by not more than 11 men on each side. However, even this law brings about some confusion, as evinced by the game between the Madisons and Ben Millers at Sportsman's Park last Sunday.

Soccer's first law, as now constituted, reads as follows:

"The game shall be played by not more than 11 players on each side. In all games two substitutes will be allowed up to 15 minutes from the end of the regulation game. A PLAYER ORDERED FROM THE FIELD OF PLAY FOR MISCONDUCT CANNOT BE REPLACED. * * *"

It is the last part that causes the confusion. Robert Murphy was refereeing, according to the above law, when he ejected Eddie Flavin of the Madisons. The St. Louis Soccer League has a rule, which says substitutions may be made for any cause.

Team, Not Player, Suffers.

However, while substitutes now are allowed for injured players and other causes, other than ejection by the referee, the law still seems to work a greater hardships on a team than on the offending player. In fact, soccer is the only sport in which a club is made to suffer for the actions of one or two players.

Soccer, as every one knows, is a man-to-man form of combat, and when a club has but 10 players battling another which has its full quota, the first named is sure to be handicapped. Yet, according to the rules, that is exactly what will happen.

In baseball, if a player is ejected by the umpire, his place is taken by another. No college football team ever plays without 11 men, and no basketball team ever has fewer than five men on the court. And so it goes. But in soccer—well, it's altogether different. Because of ejections one team may find itself with 10 or even fewer athletes playing against 11.

Which seems to indicate that there is still something to be desired in the form of soccer legislation. Something should be done for those who pay at the gate and help make the game; persons who pay to see 11 men play against a like number.

Fining of Player Is Solution.

The solution apparently appears to rest with punishing the player more severely, instead of making a club as a whole suffer. It has been said "that to hit a man's pocketbook is to hurt him more than any other way."

That may be the answer for the soccer officials in time to come. If players, ejected by the referee, were fined a week's pay, which in the St. Louis League is $10 for a win; $5 for a draw and $6 for a defeat, and the fine be made to stick, it would hurt more than ejection from the contest. For major causes a player could be suspended without pay for a period of time as is done in professional baseball.

This would make a player think twice before he started an argument which would lead to his being banished from the game by the referee.

If this were done, equal teams would fight for supremacy on the field, in accordance to the first part of the law, which says that "the game shall be played by 11 players on each side."

In addition to the fine and suspension, if the offense waranted it, it could be left to the option of the referee to award the offended side a penalty kick. This also would help to curb rowdyism as no player is anxious to see his club lose an important game as a result of a penalty kick.

However, authorities should devise some means whereby soccer would come up to other sports in which teams with an equal number of players at all times battle for honors.

LONGOS OPPOSE PETTY TEAM IN FEATURE BATTLE IN MUNY LEAGUE

A battle for first place in the Fairground No. 3 Division with the Longos and Pettys as opponents, will probably feature this afternoon's round in the Municipal Soccer League. The Longos and Pettys are tied for the lead in the division with five points each, gained as a result of one victory and three tie games. Neither team has been defeated.

The three elevens, which have won four straight games, the Romas, Schenbergs and Watsons face what appear to be easy contests. The Roma Club plays the Centrals No. 1 at Fairground No. 4; the Schenbergs oppose the Spanish Club at Carondelet No. 1 and the Watsons tackle the Ideals at Carondelet No. 2.

The best battle in the Fairground No. 2 group should result in the meeting between the Angelicas and Wes. A victory for the We team will put the club on an equal footing with the Angelicas for second place. A victory for the Angelicas and a surprise victory for the Russells over the Kolsters will give the Angelica team, a previous Municipal champion, the group leadership.

The following players are on the suspended list: R. Dunne, Academy A. C.; G. Cramer, Cook A. C.; George Harris, Newstead-Lees; Frank Donohue, Central No. 2; Edward Albrecht, Ideals, and Frank Mahon, Pettys.

Today's schedule:

Fairground Park No. 2—Kolsters vs. Russells, 2 p. m.; Angelicas vs. "We," 3:30. Referee—L. Robbins.

Fairground Park No. 5—Marres vs. Clarks, 2 p. m.; Salisbury St. Business Men vs. Pals, 3:30 p. m. Referee—W. Brady.

Fairground Park No. 3—M. Longo vs. Benjamin Petty, 2 p. m.; A. C. Bauer vs. Newstead & Lee B. M., 3:30 p. m. Referee—P. Kelley.

Fairground Park No. 4—Walnut Park Bus. Men vs. Marske, 2 p. m.; Roma Club vs. Central No. 1, 3:30 p. m. Referee—J. J. Kelly.

Sherman Park—Academy A. C. vs. Dorton, 2 p. m.; Euclid Branconier vs. Cook A. C., 3:30 p. m. Referee—R. Wall.

Carondelet Park No. 1—German Sport Club No. 1 vs. Majestic, 2 p. m.; Schenberg vs. La Sociedad Espanola, 3:30 p. m. Referee—D. Barnard.

Carondelet Park No. 2—German Sport Club No. 2 vs. Central No. 2, 2 p. m.; William Watson vs. Ideal, 3:30 p. m. Referee—William McManus.

Forest Park—Universal vs. John P. Dolan, 2 p. m.; D. A. Club vs. Pyramids, 3:30 p. m. Referee—N. Reidy.

Concordia Park Jrs.—Ben Dulle vs. St. Matthews H. N. S., 2 p. m.; Ivory vs. Walter A. C., 3:30 p. m. Referee—O. Miller.

Diegel to Be Threat in P. G. A. Golf Tourney

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The last of the 1929 national golf championships will begin at Los Angeles, Cal., on Dec. 2, the date fixed by the Professional Golfers' Association. Leo Diegel, who is now at Agua Caliente, Mexico, will be one of the first prominent contenders on the ground.

It has been nine years since Leo, then just a kid and every bit as unorthodox looking in his swing as he is today, bobbed up at Inverness to give Ted Ray a battle for the national open championship honors. In fact, Diegel came up so swiftly that Leo just about had the championship tucked away in the hip pocket of his knickers right up to the last few holes played. Diegel didn't win, but he attracted the attention of his fellow professionals. And he has had it ever since. Diegel is the one man among the professionals who is never considered lucky. Too seldom hear it suggested that Diegel gets away with murder, which is something that one frequently hears connected with Walter Hagen.

In the nine years since the Inverness meeting Diegel has not been able to win either of the two major championship titles to which he aspires—the United States and the British opens—but his fellow pros have not cast Leo for one of those also-rans, of whom there are so many. Diegel is still rated a real threat at every open and expected to crash through.

Wins All Titles but British.

In her last 10 years of competition Glenna Collett has won virtually every women's golf title, with the exception of the British championship, in which she has been twice turned back by Joyce Wethered.

Lily Busch Magnus Makes Her Debut At a Hunt Ball

Elaborate Decorations Suggest Riding to Hounds—Receiving Party Stands Under a Great Evergreen Tree.

A HUNT BALL, the first of its kind given in St. Louis to introduce a debutante, took place last night at the Bridlespur Hunt Club in the Village of Hugh, where Mr. and Mrs. Edward Magnus, 6 Hortense place, presented to society their daughter, Miss Lily Busch Magnus. The entire club was taken over for the event, and was elaborately decorated throughout.

Everything was suggestive of a fox hunt, from huge wall panels, especially painted for the occasion to white china dinner service covered with hunting figures and damask table cloths to match the canary yellow waistcoats of the riders.

The wall panels, the work of artists brought from New York for the occasion, were life-size reproductions of Saturday afternoon scenes at Bridlespur, introducing the dignified figure of August A. Busch, Jr., cousin of the debutante, in full pink-coat regalia as master of the hounds, with Prize hunter, Bootlegger; Andrew W. Jones, Adalbert Von Gontard, Edward L. Ball and well and other familiar figures at the club.

These scenes, from the entrance through to the dance floor, depicted the progressive stages of the hunt—the assembly, the front drive with the clubhouse silhouetted in the background; the breakfast, with the riders and their guests grouped informally about tables; the chase and the check, all done in the brilliant autumn tones of orange and scarlet, green and Indian summer blue, setting off pinks, pale blues, black and browns of hunters, horses and hounds.

There was humor in the scene. In the card room was a series of color cartoons of merry doggy dogs making merry at the expense of their masters and mistresses. Hounds, you know, are supposed to follow at heel. The pictures showed the pack doing anything but that. In one they were cloying, chasing butterflies, playing leap frog. In another they laughed at a woman riding sidesaddle over a hurdle; still another showed an inexpert horseman taking his horse dive into the rough, and over the mantel lop-eared Belvederes engaged in a most quiet, sociable game of draw poker. A grey fox, accustomed to being chased, looked on with amazement on the frivolity of his cousins.

Near by in the breakfast room was a stage illustration of "The Evolution of the Hound," from Adam's pet dinosaur in the Garden of Eden to the specimen of today.

Entering through the front door, over which was emblazoned the motto "Like Autumn Day, Keen and Mellow," the guests passed through the club to leafy arches, decked boys to a large canvas-inclosed pavilion, in one corner of which stood the receiving line.

The pavilion capped the climax of the whole decorative scheme. A woodland glade was recreated about a broad expanse of hardwood floor. From the floor in one corner rose the natural trunk of a huge evergreen and at intervals along the walls stood manmade reproductions of the same kind. The walls were the panorama of the fox hunt, actuality being impressed on the picture by an inset runway, landscaped with fields and hills and timber, along which bounded a pack of baying hounds—real dogs. Other head lights were inclosed in masks representing hounds and red and gray foxes.

The refreshment stand at one end of the room was built of split logs in front of a cabin containing the supplies. There was a split log bar rail. At the opposite end of the pavilion was laid the table for Miss Magnus, the debutantes and their escorts, with a story of the hunt repeated in cardboard miniature as the decoration.

The guests danced from shortly after the dinner hour until midnight, when supper was served, after which dancing was resumed until 2 o'clock, when there was an adjournment for a buffet breakfast.

The floor was gay with the hunt costume of 15 or more Bridlespur members mingling with the sober black of conventional attire and the bright evening gowns of the ladies.

Miss Magnus was gowned in an imported model of flesh-tinted chiffon and tulle, with a lace slip embroidered in French fashion. Her flowers were pink and white orchids arranged in a shoulder corsage.

She received her guests with her parents before the great evergreen tree, about which were grouped dozens of baskets and bouquets of gift flowers. Mrs. Magnus wore green velvet, made quite long, and a shoulder arrangement of orchids.

Among the out-of-town guests were Miss Magnus' mother and brother, Mrs. J. [illegible] Deeb and Mr. Adolph Magnus of Chicago; the brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Flanigan of New York, and [illegible]

Mildred Maire to Wed C. W. Nugent

AN engagement of much interest in St. Louis and Jefferson City is that of Miss Mildred Maire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amie Maire of Linn, Mo., and Charles Wright Nugent, son of Mrs. Charles Westley Nugent, 401 North Newstead avenue.

The announcement was made Thursday at a luncheon bridge party given for Miss Maire by Mrs. H. S. Gove at her home in Linn. A group of St. Louisans were included in the guest list, among them Mr. Nugent's sisters, Mrs. Louise Nugent and Mrs. Joseph A. Hafner Jr., formerly Miss Jane Nugent.

Miss Maire, who is well-known in Jefferson City as well as in St. Louis, is an alumna of Hardin College.

Mr. Nugent was educated at Smith Academy, Culver Military Academy and the Hackley School in Tarrytown, N. Y. During the World War he served overseas as a Lieutenant in the Aviation Corps.

The wedding will take place in Linn early in January. Mr. Nugent will bring his bride to St. Louis to make their home.

Annual College Club Night, Dec. 9

The College Club of St. Louis announces plans for its twenty-third annual scholarship benefit, to be given Monday evening, Dec. 9 at the Shubert-Rialto Theater, where John Drinkwater's comedy, "Bird in Hand" will open for a week's stay in St. Louis.

Funds which are raised each year in similar fashion, are used by the club to award scholarships and loans to St. Louis high school students, whose grades and qualifications are investigated by the scholarship awards committee, and who without financial assistance would not be able to attend colleges and universities of any kind, much less of one of their own choosing, which is permitted to successful candidates. A total of more than $46,000 has been spent on scholarships and loans since the inception of the benefit in 1906.

The play, "Bird in Hand," has had a long run at the Royalty Theater in London and in New York. It is a story of English rural life, and is played by an all-British cast composed of two women and six men, personally

William N. Claggett Jr. Weds Miss Dorothy Morgan

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 23.

THE wedding of Miss Dorothy Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Jaxon Morgan, to William N. Claggett Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Claggett of St. Louis, took place tonight at 8:30 o'clock at Pen-Y-Bryn Farm, the Morgan home at Gates Mills, a fashionable suburb. The Rev. Dr. Philip Smead Bird of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, officiated.

Miss Morgan's gown was of cream satin long in front, with a long train cut in the skirt. An inset of cream tulle filled in the

Indian Prince to Talk Before Junior League

JEHAN WARLICKER, Prince Secsodia, a Hindu, will be the speaker at the third of the series of Monday morning lectures, given in the Junior League Club Room, tomorrow, and he has chosen for his subject, "My Country and her Millions" which will be in the nature of a reply to Katherine Mayo's book "Mother India."

The Prince was educated first at Harrow, then at Cambridge, London University, and the Bar Middle Temple Inn. After research work as to the underlying causes of poverty and superstition in India he has come to the conclusion that the only hope for his country lay in industrial development and education.

Candle-Lit Party For Patricia Parker

THE harmonious blending of the old and the new, the contrast of the mellow glow of hundreds of lighted tapers against the harsh but interesting outlines of the new idea in decoration, were effectively employed Friday night at a candle-lit dinner dance given at the St. Louis Country Club by Mr. and Mrs. Mason Scudder, Ladue road, for Miss Patricia Parker, daughter of Mrs. Herbert Lawrence Parker, and debutante sister of the hostess.

The decorations were confined to the dining rooms of the club which are connected with broad arches. Modernism was manifest in wide silver friezes designed with pointed strips of white shot with gold, which partly covered the walls, and in geometric figures, some triangular, others cut in severe shapes of brocaded silver and gold, which formed a glistening background for the dinner tables.

Candles, in dozens of sizes and patterns, glowed from almost every angle. They filled tall modernistic candelabra in the corners and metal brackets built outward from the otherwise unused chandeliers. Before the wall panels, flanked by frosted silver shrubbery stood groups of silver-banded golden cylinders, from which giant white tapers, made especially for the occasion, augmented the softer glow from the smaller candles. At each side of the door and window frames great carved and tasselled silver brackets, holding varicolored candelabra containing more lighted candles, extended into the rooms above the heads of the diners.

The tables, laid for dinner which was served at 8 o'clock, had centerpieces of yellow tea roses and white daisy chrysanthemums, in modernistic silver containers, alternating with tiered white candelabra.

The debutantes and their escorts, presided over by the guest of honor, were seated in the alcove dining room, as has been the custom for several seasons. Here the side walls were festooned with gilded smilax, and on the third wall back of Miss Parker, the modernistic motifs were repeated in more elaborate fashion. The surface was covered with silver, and before it was built a second silver wall, its center panel and slashed sides topped by candles, and covered with gold star-shaped medallions combined with modernistic tinseled figures, from which depend-

Ship and Skating Parties in New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.

FROM parties on the sea to plans for others on the ice, from fashion shows for men to a projected theater for children, New York society tripped this week in its round of entertainment. The formal dinners, with their lace and silver-trimmed tables and the pink teas for debutantes, no longer satisfy the fashionables.

On the Liner Statendam, anchored at its Hoboken pier, a ship party was given Monday. By midnight the ship was thronged with merrymakers, who danced and played bridge until the cabaret entertainment at supper time. A one-legged tap dancer was the feature of that entertainment. Then came a sketch entitled "From Morning Until Night," depicting the hurried day of a modern young man of fashion.

What that well-dressed young gentleman should wear was illustrated in a fashion show for men. The modern heather-tweed golf suits, the new high-waisted white waistcoats for evening wear and the 1930 lounge suits were displayed in 27 models. The party was given in aid of the Neurological Committee of the New York Post-Graduate Hospital. Among the hosts at the supper were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Barrett and Edgar S. Russell.

Society is already inspecting its skates and planning its fancy dress costumes for the ice carnival, "A Night in St. Moritz," which will be given Jan. 6 at Madison Square Garden in aid of the New York Music Week Association. Champion amateur figure skaters will give an exhibition.

Debutantes have been busy this week with the Junior League's plan for a children's theater which will present fairy tale plays. "Sonia's Search for the Christmas Star," translated from the Norwegian to be given early in December is the first play chosen for the youthful actors. Miss Olive Whitman, daughter of former Gov. Charles Whitman, is one of the most active of the year's debutantes in the work of the league.

At the Schubert memorial concert to be given at Carnegie Hall Dec. 4, Mrs. Vincent Astor, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson and Mme. Marcella Sembrich will be among the hostesses. The committee in charge includes Mrs. August Belmont and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

The wedding of Miss Marie Louise Montgomery and James Marshall Osborn took place in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church Tuesday. Instead of the traditional wedding lace as an accompaniment to her princess gown of ivory satin, the bride chose a white nun's veil of tulle, caught under her chin by twin bouquets of orange blossoms and sweeping the length of her long square train.

Her sister, Miss Jean Montgomery, as her maid of honor wore a sleeveless gown of changeable taffeta in the new shade of dahlia —a deep plum tint. She carried a bouquet of cream-colored roses and sweet peas the same shade as her frock.

The Sunday Evening Informal Club meets at a restaurant. There persons on their way home from a week-end in the country may drop in to dine informally and chat. A magician, specialty dancers and motion pictures amuse the guests. Evening dress is not only unnecessary but taboo, which has made the club especially popular with the men.

Margaret Burdette Bride of L. L. Miller

THE marriage of Miss Margaret Burdette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Darby Burdette, 6315 Southwood, and Lester L. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Miller of Painesville, O., took place Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at Grace Methodist Church, the Rev. James Crowther officiating.

Miss Dorothy Thomas was maid of honor and her two sisters, Miss Dorothy and Miss Ruth Burdette were bridesmaids. George Fisher was best man and Harold Motherwell and David Berkeley were groomsmen.

The bride was gowned in ivory satin made on princesse lines and trimmed with seed pearls. Her veil of tulle was arranged with a cap of duchess lace adorned with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lillies of the valley. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids wore gowns in autumn shades and carried chrysanthemums. The bride's mother wore a gown of chartreuse lace and the bridegroom's mother was in blue chiffon. They wore shoulder corsages of roses.

Mr. Miller is a graduate of Washington University School of Architecture and is a member of Sigma Tau Omega Fraternity. Mrs. Miller also attended Washington University and is a member of Delta Gamma Sorority. They will make their home at the Hoover Court apartments after Dec. 15. Among the out of town guests here for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs John L. Miller of Painesville, and Mrs. E. C. Gramm of Washington.

The wedding of Miss Viola Maetten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Maetten, 6013 Westminster place, and Elmer H. Loewenguth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Loewenguth, took place last night in the French room of the Coronado Hotel. The Rev. Elmer Roettger, cousin of the bridegroom, officiated.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Mildred Maetten, and Miss Estelle Loewenguth, sister of the bridegroom, as bridesmaids. Mrs. Georgs P. Loewenguth was matron of honor. The best man was Louis Metz, and Jack Lorenz was groomsman.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in ivory satin trimmed with rose point lace and seed pearls, and a court train fell from her hips. She wore a tulle veil held in place by a cap trimmed with orange blossoms, seed pearls and rhinestones. The bride carried an arm bouquet of lilies of the valley. She wore a diamond and platinum brooch, the gift of the bridegroom.

The matron of honor wore peach chiffon trimmed with a lace cape collar and carried orchid chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids wore tulle green and orchid chiffon, respectively, and carried yellow and pink chrysanthemums. They wore the bride's gift, Chanel crystal necklaces.

The ceremony was followed by a dinner, after which Mr. and Mrs. Loewenguth departed on a wedding trip through the South.

The wedding of Miss Viola Maet- ten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed- ward C. Maetten, 6018 Westminster place, and Elmer H. Loewenguth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Loewen- guth, took place last night in the French room of the Coronado Ho- tel. The Rev. Elmer Roettger, cousin of the bridegroom, offi- ciated.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Mildred Maetten, and Miss Estelle Loewenguth, sister of the bridegroom, as bridesmaids. Mrs. George P. Loewenguth was matron of honor. The best man was Louis Metz, and Jack Lorenz was groomsman.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in ivory satin trimmed with rose point lace and seed pearls, and a court train fell from her hips. She wore a tulle veil held in place by a cap trimmed with orange blossoms, seed pearls and rhinestones. The bride car- ried an arm bouquet of lilies of the valley. She wore a diamond and platinum brooch, the gift of the bridegroom.

The matron of honor wore peach chiffon trimmed with a lace cape collar and carried orchid chrysan- themums. The bridesmaids wore Nile green and orchid chiffon, re- spectively, and carried yellow and pink chrysanthemums. They wore the bride's gift, Chanel crystal necklaces.

The ceremony was followed by a dinner, after which Mr. and Mrs. Loewenguth departed on a wedding trip through the South.

Miss Mary Albert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Albert, 5737 Kingsbury, was married to Albert H. Bierman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bierman, 1284 Amherst place. The pair were married last Sunday evening at 7 o'clock at the Kingsway Hotel.

The wedding of Miss Helen Mar- garete Costello, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Costello of 3838 Cleveland avenue, and John W. Holten of 416 North Eighth street, East St. Louis, Ill., took place Nov. 9, at St. Margaret's church. The Rev. Father A. R. Brunswiste, a cousin of the bride- groom, performed the ceremony. The bride wore a French blue chif- fon velvet frock, trimmed in silver lace, with hat and shoes to match, and carried a bouquet of Joanna Hill roses. She was attended by her sister, Kathryn Costello, who wore a briar brown chiffon frock, with velvet hat and shoes to match, and carried Pernet roses. The bridegroom was attended by his cousin, Joseph Fleming. A break- fast for the bridal party followed at Hotel Saum.

Miss Irma Protzmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Protz- mann, became the bride Thursday Nov. 14 of Robert E. Hannegan. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents on Riverview Drive by the Rev. D. J. Avery.

The bride wore a sleeveless gown of white taffeta with flounces of tulle, which formed an uneven hem line just touching the floor. She wore a cluster of orange blos- soms in her hair and carried a large bouquet of yellow roses.

Mrs. Maggie Wilson, formerly Miss Grace Middleton, was the bride's only attendant and wore a sleeve- less gown of white satin made on princesse lines with uneven hem and carried a bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Charles Hanne- gan, a brother of the groom, served as best man.

The home was decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. The bride is a graduate of Wash- ington University and is a mem- ber of the Delta Gamma sorority. Mr. Hannegan is a graduate of the St. Louis University School of Law and is well known in athletic cir- cles.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Klein, 710 Leland avenue, University City, an- nounce the engagement of their daughter, Edna Cecelia, and Louis Albert Schear of Cincinnati, O. Mr. and Mrs. Klein will be at home in- formally Thursday evening. The date of the wedding has not been set.

The marriage of Miss Martha Jane Blandford, youngest daughter of Mrs. M. J. Blandford, 6636 Bart- lett avenue, University City, to Frank Leonard Hartung, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hartung, 5912 Theodosia avenue, will take place Thanksgiving Day at 10 o'clock at the Rectory of All Saints Church with Father Risk officiat- ing. The bride will have as her only attendant, Miss Ruth Whith- son. Mr. Hartung will be attended by Fred Mowrey. The flower girl will be Mary Catherine Hayes, a niece of the bride. There will be a reception at the home of the bride's mother in the evening, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hartung will depart for a short honeymoon. They will make their home with Mrs. Blandford on their return.

The wedding of Miss Teresa Anna Faber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Faber, 6439 Ridge ave- nue, and William Luking, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Luking of Ray- mond, Ill., took place at St. Bar- bara's Church Wednesday and was followed by breakfast at the bride's home.

The bride was gowned in white satin. She was attended by her sister, Miss Catherine Faber, as maid of honor, and Miss Gladys Meyer, Miss Helen Luking and Mrs. Bert Faber Jr. The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore gowns of taffeta and tulle, in the pastel shades. The matron of honor wore a gown of orchid tulle. They car- ried roses.

Joseph Faber, the bride's broth- er, served as best man, and the groomsmen were Raymond Heitz and Lem Lesman.

Alliance Francaise Dinner Next Friday

THE Alliance Francaise will give a dinner Friday evening at 7 o'clock at the Kingsway Hotel for Gaston Rageot, who will lecture following the dinner on sports and the latest literary de- velopments.

The society will meet Monday afternoon Dec. 2, at Miss Maud Eoff's School, 423 Lake avenue, when Henry de Lecluse will con- tinue the lecture series inaugurat- ed Nov. 4 on the "Centennial of the 1830 Romantic Movement." These lectures not only discuss lit- erature but also the theater, so- ciety, dancing and singing.

Among the social affairs recent- ly was a luncheon Saturday, Nov. 16, at the Wednesday Club given by the committee of the Alliance Francaise for Alfred Cortot and Mr. and Mrs. Ferandez Arbos.

neck and the long tulle sleeves were embroidered with sunbursts of crystals. Narrow bands of the sat- in crossed in Grecian effect under the arms. A veil of rose point lace that had been worn by her sister, Mrs. Robert Otis Brannon, fell over a second veil of tulle held to the hair by a cap of tulle banded with silver cloth and tiny pearls. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Brannon was matron of honor and Miss Shelly Cary was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Patty Burke, Miss Eliz- abeth Seymour, Miss Marguerite Withington, all of Cleveland, and Miss Rebecca Adams of Easton, Pa. They wore frocks of jade silk net and carried calla lilies.

Charles Claggett was best man and the following served as ushers: Donald Danforth, Finley McElroy, Firmin Desloge, John Sluder and Kent Ranevscroft, all of St. Louis.

The ceremony took place in one of the living rooms which had been transformed into a chapel and il- luminated by candles. The wed- ding supper was served in the ball room. The bridal table seating 27 persons was covered in silvercloth and decorated in white flowers.

The bride attended the Knox School, Cooperstown, N. Y. She is a member of the Junior League and spends much of her time at the Morgan ranch near Sheridan, Wyo. Mr. Claggett is a graduate of Country Day School and has spent the past three years in the West. Following a honeymoon in California Mr. Claggett and his bride will make their home in St. Louis.

Among the St. Louisans attend- ing the wedding in addition to the best man and ushers were Mr. and Mrs. William N. Claggett, parents of the bridegroom; Mrs. Donald Danforth, Mrs. Baylor Pendleton and Miss Carolyn Fowler.

Mrs. Hoover Avoids Precedence Dispute

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.

NOT in years has the program of Washington society been so disrupted as by the death of the Secretary of War, James W. Good. The White House schedule of state functions has been interrupted and the reception to the diplomatic corps Dec. 5 and the dinner to the Cabinet a week later have been postponed, while the President and Mrs. Hoover have canceled all social engagements for a month.

Cabinet women, who follow the White House lead, were in process of giving luncheons for Mrs. Hoover, diplomats had arranged dinner parties for the Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson and other members of the Cabinet; Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Hyde had arranged bureau receptions whereby they were to entertain the officials and clerks in the department. In fact the entire official world has gone into mourning for the month of December and only local society functions are confined largely to debutante affairs.

Mrs. Hoover's arrangement of the social program is being praised. The official set and society in general in the capital has grown by leaps and bounds since the World War, and receptions at the White House have become dense with humanity, while dinner parties have grown to the size of public banquets.

To break up this solid phalanx of society where women's gowns were often ruined in swords of diplomats and American officers, Mrs. Hoover arranged two receptions, one in honor of the Senate and the other for members of the House, the Vice President and his sister, Mrs. Gann, heading the line of guests at the first named and the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Longworth at the second. Thus she avoided taking sides in a famous society quarrel. Then there are to be three receptions in honor of the various bureaus. The two congressional receptions allay the slightest chance of conflict in precedence between Mrs. Gann, the official hostess of the Vice President, and Mrs. Longworth, wife of the Speaker.

Lady Lindsay, wife of Sir Ronald Lindsay, Ambassador-designate of England, American, pretty, stylish and wearing a fine Russian sable coat, came to Washington a few days ago from New York for the express purpose of looking over the new British Embassy. Having tried out the Embassy at Constantinople and that at Berlin, My Lady is well pleased with the prospect of being the first chatelaine of the new British Embassy in the Capital of her native land.

Her visit was a quiet one and she saw but few persons besides Lady Isabella Howard. And now Lady Lindsay is wondering how her French chef will ever adapt himself to the high windows in the main kitchen where he must carry on his art. A six-foot stepladder would scarce admit of his white cap showing above the window sill in the high vaulted room.

Lady Isabella Howard being an Italian by birth has all Italian servants in the old embassy on Connecticut avenue and one scarce hears any other language spoken. But the arrangement of the great new embassy, about the largest in the world, appealed to Lady Lindsay.

She liking a magnificent ball room with its two huge fireplaces, its black marble-bordered dancing floor. She was particularly enthusiastic over the prospects of the garden and grounds now in the hands of a Washington landscape artist.

Another thing which pleased her very much is the study planned for the Ambassador which is to have a wonderful fireplace and walls of gumwood richly carved. Nearby is the office of the counselor of embassy or perhaps it will be a room for conferences. The drawing room is a beautiful chamber with a $100,000 cantilever stairway leading from the drawing room floor to the top of the house, perhaps the only one ever built in this country. Though minus the rich ironwork, rail and grill work, the proportions are seen to be splendid. Indeed there was not a nook or corner that Lady Lindsay did not inspect on her tours of the embassy. She was here for five or six days before returning to New York, later to go to London.

With the opening of Congress less than two weeks away, Washington is filling with its usual society contingent, officials and otherwise. No longer are there a few idle rich residents in Washington, but instead dozens of women and men who come to bask in the light of the great and near great, enjoy the cosmopolitan atmosphere and get close to the fountainhead of politics and diplomacy.

Despite the antics of the stock market and a few other discouraging factors at work in the world, society here will be more active this winter than for many seasons past.

Society Sees Ballard Oriental Rug Display

A representative gathering of St. Louisans was present Thursday evening at the opening view of the collection of oriental rugs given by James F. Ballard to the St. Louis Art Museum to view the rugs and do honor to the donor of this most generous and remarkable gift. The occasion marked one of the most important events of the year in the art circles of St. Louis. The pleasure of the evening was enhanced by an appropriate program of music played by members of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Frederick Fischer. On either side of the fountain in Sculpture Hall were set up two oriental tents, a part of the Ballard gift. The brilliant colors of the tents and rugs in the main hall and a display of seasonal flowers about the central fountain made the opening one of the most brilliant spectacles that has ever been seen at the museum. Unfortunately, Mr. Ballard, on account of ill health, could not be present to receive in person the congratulations and see the enthusiastic appreciation the display aroused. In his stead Mr. and Mrs. David B. White, Mr. Ballard's son-in-law and daughter, and their daughters were the guests of honor and represented the Ballard family.

Among those present were Mrs. W. K. Bixby, Mr. and Mrs. Louis La Beaume, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Faust, Mr. and Mrs. Max Kotany, Mrs. W. Julius Polk, Mr. William Booth Papin, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Rumsey, Mrs. Walter B. Douglas, Mr. William Cerre Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McKittrick Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Harry January, Mrs. C. C. Allen, Mrs. Herbert S. Hadley, Ernest C. Single prescription made a family doctor famous SELDOM has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than the one which Dr. Caldwell performed back in 1885 when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote this prescription as he found men, women, and children suffering from common symptoms of constipation such as coated tongue, unpleasant breath, headaches, biliousness, feverishness, lack of appetite, no energy, etc. Moreover it invariably relieved these symptoms so much more pleasantly, so much quicker than various other things, his patients simply had to tell other people about it.

The demand for this prescription grew so fast that by 1888 the doctor was forced to have it put up ready for use, and supply drug stores with it. Today you can get the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, from drug stores all over the world.

When you or your children suffer from any of the symptoms of constipation, it will pay you to remember this safe, effective, laxative; made from herbs and other pure ingredients; a real constipation corrective; with 47 years of a doctor's experience behind the formula!

ters of the American Revolution, entertained at luncheon Monday the newly elected executive board at her home, "Red Gables." The members attending were vice regents Mrs. L. M. Ottofy and Mrs. W. A. Hall; secretaries Mrs. William H. Dickey and Mrs. Ralph B. Reed; directors and other officers, Mrs. Frank A. Ruf, Mrs. John Trigg Moss, Willa Viley, Mrs. W. S. Jencks, Mrs. J. E. Weber, Mrs. F. W. Green and Miss E. Matlack. A second scholarship in the School of the Ozarks has been taken and Christmas boxes will be sent these pupils. The board will entertain the chapter with a Christmas party in December with Mrs. Willa Viley in charge of the program.

The St. Louis chapter, United Daughters of 1812, met Wednesday at the residence of Mrs. H. C. Reiner, Mrs. H. C. Stevens assisting. Roll call was responded to with "Reminiscences of My 1812 Ancestors." Mrs. William Harvey England, regent, reported on the State council at Kirksville. Other delegates reporting were Mrs. E. R. Kreitz, Mrs. Ray Havens and Mrs. W. A. Stine. The St. Louis Chapter lead all others in increased membership for the year and was awarded the State competitive flag. The following chapter members were chosen to serve on the State board: Mrs. W. H. England, Mrs. W. A. Stine, Mrs. L. M. Ottofy and Mrs. A. J. Burke of Kirksville. Mrs. E. P. Walsh presented a paper, "Our Missouri Room in National Headquarters in Washington."

The Ensee Study Circle will be entertained at luncheon tomorrow by Mrs. Carleton Sawin, 700 Leland avenue. The program will be given by Mrs. Thomas H. Blundell, Mrs. A. E. Wright and Mrs. James R. Booth.

St. Louis Ladies' Auxiliary, Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society of Denver, will hold its twenty-second birthday luncheon and minstrel show tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at Hotel Chase. Mrs. Charles Rederer is chairman of the program committee.

St. Louis Lindenwood College Club will be entertained tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Arthur S. Goodall, 7315 Kingsbury boulevard. Miss Alice Linneman, dean of art at Lindenwood College, and Mrs. Arthur Kruger, president of the club, will assist.

Shakspeare scenes will be presented by "The Players" of Tercentenary Society under the direction of Mrs. O. S. Ledman. The Morse School of Expression will be heard in a program of Shakspeare readings on Dec. 16.

The annual Thanksgiving service of the Woman's Missionary Society of West Presbyterian Church will be held at the church on tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The subject will be "Alaska," and Mrs. Oscar Cramer will be the leader. Mrs. W. H. Bissland, the president, will preside.

The Devotional will be given by Mrs. W. L. Barnard, who will speak on "Stewardship of Money." A talk on Alaska will be given by Mrs. George M. Park, who visited that country during the past summer. Mrs. Frank C. Davidson will have charge of the music, presenting Mrs. Louis McCormack, who will sing "Thanks Be to God" and "Homing." Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell will be at the piano. Mrs. George H. Owen is program chairman. Members of Mrs. Oscar Cramer's Missionary Circle will serve tea at the social hour following the meeting.

The Friday Club was entertained on Nov. 15 at the home of Mrs. James H. McCabe, 5611 Bartmer avenue, with Mrs. C. I. Fleming as assistant hostess. The program for the afternoon was devoted to a travel talk on Europe by Mrs. McCabe, who spent the past summer on the Continent and in the British Isles.

The annual Christmas party of the club will be held on Dec. 6 at the home of Mrs. Wilson A. Taylor, 6214 Forsythe boulevard, with Mrs. M. C. Younglove as assistant hostess. Roll call will be responded to by quotations from the second chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke, and Mrs. Charles F. Haanel will tell a Christmas story. A program of songs will be given by Mrs. August Lipp, with Mrs. Julius Feydt at the piano.

Mrs. John N. Booth, honorary regent of St. Louis Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, entertained the former and present board of the chapter, Nov. 14, at 10 a. m. at her residence, 4012 Delmar boulevard. Mrs. Booth for many years has entertained the two boards at the first meeting after the annual election. The members retiring from the board are: Mrs. Howard Bailey, advisory regent; Mrs. J. M. Long, third vice regent; Mrs. G. A. Pauly Jr., registrar; Mrs. G. H. Downey, director of press; Mrs. N. L. Moffitt, director of hospitality. The new officers: Regent, Mrs. C. W. Nelson; first vice regent, Mrs. F. L. Scott; second vice regent, Mrs. S. M. Tipton; third vice regent, Mrs. J. W. Harris; recording secretary, Mrs. A. P. Vogelgesang; corresponding secretary, Miss Hallie Baker; treasurer, Mrs. G. N. Martin; registrar, Mrs. W. B. Trask; historian, Mrs. J. R. Lionberger; chaplain, Mrs. J. C. Crowdus; director of music, Mrs. W. N. Weatherford; director of hospitality, Mrs. R. S. Bettis; director of press, Mrs. A. M. Wilson. The former regent, Mrs. J. S. Calfee, becomes the advisory regent.

The meeting was followed by a luncheon, after which Mrs. Booth presented bouquets to Mrs. Howard Bailey, Mrs. Wallace Delafield, Mrs. J. S. Calfee and Mrs. C. W. Nelson.

The next meeting of the chapter will be held Friday at 2 o'clock at the Jefferson Memorial.

The Woman's Club of the St. Louis University School of Medicine will meet tomorrow at the Art Museum. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m. and at 2 o'clock Miss Mary Powell will address the club.

The Shakspeare Drama Study Club met Nov. 14 at the home of Mrs. George C. Richardson, 5831 Clemens avenue. Mrs. Eretus Burt, president, presided. A lecture on King Richard III was given by the Rev. R. C. Atchison of St. Paul's Episcopal church, Alton. Tea was served by Mrs. Richardson assisted by Mrs. L. R. Gallaher, 6045 Kingsbury boulevard. The next meeting will be held Dec. 12, at the home of Mrs. L. Lynch, 7253 Forsythe boulevard. Prof. I. Lippencott will give a lecture.

The joint Council of Women's Auxiliaries to the various trade unions in St. Louis will meet Friday at 1:30 at Friendship Hall, 4360 Washington boulevard. The Photo Engravers Auxiliary will be the hostess.

On Monday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock the International Relations Study Group will have its first meeting of the season. Miss Grace Adams with a group of Thyrsus Players from Washington University will present "Journey's End," by R. C. Sheriff.

At the meeting Tuesday Carolyn Risque Jania, sculptress, will speak and give a demonstration of clay modeling. The subject will be "How Sculpture Grows." Tea will be served by the hostesses of the afternoon, Mrs. C. O. Stoutz and Miss Emily McLean (Washington) assisted by Miss Grace Ive (Illinois Wesleyan College), Mrs. John Auer and Mrs. Leo Loeb (Johns Hopkins) and Miss May Littledale (Washington).

At 1:30 o'clock Tuesday the Interior Decoration Study Group will discuss the subject "Draperies."

A Thanksgiving dinner and bridge will be given for the members and friends Saturday, at 6 p. m.

Members of the Harmony Literary Club will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Gordon Davis, 567 Washington place, East St. Louis, Ill., on Friday at 1 p. m. The response to roll call will be world news. Mrs. C. M. McMahon will review "Fall Flights," written by Eleanor Gizyka, and a round-table discussion of the book will follow. The prize short story will be read by Mrs. J. P. Funk.

Plans for an open meeting to be addressed by Miss Mary Anderson, head of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, were made Tuesday at a luncheon meeting of the St. Louis County Board of League of Woman Voters, at the Brownson Hotel, Maplewood. The meeting will be held in Webster Groves, early in February, under the auspices of the Department of Women in Industry, of which Mrs. Joseph Rogers is county chairman.

Arrangements also were made for the January meetings of the state board, which will be held in Kirkwood and University City. Mrs. John H. Herron, county president, presided.

The West End Woman's Republican Club will hold its regular monthly luncheon meeting Wednesday at the Parkview Hotel at noon. The president, Mrs. George J. Dietz, will preside. A Thanksgiving program, arranged by Mrs. J. Edwin Allen, chairman, will be given by woman speakers and singers.

Mrs. Donald MacDonald, lecturer, will discuss "Looking Backward and Forward." Mrs. F. B. Miller, former president of the Tuesday Literary Club and present chairman of the International Relations Committee of the eighth district, will talk of "International Peace." Miss Vivia Marks will speak of "Women and Legislation."

Mrs. Henry Studt will sing a group of songs, with Mrs. Edith Hoffmeyer at the piano.

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Railway Mail Association held its regular meeting at the Hotel Saun Tuesday with Mrs. C. L. Hatch and Mrs. L. W. Maysack as hostesses. The meeting of Dec. 2 will be at the Cabanne M. E. Church, with Mrs. E. J. Mullins and Mrs. A. K. as hostesses.

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Clayton will hold a business and social meeting at the Hotel Brownson, Maplewood, tomorrow evening. The program

Two cheerful young ladies were wanted to rent the spare room in a private home. A Post-Dispatch Room For Rent advertisement found them promptly.

Lovely Marion Lee of "My Girl Friday" prefers the PLAIN BOB. Proper care keeps her hair in wonderful condition.

The easy way to have soft, wavy, gleaming hair..

THE modern sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day models of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why it's so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair, which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It helps stop falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

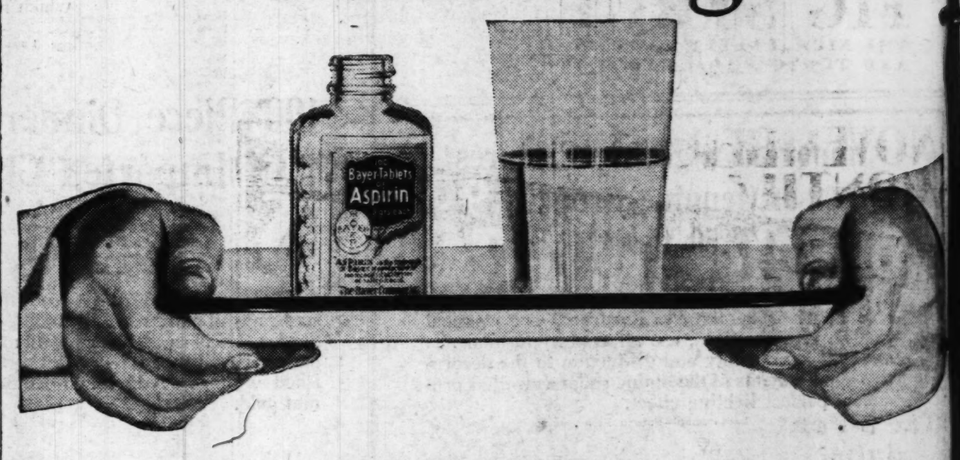
Needless Suffering



The next time a headache makes you stay at home—

Or some other ache or pain prevents keeping an engagement—

Remember Bayer Aspirin! There is scarcely any pain it cannot relieve, and relieve promptly.

These tablets give real relief, or millions would not continue to take them. They are perfectly harmless, or the medical profession would not constantly prescribe them.

Don't be a martyr to unnecessary pain. To colds that might so easily be checked; to neuritis, neuralgia; to the pains peculiar to women; or any suffering for which Bayer Aspirin is such an effective antidote.

For your own protection, buy the genuine. Bayer is safe. Always the same. It never depresses the heart, so use it as often as needed; but the cause of any pain can be treated only by a doctor.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It helps stop falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

To Caulfield From Caulfield, Mo.
By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 23.—Gov. Caulfield today received the first letter from the new Missouri postoffice bearing his name. The letter, postmarked Caulfield, Mo., was from the small station near West Plains, in Howell County, which recently received its rating as a postoffice. Gov. Caulfield said he would save the envelope as a souvenir.

U. D. C. to San Antonio in 1930.

BILOXI, Miss., Nov. 23.—San Antonio, Tex., was selected today as the 1930 convention by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, meeting here. Hot Springs, Ark., asked for the 1935 meeting.

MISSOURI Mother's Plan is succeeding...

WHEN your child is headachy, bilious, feverish, half-sick, with no appetite or energy, nine times out of ten, just one thing is to blame; constipation!

Cleanse the little digestive tract with California Fig Syrup and see how breath is sweetened; coated tongue cleared; eyes brightened. More than two doses are seldom necessary to drive away all signs of a congested system; make a child happy.

There isn't a child who doesn't love its rich, fruity flavor. Improved appetite, digestion and assimilation always follow its use. A child's entire system is toned and strengthened.

Mrs. J. B. Thurman, 3028 Arlington Ave., St. Louis, says: "Since I found out how good California Fig Syrup is, I have kept some in the house. It never fails to help my children. I give it at the first sign of upsets or colds. Their wonderful condition proves this a good plan." Caution: The genuine always bears the name California.

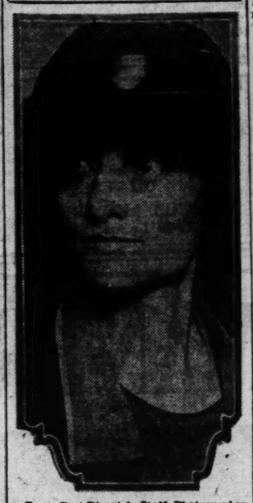
BANKRUPT



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.
MRS. BLANCHE HITZMAN KAUNE.

WOMAN REALTY DEALER BANKRUPT; FAILS FOR $60,135

Mrs. Blanche Hitzman Kaune Lists Assets of Only $873, Including Clothing and Furniture.

Eleven years in the real estate business, during which she achieved a reputation as the most successful woman real estate operator in St. Louis, have left Mrs. Blanche Hitzman Kaune with nothing but personal property valued at $873 to offset $60,135 in debts, according to her voluntary bankruptcy petition filed in Federal Court.

The woman who aroused the envy of veteran realty dealers in 1925 when she pocketed a $40,000 commission in one transaction during the height of the real estate boom, now lists her assets as three suits, seven dresses, three hats, four pairs of shoes, one umbrella, one trunk, one tapestry, one fur coat and other wearing apparel valued at $73, and household furnishings valued at $800.

Her liability schedule includes a judgment for $30,000 entered against her in September as a result of an unsuccessful venture into the granite business. This obligation, according to her lawyer, Taylor R. Young, prompted her to seek relief in bankruptcy. Other debts include promissory notes for small amounts, lawyers' fees and unpaid bills.

A Bookkeeper in 1918.

Mrs. Kaune, who is 32 years old and operates as the Hitzman Realty Co. in the Buder Building, declined to discuss her difficulties, but Attorney Young declared it was her intention to pay all her obligations eventually—with the exception of the judgment.

Mrs. Kaune quit a position as bookkeeper for a fur company in 1918 and sold her first piece of real estate for a commission of $316. For five years she dealt in subdivision lots, averaging $7000 a month in sales, then turned her talents to operations in large properties. The $40,000 commission was obtained by a transfer of the Buckingham Hotel property.

Charges Error in Judgment.

In the recent litigation, it was alleged that Mrs. Kaune, her brother, R. C. Hitzman, and Ralph Pearson, organized the Ozark Red Granite Co. and failed to pay for their stock. An option was obtained on a quarry at Graniteville, Mo., but the option was not exercised. Dr. Lucian DuGuay sued for an $8000 commission, alleging he had made a contract for the delivery of stone with the understanding that the company owned the quarry.

Dr. DuGuay obtained a judgment and, on finding the company had no assets, sued the organizers to make them pay for her stock. After a hearing, Circuit Judge Hartmann gave judgment in favor of the company against Mrs. Kaune for $30,000; Hitzman for $19,900 and Pearson for $100, the total representing the amount of the stock. In her bankruptcy petition, Mrs. Kaune alleged the judgment was erroneously entered.

Fire in Hollis Hall, Harvard.
By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass Nov. 23.—Prof. Charles Townsend Copeland and 100 Harvard students were driven out of Hollis Hall, Harvard yard, early today by a fire. The fire was confined to the suite in which it started. A cigarette is thought to have caused the fire.

TO PICK PICTURES TOMORROW FOR ARTISTS' GUILD EXHIBIT

Jury to Choose Works to Be Shown, Beginning Dec. 1; Several Prizes Offered.

The jury of selection for the eighteenth annual exhibition of the St. Louis Artists' Guild tomorrow will choose the pictures which will be hung for the exhibition opening Dec. 1.

The jury includes the following painters: Mary McColl, Kathryn Cherry, Fred C. Carpenter, Mildred Bailey Carpenter, T. Kajiwara, Frank Nuderscher and E. Oscar Thalinger, and three sculptors, Nancy Coonsman Hahn, Caroline Risque and Adele Schulenberg.

A jury of artists from other cities will award the prizes on Dec. 7. Among these are the St. Louis Artists' Guild prize of $500 for the best work of art, and the Chamber of Commerce prize of $350 for the best industrial scene in or near St. Louis.

Prizes also are offered for paintings, landscapes and sculpture, among the donors being W. K. Bixby, C. D. P. Hamilton, Oscar Johnson Jr., Mrs. George Warren Brown, L. W. Baldwin, Mrs. Ernst K. Stix, Mr. and Mrs. Matt Werner and Frank P. Crunden.

CHICAGO STOCK SHOW TO OPEN

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—In the van of 12,000 head of blue-blooded livestock which will compete in the annual International Stock Show starting next week, the first entries arrived today after a 2000 mile trip from the University of California at Davis, Cal. The shipment included five prize steers and a flock of sheep.

University of California has a reputation at the livestock show, having won the grand championship steer award three times in the last 12 years. Its sheep also have won many blue ribbons and in 1923 and 1925 the university won the grand championship awards for wethers. The exposition opens Friday and continues until Dec. 7.

"TRADING COMPANY" AT VOCATIONAL SCHOOL

Organized to Duplicate Conditions of Actual Business in Course.

The Vocational Trading Co. has been organized, for instructional purposes only, for the benefit of the young men and women in the office technique course of Hadley Vocational School. It is carrying on its make-believe business in the commercial division of the institution, which recently was given possession of the building formerly used by the Crow School, 3325 Bell avenue.

The company does business from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. In order to enter the "employ" of the Vocational Trading Co. the student, being a graduate of a grade school, must do satisfactory work in preliminary instruction at Hadley in the use of simple office appliances, blank forms, records, checking methods, minor office procedure, filing and solution of problems arising from actual office situations.

As general manager of the "company," the instructor is assisted by an older student known as supervisor. Every "employe" is given a chance to fill each position in the office, thereby gaining intimate knowledge of the varied transactions of office business. Promotion in the class comes, as in the business world, through successful work and graduates, 20 is expected, will be in possession of knowledge similar to that acquired in actual business experience.

"Orders" are received by the company and the student workers check, price, bill and post them. Stenography students have occasion to practice their work under typical conditions, and the same is true of bookkeepers, typists and calculators. Each "employe" is called on to make decisions and take responsibility. Equipment like that ordinarily found in downtown offices is used, including the addressograph, mimeograph, ditto and multigraph machines, the cash register and adding and calculating machines.

Contacts have been established with St. Louis office executives by sponsors of the course. Actual business methods have been studied in arranging this training for junior office workers, which replaces the old-style theoretical methods. The aim is to reduce the length of apprenticeship.

Additional space for pupils in shorthand, typewriting, duplicating, calculating and other forms of commercial instruction has been provided by utilization of the old Crow School building.

MRS. HELEN L. WISE FUNERAL

Services to Be at All Saints' at 10 A. M. Tomorrow.

Funeral services for Mrs. Helen L. Wise, who died at her home, 6621 Washington avenue, Friday afternoon, will be held at All Saints' Church, 6419 Clemens avenue, at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Mrs. Wise had been ill for six weeks. She was 52 years old. She is survived by her husband, Charles E. Wise; one son, Charles H., and two daughters, Misses Helen and Henrietta Wise. A brother, Gregory J. Hayden, and sister, Miss Fabiola Hayden, reside at O'Fallon, Mo. Mrs. Wise was a member of a pioneer St. Charles County family and was a direct descendant of Gov. Fletcher, the first native-born Governor of Missouri.

COMMITTEE WILL PROMOTE BUSINESS WITH WICHITA, KAN.

A special Chamber of Commerce committee, headed by L. W. Baldwin, president of the Missouri Pacific Lines, has been named to cooperate with a similar group of the Wichita Board of Commerce in developing a more friendly business relationship between St. Louis and Wichita.

Other members named to the committee are: F. B. Eiseman, vice president, Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co.; Dudley French, manager, Graham Paper Co.; M. E. Holderness, vice president, First National Bank, and Dan W. Jones, president, Universal Aviation Co.

The action of the chamber in creating the committee was an outgrowth of the friendliness which developed between the two cities after a chamber delegation visited Wichita, and a Wichita delegation returned the visit.

The representative committees of the chamber and the Wichita Board of Commerce will be called upon to act from time to time on such matters as directly concern the two cities, and may be carried out to the mutual benefit of both.

A Remarkable new Gift!

Makes it fun to cook eggs!
HANKSCRAFT Electric EGG COOKER
$5.50 Wrapped in attractive colorful gift package, already for mailing.
3 Simple Steps

1 With current plugged in, place eggs in cooking tray and replace top.

2 Pour 2 to 5 teaspoons of water in top, depending upon length of cooking time desired.

3 When steam stops coming from top, remove eggs. They will be cooked exactly right.

This amazing new egg cooker is the outstanding electrical gift. It boils, poaches, scrambles and steam fries eggs in live steam, right at the breakfast table. No timing or watching necessary, yet eggs are cooked just as you want them. Plugs in socket just like an electric toaster.

Self-timing; Completely Automatic
Electric circuit is completed by water poured in top. Electricity turns water to steam and cooking starts almost immediately. When water completely disappears eggs are cooked just right. No moving parts to get out of order or coils to burn out.

3 Colors to Choose From
A novel, practical gift, its colorful beauty makes the Hankscraft Cooker most attractive. The porcelain base and top-cup come in three shades—delicate tints of yellow, green and blue, and the cooker is topped with a gleaming silverlike dome.
See a demonstration at your electrical dealer, department store or electric light company.

Where U. S. and Britain Differ On Navy Power

Winston Churchill Says That the Maximum Became the Minimum in Light Cruisers and That Cost of Armament Is Not Reduced by Washington Conference.

HEREWITH is presented the second of ten articles by Winston Spencer Churchill, British statesman, on his impressions during a recent visit to the United States. Churchill, who was first lord of the admiralty at the beginning of the World War, was chancellor of the exchequer in the Baldwin cabinet which went out of office when Ramsay MacDonald became prime minister. He has served in Liberal, Coalition and Conservative cabinets.

ARTICLE II.
By WINSTON CHURCHILL.
(Copyright, 1929, by Winston Churchill. No Quotations Allowed.)

TO do justice to the naval argument between the United States and Great Britain it is necessary to tread again a considerable portion of our recent path. The United States, when a neutral, has always resented intensely the interference with her shipping and commerce arising out of the quarrels of others. The lamentable war of 1812 arose from this specific cause. During the early years of the Great War, America was antagonized by the restrictions and injury inflicted upon her trade by the British blockade of Germany. On more than one occasion it looked as if the allies, and particularly England, would have to choose between rendering the blockade ineffective or facing an actual rupture with the United States. There never was the slightest doubt which we should have chosen. It was the settled policy of the British Government in no circumstances to come to a breach with the United States. However, the Germans by the character of their submarine warfare, by the sinking of American vessels and the destruction of many American citizens upon the Lusitania, continually enabled the friends of Britain in the United States to preserve for the allies the necessary rights and facilities of blockade.

U. S. Shifted View in War.

The attitude of the United States during the first two years of the war in enduring so much inconvenience, and more than inconvenience, without losing patience or sympathy for the allied cause is remarkable. It may be compared with the attitude of Lancashire during the American Civil War, when the people, although reduced to idleness and famine by the Northern blockade, nevertheless steadfastly adhered in sentiment to the Northern side on the broad merits of the conflict and on the consequences to human freedom which seemed to be involved. Thus the years of tension and anxiety were passed without any demand being made upon Britain by the United States which would have led to the ruin of the blockade.

All difficulties vanished when America entered the war. The United States as a belligerent has always taken the opposite view of the rights of neutrals from that of the United States as a neutral. American history supplies all the arguments and all the precedents for the most extreme interpretation of the rights both of belligerency and of neutrality at sea. This may not display the highest logical consistency; but it undeniably expresses feelings so natural and so straightforward that every one can understand them. Thus, in due course, the Great War was brought to a successful conclusion.

"Inferior in Battleships."

Meanwhile, however, the earlier vexations of the blockade had led to the beginning of many powerful warships for the purpose of protecting United States commerce. The entry of participation in the war and of the struggle with the German submarines procured the completion of these vessels and the construction of others. More battleships were not, however, needed for the common cause of the Allied and associated Powers. The British fleet, already outnumbering the Germans by two to one and reinforced by the powerful American battle squadron, had already an overwhelming preponderance. Britain, whose life depended upon restraining the submarine attack, deeply absorbed in the task of feeding herself, of supplying her overseas armies, of provisioning the Allies, and of clearing the seas for the transport to Europe of the enormous American armies which were in formation, built no battleships. The large vessels after the Hood, which had been begun before the American entry into the war. Department of Justice Proceeds Against Impressment of Negro Labor in Florida

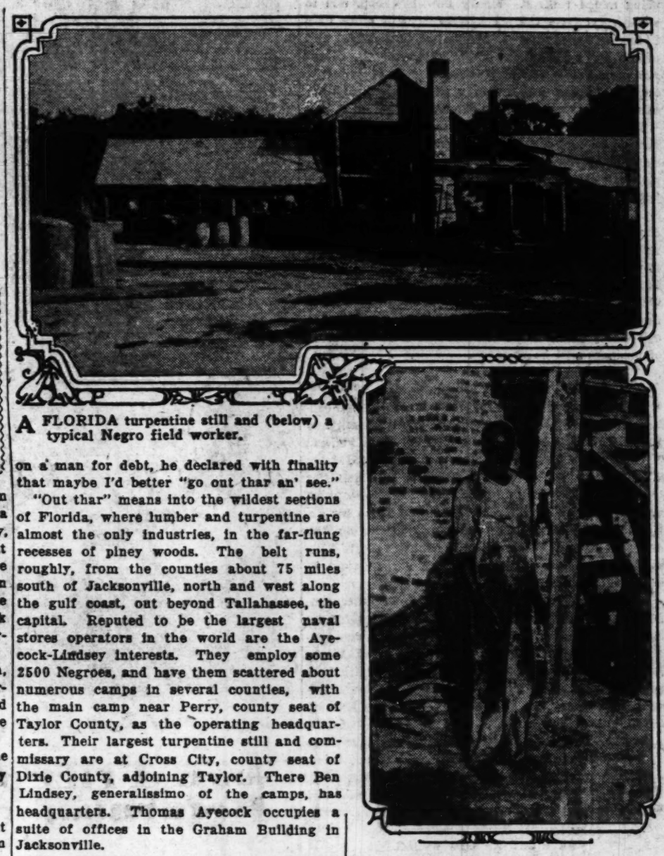
Turpentine Camp Hands Who Quit Employers While in Debt to Them Punished by Six Months on Chain Gang Under State's "Fraud" Law.

TURPENTINE NIGGERS

The story of a Florida lawsuit which has resulted in the impressment of Negro labor.

By ORLAND KAY ARMSTRONG,
Former Head of Department of Journalism, University of Florida, Gainesville, Fla.



A FLORIDA turpentine still and (below) a typical Negro field worker.

A TRUCK load of Negroes bound from Jacksonville to the headquarters of a large turpentine camp in Taylor County, Florida, pulled up at Live Oak, county seat of Suwanee County, and parked near the Courthouse. County Judge A. C. Johnson looked out of his window just in time to see three Negro men make a dash from the truck and scatter about the yard in three different directions.

The driver of the truck, a huge white man, leaped from his seat and started in hot pursuit. All the Negroes outdistanced him and disappeared. In a moment he burst into the County Judge's office.

"I want a warrant for three niggers!" he demanded of Judge Johnson, between angry and heaving puffs of breath.

"What for?" asked the Judge.

"For running away!" he said. "I bought 'em in Jacksonville off a man. Takin' 'em out to that big camp at Perry. And now they jumped their contract."

Paid $50 a Head; Requests Warrant.

"What did you pay for them?" Johnson asked.

"Fifty dollars a head. Get me a warrant, and let's get after 'em."

"How much"—asked the Judge, ignoring for the moment the demand for a warrant—"do you usually pay for turpentine niggers?"

"Sometimes I pay as high as $150 in Jacksonville for a good buck nigger. I drive 'em out to the camps, and the turpentine men take 'em off my hands."

The Judge was impressed, but refused to grant any warrants for the run-away Negroes.

"Why not?" the driver demanded angrily. "The Judges down our way get 'em for us when they run away!"

This did not happen before the Civil War. I sat in Judge Johnson's office just a few days ago and he told me of this incident, that had occurred just a few weeks before that. Johnson, a young lawyer, had recently been appointed to the County Judge's office for Suwanee County.

"I had heard about Negroes being imprisoned for jumping their accounts, but I decided then and there not to issue any warrants for it."

Negroes Imprisoned for Leaving Employer.

A man cannot be imprisoned for simple debt. That is, Federal and State laws take pains to say he can't. He may work for whom he chooses, and if he violates a contract there is a legal remedy.

But a law in Florida is responsible for the imprisonment of many an ignorant Negro for no other crime than leaving his employer, and for nothing more nor less than simple debt.

The law was passed in 1919, under the governorship of Sidney J. Catts, who in his campaign promised the backwoods people of Florida he would "put the nigger back in his place"; who was tried in Federal Court for peonage, or illegal impressment of Negroes, shortly after his term expired, but acquitted.

Recently at Tampa a jury which deliberated 24 hours was unable to agree on his guilt or innocence of a charge of aiding a big counterfeiting ring. He will be tried again.

My curiosity to find out about this law was aroused by repeated assertions of Negroes in lumber and naval stores camps that, regardless of pay, conditions or treatment, they were not free to leave their employers. They would be put on the chain gang for six months if they did. As one Negro explained it, "Maybe you gits paid, an' maybe you don't. But if you run away an' they ketch you—wham! On the gang for six months." When I demurred that you couldn't imprison a man for debt, he declared with finality that maybe I'd better "go out thar an' see."

"Out thar" means into the wildest sections of Florida, where lumber and turpentine are almost the only industries, in the far-flung recesses of piney woods. The belt runs, roughly, from the counties about 75 miles south of Jacksonville, north and west along the gulf coast, out beyond Tallahassee, the capital. Reputed to be the largest naval stores operators in the world are the Ayecock-Lindsey interests. They employ some 2500 Negroes, and have them scattered about numerous camps in several counties, with the main camp near Perry, county seat of Taylor County, as the operating headquarters. Their largest turpentine still and commissary are at Cross City, county seat of Dixie County, adjoining Taylor. There Ben Lindsey, generalissimo of the camps, has headquarters. Thomas Ayecock occupies a suite of offices in the Graham Building in Jacksonville.

Although familiar with this country I had never gone out to see how this law operates until I had picked up Buck Jackson, a Negro about 20 years old, on a highway north of Perry. He wanted a ride, and wanted it badly. He was escaping from a turpentine camp.

"When we gits beyond Live Oak they won't chase me no mo'," he declared.

"Who won't?"

"Boss men. I'se runnin' away. Hid in a furniture truck out o' Perry, an' laid low all las' night."

Recruiters Promise High Wages, Easy Hours.

Buck's story went back to the account of his being "recruited" by a Negro who made glowing promises of high wages and easy hours; turned over to a white driver who took him—not to the "town" promised by the recruiter, but to the turpentine headquarters in the piney woods, where he was assigned to a smaller camp miles further on. He had worked about three months and had drawn only a pittance in money and a few items of clothing. He had "boxed trees" (clipped the sides of pine trees so the sap could run out) under the boss man who, like most turpentine drivers of the larger operators, wore a gun at his side. He had seen men try to escape, and had seen them caught, lined up, handcuffed, taken into Perry and sentenced to the chain gang for six months.

Furthermore, his cousin, Jack Brown, was out there, or had been until he had disappeared, and word came back that Jack was on the gang.

I went to see State Senator E. Waybright in Jacksonville, a young lawyer with a record of some 12 years in the Legislature of Florida that stamps him as a coming leader.

Denies Law Exists, Statutes Show It.

"There is no such law on the books," he assured me. Then we looked through his statutes and found this: "Obtaining a thing of value on contract to perform services with intent to defraud." Senator Waybright was surprised. "That law was passed while I was a member of the House in 1919," he said. "I hope I didn't vote for it!"

And here is the law: (Page 3509 Compiled General Laws of Florida): "Section 7306: Any person in this State who shall, with intent to injure and defraud, under and by reason of a contract or promise to perform labor or service, procure or obtain money or other things of value as a credit, or as advances, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or by imprisonment not exceeding six months.

"Section 7304: In all prosecutions for a violation of the foregoing section this failure or refusal, without just cause, to perform such labor or service or to pay for the money or other thing of value so obtained or procured shall be prima facie evidence of the intent to injure and defraud."

What a legal masterpiece this is! A misdemeanor is set forth, and then prima facie evidence defined as to the very intent to defraud! There is not an appellate jurist in the whole country who would uphold as constitutional that last section.

Governor in Senate When Law Passed.

Gov. Doyle E. Carlton was a member of the Senate when that law was passed, as were numerous others who have maintained prominence or climbed to higher political honors in the 10 years.

To a large number of these legislators I sent a letter asking if they recalled what interests were backing this law. To clear up any doubt to to how that statute was enacted, here is the statement of James E. Calkins, president of the Senate in 1919, long a leader of politics in Florida, now practicing law in Miami:

"The influence behind the passage of this law was the naval store and lumber operators of this State."

The existence of such a law on the books of an enlightened commonwealth in the twentieth century reflects the whole sordid story of the "commissary system" of Negro employment in the Far South, particularly in lumber and naval stores, but not at all infrequent in large plantations. Under this system, the Negro hires out. Sambo, we'll say, gets a job dipping boxes (dipping the resin sap from the trees into barrels to be distilled into spirits). He is to work piece work, which means the "boss man" is supposed to keep account of the trees he dips (an impossible task when the boss man has a dozen or more dippers to look after).

Sambo Must Buy From Commissary.

Sambo must get his supplies of all kinds from the commissary owned and operated by the company. In most instances the operators will not tolerate the hands trading elsewhere. It is common knowledge that prices at the company commissaries are from 50 to 100 per cent higher than at other stores. The food stock is meager, consisting for the most part of grits, rice and canned goods. I examined numerous commissaries without finding a trace of fresh vegetables or the essentials for a balanced diet. The cost of a slab of Western steak would take all the wages Sambo is supposed to get for a week's work.

The commissary clerk keeps a record for each company employe or family. Sambo's purchases are checked against his wages—at the end of the month. Lumber and turpentine camps and the operators employing Negro laborers generally pay off once a month.

"Why?" asked a prominent member of the bar in Florida, who was discussing the question with me. "You know why! To keep the niggers eternally in debt to them."

When pay day comes the workman draws his money. "Here, Sam, is $5. You owe the company the rest." Or, "Sam, here's your slip. You still owe the company $2."

Few of the Negroes Can Read or Write.

There is no recourse. No checking up. No chance to secure justice, if injustice—inadvertent or otherwise—has been done. Not more than 25 per cent of the unskilled Negro workmen of the Far South can read and write. When to this system is added the evils permitted by the Florida "fraud" law, the depths of an unjust labor condition have been reached: Recruiting, irresponsible and fraudulent promises. The commissary. Terrorizing workmen by armed guards. Six months on the chain gang if they try to escape—on grounds that they "obtained a thing of value on contract to perform service with intent to defraud!"

I went out to try to find Jack Brown, former woodsman and now reputed convict, and to see how the majesty of the law is upheld in Taylor County, the center for the largest operators in Florida. I went first to see the County Attorney and inquired if he remembered prosecuting Jack Brown, Negro, late of the Ayecock-Lindsey employment, for jumping his account.

"Prosecute him? Why no. Those men aren't prosecuted. They plead guilty."

Next to the office of County Judge John O. Culpepper. Judge Culpepper is a large man with serious mein and ponderous importance. I asked him if he recalled this Negro.

"I have so many I can't remember 'em," he assured me. "But we'll look him up."

"Judge, if this man is on your county chain gang for jumping his account, how does that differ from imprisonment for debt?"

"What? For debt? The law plainly says that it's fraud when they jump their contract. Not debt—fraud! Now, young man, some judges don't pay no attention to that law; but here's one Judge that does."

"What penalty do you give them?" I asked.

"Six months, always. That's the limit."

"Do they have a trial?"

"Of course. But the turpentine men catch 'em, they're turned over to the Sheriff, and they plead guilty. I send a lot of the Ayecock-Lindsey niggers to the gang that way."

Chain Gang Prisoners Work on Roads.

Judge Culpepper directed me to see the Sheriff and let him look through his records for Jack Brown. Sheriff F. L. Lipscomb was very obliging. He could find no such man on his records. Perhaps the clerk could. The clerk searched carefully, while I kept up a running fire of conversation with these two officials on the system of imprisoning run-away Negroes.

"The big companies have to keep their Negroes that way," Lipscomb told me, "to protect themselves. It's fraud when they jump an account without settling up."

I learned from the Sheriff the use to which chain gang prisoners are put in Taylor County. The roads are being built with them. And Ben Lindsey is chairman of the road commissioners of Taylor County.

"And he's built us some good roads," the Sheriff declared. "We haven't had so many

FEDERAL DISTRICT ATTORNEY ORDERED TO PROSECUTE ANY VIOLATORS OF PEONAGE LAWS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE officials announced today that the District Attorney for the Jacksonville District had been instructed to proceed immediately against any violators of the anti-peonage laws in the Florida turpentine regions.

The report of F. O. Cox, a special investigator in the Department's Bureau of Investigation, was sent recently to the department for study. Cox's findings were so complete that he was instructed to co-operate immediately with the District Attorney.

The Department of Justice regards the disclosures in the turpentine regions as highly important and if necessary will send an Assistant Attorney-General to Jacksonville to take charge of the proceedings. As yet, no request for legal aid has been received.

Original information upon which Cox's findings were based was developed by Orland Kay Armstrong, former head of the Department of Journalism of the University of Florida and at present in the Department of Journalism of Drury College, Springfield, Mo.

Lloyd George Replies to President Hoover

American President Praised for Facing Facts, but English Liberal Says Real Problem Is Land Armaments and the Forbidding of War Altogether.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
War-Time Premier of England.

LONDON, Nov. 23.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S Armistice day address has had a curious reaction on European opinion. Although designed to be a pacific and pacifying utterance, it has had the effect of stirring into expression the hidden forces which make for war and of giving the impression that another war between nations is not so impossible as some of us had hoped.

One reason for this result is that the President has refused to suppress facts merely in order to create a feeling of sloppy optimism not justified by realities. He recognizes that an agreement signed by all the civilized nations of the world to outlaw war does not necessarily mean that sanguinary conflicts between nations have thereby been safely eliminated from the list of contingencies against which statesmen have to provide.

He enumerates the existing causes of possible friction, "There are fears, distrusts, and smoldering injuries amongst nations which are the tinder of war. Nor does a single quarter of a century during all the ages of human experience warrant the assumption that war will not occur again."

Courage in Declaration.

It required courage in a ruler of a great people, proud of their achievement of navigating into port the pact abolishing war to utter these two sentences. "If there is peace, it is an armed peace." He points out that there are 10,000,000 more men under arms than before the Great War and that "the instruments of destruction are more potent than they were during the Great War."

But the sentences which will be quoted again and again by the militarists of Europe are those in which he encourages preparedness against possible aggression from any and every quarter. "There are the fears of invasion and domination bequeathed to all humanity from its former wars." There are perils to liberty from external source. Until these fears are banished and agencies of peace have been more firmly established, he is "for adequate preparedness as a guarantee that no foreign soldiers shall step upon the soil of our country."

"Proper defense requires a military strength relative to that of other nations."

He has much too practical a mind not to apprehend the full implication of these suggestive words. France has an army of over 4,000,000 (including trained reserves) armed with much more potent instruments of destruction than those with which its pre-war army was equipped. Italy, in order to be safe from the possibility of aggression from such a redoubtable force, must also have a well equipped army of millions trained to war. Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Russia—all recently victims of invasion—can use similar arguments for training and equipping their millions.

Much Left Untouched.

Each year the weapons of carnage are becoming more terrible. President Hoover must know that naval disarmament alone barely touches this problem. It will not even be discussed at the Five-Power Conference. In the main, the menace to peace comes from land armaments.

Does President Hoover intend to use the whole of his great influence to cut down these great armies? Unless he does, the London Conference will not advance very far on the road of peace along which he so fervently pleads the nations of the earth should travel. Last year, the American Government adhered to the deplorable position taken up by the Conservative Government of Great Britain that the enormous reserves of men and armaments possessed by European nations should be ignored in all disarmament discussions. It was a cowardly and disastrous course.

Does President Hoover intend to abandon this futile attitude? Britain has already done so. But alone she can accomplish nothing. If the representatives of the United States of America on the Disarmament Commission will join hands with the representatives of Great Britain in pressing for a reduction of these huge armies aggregating 30,000,000 men to the dimensions of a defensive and police force, then, and only then will there be the slightest hope of converting the Kellogg pact into a reality.

Otherwise, as President Hoover implies in his momentous address, we cannot hope to

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

How to Hymn the Ozarks.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

RECENTLY you published an article on the Ozarks by a Springfield correspondent, which was very much to the point. In part, it dwelt upon the wildly exaggerated statements that have served to handicap this part of Missouri.

The Ozark country is the victim of the worst advertising in the world. One group calls it a land flowing with milk and honey—and, of course, fried chicken. (You can get good fried chicken almost anywhere, if you try.) They compare it with Switzerland, with the Adirondacks, and various other localities with which it has nothing in common. It is "God's country," the "land of a million smiles," a "sportsman's paradise," and, above all, a "Mecca for the tourist." No part of the country has ever been so described before! Another group calls the Ozarks a wretched, impoverished region of which the principal features are hillbillies, razorback hogs and log cabins.

Rarely indeed does it occur to anyone to select one or two of the many really good points of the Ozark section and attempt to "play them up" intelligently and with adherence to plain fact. In this age of advertising, no community can be sold merely with fried chicken or a "million smiles," or even Mecca—which my atlas tells me is nowhere near Southern Missouri.

In poor, decadent New England they have learned something about community advertising. In a little folder issued by the New England Council there is a short article by Walter Prichard Eaton. Mr. Eaton knows his subject, and knows how to write about it without departing from the truth. I quote in part:

> New England has 600 miles of mountain trails through deep forests and over mile-high summits. It has hundreds upon hundreds of miles of seacoast—wave-battered granite buffeting the gray Atlantic, and level sand warm to the lip of bay waters.
> It has thousands of beautiful lakes at the foot of green hills or hidden in cool woods. It has mile after mile of paved highway leading to these trails and beaches and lakes. It has golf courses everywhere, in a climate where fairways do not burn. In summer it holds relief from southern heat and city dust, and in winter its hills are a white invitation to skis and snowshoes.
> But all this is still not New England. New England is more than mountain, lake and ocean, golf course and hotel, bathing beach and forest trail. It is a land of ancient memories dear to every American; of landscapes mellowed by 300 years of human occupation; of villages grown gray and lovely under immemorial elms; of houses proud with the grace of the eighteenth century, and fields where our fathers fought for freedom. New England offers recreation in full variety. But recreation means re-creation, and it offers that, too—a re-creation of the spirit by its unique and old-world charm; by its rich and beautiful reminders of our national history. Summer or winter, it has rewards for every visitor.

Nothing about Switzerland, nothing about fried chicken, nothing about Mecca. Let's look up a writer like that for the Ozarks.

Consolidated Schools in Arkansas.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THREE years ago John E. Martineau campaigned for Governor of Arkansas with the slogan, "Better Roads to Better Schools." Mr. Martineau has resigned the Governorship to take a position on the Federal bench but his program has been carried forward until today we find 655 busses hauling 24,173 children in the rural districts to school each day, while three years ago there were only 108 busses transporting 3136 pupils.

This is a practical instance of linking good roads with an improved school system. We find in one county alone that 46 busses are operated by school districts, while in another county 2000 boys and girls are thus transported. In addition to the increased educational advantages to students afforded by large community schools, officials have found it cheaper to furnish free conveyance to children than to maintain numerous one-and-two-room schools in all parts of the State.

Wolves and Police Dogs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HUNTERS are in the field and forest and as usual the open season for German police dogs, mistaken for wolves, is on. The latest case of mistaken identity comes from Wyoming, where a hunter appeared at the Green River County Courthouse to claim a wolf bounty and found that the animal he had shot and skinned was the Sheriff's police dog.

The hunters, in their worthy and sometimes monetary desires to get a wolf, might practice a likewise worthy restraint and caution before pulling their triggers. It is difficult, often, to differentiate between the wolf and the police dog, especially for the inexperienced. One difference is that dogs bark and the wolf howls. It were better that the undecided hunter allow a possible wolf to escape rather than destroy a valuable and utilitarian German sheepherd dog. And a great deal more humane.

K.

EVOLUTION OF THE LOBBY.

Beginning with the first Congress of the United States, the lobby in one form or another has been a potent and an ineradicable force in national politics. In fact, some historians insist that the capital was located in Washington as a result of a trade between two lobbying groups—the bankers and business men of New England, who wanted national assumption of state debts, and the Virginians, who wanted the seat of government on the Potomac.

Hamilton's plan for the funding of the national debt and assumption of state debts by the National Government brought forth the first of many lobby scandals. Senator William MacLay of Pennsylvania kept a daily journal during the First Congress, and by March 9, 1790, he noted that the lobby for the Hamiltonian plan was going full blast. On that day MacLay wrote:

> I do not know that pecuniary influence has actually been used, but I am certain that every kind of management has been practiced and every tool at work that could be thought of. Officers of the Government, clergy, citizens, the Order of Cincinnati and every position under the influence of the Treasury worked for the success of the bill.

Those were the days of the personal and social lobby, and they continued sestfully to the end of the last century. The most colorful pages of lobbying history cover the periods just before and shortly after the Civil War. Then the personal lobby rose to its dizziest heights.

Before the Civil War the rendesvous of lobbyists and Congressmen was Pendleton's Palace of Fortune on Pennsylvania avenue, which was also known as the Hall of the Bleeding Heart. Poore of "Perley's Reminiscences," in a thumbnail description of the combined gambling establishment and restaurant, said:

> The people who nightly assembled to see and take part in the entertainments of the house consisted of candidates for the presidency, Senators and Representatives, members of the Cabinet, editors and journalists and members of the third house, the lobby.

Pendleton's in its palmiest days might have been called the vestibule of the lobby. Its most distinguished professors might be found there. They lent their money to their clients when the "animal scratched too roughly," that is to say, when the play ran against them and they became broke, as they often did.

Pendleton himself was an operator in the lobby. His professional position gave him great facilities. He assisted in the passage of many bills of a private nature, involving considerable sums of money.

When Pendleton died President Buchanan attended his funeral and several Democratic Congressmen were among his pallbearers.

Sam Ward, the self-styled "king of the lobby," operated in Washington after the Civil War. His headquarters were in the rooms of the Appropriations Committee at the Capitol. In those halcyon days a few "barons" told important committees what to do and lavish amounts of money or securities were placed where they should do the most good. The "hotel women of the lobby," the "vampires," were used to good—or evil—effect on guileless Congressmen. Those colorful days were followed by the Credit Mobilier and Central Pacific land grant scandals, which besmirched some of the highest officials in American public life.

In the last quarter of the century the interests found a more direct way to deal with Congress. They elected their own representatives to the House and Senate. The sugar and steel industries and the railroads were reputed to be the worst offenders. The newspapers referred to certain members of the Senate not by the states they were supposed to represent but as the "Senator from Havemeyer," referring to the head of the Sugar Trust.

With the turn of the century came the new type of lobbyist, the representative of an "association," an "institute" or a "league." How far the new lobbyist had replaced the old was disclosed in the famous Mulhall investigation of 1913 and 1914, brought about by President Wilson's general charge that an insidious lobby was seeking unwarranted changes in the pending tariff bill. Both houses took up the President's allegations and uncovered the workings of the National Manufacturers' Association, still one of the most powerful lobbies in Washington, and still represented by James Emery. But after all the disclosures the Senate committee made no report, and the House committee was content with a few generalizations about the "menace to the free exercise of the legislator's judgment."

No one can say definitely how many "associations" and "leagues" are now represented in Washington. The last compilation revealed 532, ranging from the American Agricultural Association to the Zionist Organization Union. Fast workers like A. J. Arnold of the Taxpayers' League and the Southern Tariff Association organize new groups almost as fast as the printer can furnish letterheads.

The outstanding members of these groups have formed "the Monday Lunch Club" for the avowed purpose of "clearing" information among members. The chairman of the group recently declared that the members "legitimately regard their work as in the nature of ambassadors of American industry located at the nation's capital."

Some of the former legislators "practicing law" at the capital combine the methods of the old and the newer schools of lobbying. They entertain and are entertained, and they can remind their former colleagues of favors rendered. As representatives of an association, they can call on its members to build fires under Congressmen, and they can always present a petition with an imposing list of signers.

One often hears of the "social lobby" in Washington. The term does not, of course, connote any organization with definite boundaries and practices but means the social influence that is brought to bear on members of Congress. The independence of many Congressmen has been sapped by slow and artfully applied social pressure. Ambitious wives and debutante daughters are two of the reasons for the effectiveness of this branch of lobbying.

The ideal defense of the people against that part of the lobby which is subversive of the public interest is to elect legislators who are not susceptible to sinister influences. As the matter is going and has gone from the earliest days of the Republic, only exposure such as that visited upon the tariff lobby by a Senate committee serves any purpose. Laws against lobbying, whether in the state or nation, have wholly failed.

That eternal vigilance which John Philpot Curran said is the price of liberty is also the price of government free from interference by such a persistent meddler as the lobby is.

THE RAILROADS TAKE ACTION.

President Hoover did not call the country's leading business men to the White House to hold prayer meetings for prosperity or to hear sermons on the soundness of things financial. Instead the conferees laid definite plans for constructive works which will allay any fears that might have arisen and will prevent the tendency to sit back idly and see what effect the stock market crash would have on the economic structure. The railroads were first to pledge no letup in construction and even expanded programs. Estimates of their expenditures before the close of 1930 run close to $1,000,000,000, a total not approached since 1923, the banner year of the last two decades for railroad improvement.

Railway Age points out that it is good business, not necessarily altruism or sentiment, that moves the railroads to do this. Improvements are for the dual purposes of enlarging capacity and reducing operating costs, this publication says. Whether greater capacity will be needed soon or not, lower operating costs are always desirable, and both these objectives bring added returns. Money now is cheap, due to withdrawal from the speculative field of more than $3,000,000,000 since Oct. 2. Labor is plentiful and orders for supplies can be filled promptly. These are only a few of the reasons why it is better to launch building projects in a period of momentary calm rather than in boom times.

The favorable impression on the public also is appraised by Railway Age. "In past periods of real or threatened recession in business the rates of the railways almost invariably have been made the objects of attacks by other businesses," it says. By doing their share to maintain and improve business conditions, the rail lines can accomplish much to elevate their position in the public eye. Contributing to prosperity by hiring men and buying supplies will add to the total of circulating capital and so, by stimulating other businesses, will bring direct returns to their own. Most important of all, the fear psychology which had begun to disturb the delicate balance of business will be removed.

THEIR FITNESS QUESTIONED.

Increasing opposition in the Senate to the confirmation of Albert L. Watson of Pennsylvania and Richard J. Hopkins of Kansas, nominated for Federal judgeships by President Hoover, is reported from Washington. Mr. Watson's professional qualities have been questioned, and the fact that Mr. Hopkins accepted money from the Anti-Saloon League for delivering prohibition speeches while occupying the office of Attorney-General of his State reveals him, in Senator Borah's judgment, as "sadly deficient in a sense of propriety."

Washington rumor has it that both of those candidates were originally pronounced unacceptable by Mr. Hoover and Attorney-General Mitchell, who subsequently yielded to political pressure. And Washington surmise is that the rejection of the nomination by the Senate would not be displeasing to the President, who would like very much to take the Federal bench out of politics.

In the circumstances, the public would doubtless approve the Senate's thumbs-down on those nominees. Certainly public opinion sees eye to eye with Mr. Hoover in the necessity of selecting the best material available for the important office of Federal Judge.

WE RIGHT AN OLD WRONG.

Readers of the Post-Dispatch and other intellectual persons will be interested, no doubt, in our very recent and most gratifying triumph in the field of American belles lettres. It is the unannounced change of "Harper's Bazar" into "Harper's Bazaar," the three "a" spelling effective with the November issue. Our part in the restoration of the missing "a" is one that might easily be overlooked, hence our modest mention of it here.

Just 52 years ago this month Vol. 1, No. 1 of this venerable magazine appeared. The first issue described itself as "a repository of fashion, pleasure and instruction," and spelled its name "bazar." Thereafter that had been the spelling until this month. In the June issue of this year, Poet Charles Hanson Towne, the present editor, evidently not realizing that he lived in a glass house, began to throw stones. He suggested if Congress is ever at loss for a new law to pass, that it make it a misdemeanor, "or better still a felony, with a penalty of 10 years in jail and $25,000 fine, to misspell any good old Anglo-Saxon word in an electric sign, on any billboard, or on any street car placard. Likewise all words appropriated from foreign languages." On July 27 the Post-Dispatch pointed out editorially that the complaint was not without its irony, in that there were "three 'a's' in 'bazaar' in the brave and shining days when Poet Towne's generation was learning to spell."

The August issue was on the news stands then. The September number was virtually ready for distribution. No doubt many of the October plates were cast with the folio, "bazar." November was the earliest opportunity for the restoration. We eulogize "Harper's Bazar." It has died nobly and we cordially welcome "Harper's Bazaar" in the monthly magazine field. It follows a distinguished predecessor. Reticently, but proudly, the Post-Dispatch hails the power of the press.

RESTORATION OF ST. PAUL'S.

The famous Cathedral of St. Paul's will be reopened June 25 of next year. Designed by Sir Christopher Wren in 1675 to replace the old St. Paul's, gutted by fire in 1666, the building was finally completed in 1710. From the standpoint of engineering as well as design it is a masterpiece of architecture, and its exterior is considered superior to that of St. Peter's in Rome. The work of restoring the church, which has required 17 years, became necessary when the piers that support the dome began to show signs of weakness. It seems the piers were filled with powdered rubble and iron supports used against Wren's advice, and that corrosion had set in. Now they have been solidified with stone and cement and bound with steel.

Some time in the future it may be necessary to strengthen the foundation of the structure, which now extends only five feet below the crypt, resting on earth above soft sand, either by underpinning the foundation with concrete or giving it a solid base on the deeper clay. In the meantime, however, St. Paul's is considered as safe as it was when Wren built it by order of Charles II, if not safer, and that day which Lord Macaulay prophesied is long deferred when—> some traveler from New Zealand . . . shall take his stand on a broken arch of London Bridge to sketch the ruins of St. Paul's.

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE LOBBY.

What the Farm Board Has Been Doing

New Federal agency has done good constructive work in first three months, says Kansas Senator; some sales organizations formed, others under way; loans have been small, but body was not created solely to lend money; Chairman Legge tells of two classes of operations; wheat and cotton surpluses are biggest problems ahead.

Senator Arthur Capper in Capper's Weekly.

THE farmer and those who eat what the farmer produces are going to profit, in the long run, from the work of the new Federal Farm Board. In my opinion, the Board has done a lot of constructive work in the first three months of its existence.

The results as yet are intangible rather than tangible. The foundation of a huge building does not make much of a showing below the surface of the ground. But the building itself will not make much of a showing, and will not be of value, unless it is built on a lasting foundation, constructed of sound materials and with honest and well planned workmanship.

The Board has initiated the organization of central sales organizations, which will give collective bargaining power, for grains, livestock and wool. The Farmers' National Grain Corporation is organized and already at work. The livestock central sales agency is in the conference state. Wool, cotton, citrus fruits, the dairy interests—the latter two already well organized—are working out plans for obtaining or improving their collective bargaining power to the point where these commodities can be produced at an operating profit.

Numerous loans have been made in comparatively small amounts, it is true, and virtually all of them supplemental to loans already made through the intermediate credit banks. The aggregate of these does not make much of a showing in comparison with the $500,000,000 which the board has been allotted. But it must be remembered that the Federal Farm Board was not created simply to serve as a lending agency. It was created to work out and put into effect a permanent program that will make farming pay.

This permanent program is based on giving each agricultural commodity collective bargaining power in the open market to have an influence in that market. This collective bargaining power, in the long run, will be obtained through the building up of the group co-operative marketing associations. And in my judgment the Board in the main is proceeding along the right lines in organizing co-operatives already in existence into co-operative central marketing agencies.

The use of stabilization corporations to handle surpluses is one of the most delicate problems ahead of the Board. This country is producing exportable surpluses of wheat and cotton. The problems presented by these exportable surpluses must be met squarely and solved intelligently by the Board if it is to be successful.

These two commodities, probably beyond all others, present what might be called emergencies. The Board is called upon to work out not only a permanent long time problem for both wheat and cotton, but also to protect the growers against the depressing effect of these surpluses.

Prevention of these surpluses is only a part of the program outlined in the agricultural marketing act, as a lot of us who helped write it believe, and as the act states. Control of the surplus is also a function of the Board. By control is meant the buying of enough of the surplus to exercise some control of the market price. Very frankly, I believe the Board still has to meet this problem. I have every confidence it will do so, and that it will be solved in the interest of the wheat growers and the cotton growers, and in consonance with sound public policy.

This confidence in the ultimate success of the Board in grasping and solving the problem of the surplus is strengthened by the following statement from Chairman Legge in a letter to Senator McNary, chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture:

> The process of stabilization, as we see it, divides itself into two rather distinct classes. The first class is what might be called normal operations, involved in almost everything the Board is doing. Every measure taken to increase the effectiveness of co-operative organizations in any commodity, or to improve their financial position, to centralize or correlate their activities so as to make their operations more effective, is in itself a process of stabilization.
> It is our hope that, as time goes on, this activity will in most cases prove to be all that is needed, the result, of course, depending on how successful we are in working out large, well managed organizations, which will control a sufficiently large percentage of the product to make their influence felt on the market.
> The second form of stabilization might be termed extraordinary or emergency operations, whereby, because of a large surplus of any commodity, the operation would consist of buying and taking off the market some considerable part of the tonnage so as to relieve the pressure, and carrying the product until some future date in the hope there would be a more favorable opportunity of disposing of it.
> This second, or emergency, class of operations would, of course, be carried out strictly under the provisions of the agriculture marketing act with money advanced by the Board, and if the final result of such operations shows a loss or deficit, such loss will be borne by the revolving fund as provided by the act.

Wheat and cotton surpluses are the two mean hurdles immediately ahead of the Federal Farm Board. I am confident they will be undertaken successfully by the Board. They must be, if the agricultural marketing act is to accomplish what is hoped and expected of it.

On the whole, I believe that business men and farmers can look forward to constantly improved farming and business conditions as results of the work of the Board. Some surplus middlemen may be squeezed out in the process. But the country can dispense with a few middlemen better than it can dispense with a prosperous agriculture.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.

THE old-fashioned institution of lighting, which would seem a relic of the past in this modern age of electricity, survives in the nation's capital. Each night when the sun vanishes early behind the hills beyond the Potomac, the lighters must be seen at their task along many of the residential streets.

Tradition to the contrary—for it dictates that a lighter must be a tottering old man—they are usually young boys, earning a little pin money, who ply their routes with ladder and matches to brighten dark streets by the soft light of gas lamps.

Visitors in the region express no concern when, over in Maryland, they find oxen being used to pull the plow. They are mildly interested when they are told that within 40 miles of the District, in Virginia are mountaineers whose illiteracy is a national disgrace. But gas lights in Washington! They are amazed to find the city to them the symbol of a progressive nation bowing not to the progress that is always taken for granted for the Government center.

THEY are surprised to learn that every night, when lights are needed, 4953 gas lamps have their mantles set glowing by hand. Should they travel over to historic Georgetown, they would find more distinct relics of the past. Several of the lights are mounted on poles so ancient that they carry at their base mud-scrapers where the pedestrian, floundering through the mud of an unpaved street, was often wont to stop and clean off his shoes.

All these things will vanish, as they have in most cities, and four years from now there will be no gas lights and no gas lighters in Washington to carry one back to what would seem Civil War times.

It was in September, 1925, through the active work of Capt. John E. Wood of the United States Army Engineer Corps, then assistant engineer commissioner for the District, that the program was sanctioned by Congress for the gradual replacement of the old lighting systems. The city then had 19,000 residential and business districts, a total of 21,933 lights, 11,478 of which were gas lamps tended by hand.

TODAY, with area after area being modernized according to the program, there are 27,059 lights, 4953 of which are gas lamps. Arterial highways and main sections were taken first and others will be taken in turn.

Washington has 494 miles of lighted highways and gas lamps illuminate 152 of this total. It will take four years, if Congress authorizes succeeding budgets, before the gas lights will be entirely replaced. By December, 1931, there should be 27,429 lights in nightly service. Only 5100 of these will be gas lamps.

In the downtown district there will be improvements, also, but flickering arc lights as now, will continue to be used. Engineers say that arc lights, with their bluish, wavering light, are a desirable contrast to the steady white light in the show windows. The parks, coming under different jurisdiction, already are like little cities of fireflies. Miles of winding roadway are lined with modern lights.

anish war from the range of human apprehension.

But all depends on the courage and resolution of the President. Will he face the unpleasant facts he has hinted at in his address—and deal with them? The utmost success of the naval conference will not achieve as much as the Washington Conference of 1922. Parity was established there. The building of mammoth battleships was stopped. He can extend the principles of 1922 to cruisers. If he succeeds there will still be 20,000,000 armed men in the world ready to cross frontiers armed and trained to slay each other.

But the passage in President Hoover's address that has attracted most attention and debate is that in which he proposes that in the event of war food ships should be as immune from capture at sea as hospital ships. As might be expected, the countries who were practically besieged during the late war naturally favor the idea.

All the conquering nations view it with distrust. The French view is given by "Des Debats" in a very able article on the freedom of the seas. "The exercise of the blockade, so far from prolonging the horrors of war, on the contrary abridges its duration, and its use does not appear to us more inhuman than other means used to reduce an adversary." It asks whether the sufferings of the German population were greater than those of the French population who were driven before the invader and whose hearths were destroyed.

It may be said that this journal represents the Right, but "L'Heure Nouvelle," which speaks for the Left, is no more sympathetic. Edouard Herriot, the radical statesman, writing in that journal, whilst expressing an unreserved devotion to the Kellogg pact, is not enamored of the Hoover proposal. He argues that the real solution is to be sought not in mitigating the asperities of war, but in abolishing it altogether. To quote one sentence from this article, "The solution of the problems of war must be all or nothing." He concludes by saying that it is because the United States does not work in accord with the League of Nations that its pacific policy is marked so far with such "respectable incertitudes."

Britain Also Hesitant.

In Great Britain also, the reception of President Hoover's proposal on the subject of the freedom of the seas is characterized with much doubt and hesitation. Britain being so dependent on sea transport for food supplies would naturally be predisposed to view with favor any project which assured immunity during war for food ships. Nevertheless, opinion on the subject is determined by the knowledge that but for the blockade, the great war with its terrible losses, might and probably would have been prolonged for another year or two.

Those who have read the remarkable war novels published in Germany will learn how much the food shortage had to do with the weakening of the fighting qualities of the Central Powers, and especially with breaking down the morale of the nations behind the lines.

Would the sum of human suffering have been less had the war been fought for another two years between well-fed armies on both sides supported by well nursed peoples?

The editor of the Economist is well known friend of peace. Yet his article on the Hoover project is critical. He writes, "The suggestion is definitely one which contemplates private war as a possibility and endeavors to make it a gentlemanly operation. As to public wars, it is not clear whether President Hoover would urge even in the case of united "police operations" against the pledge breaker, that food should be allowed to flow freely into the population of the guilty state and the unguilty."

Practical Question to Face.

That is the practical question which President Hoover will have to face if he means to press his proposal further upon the consideration of the nations of the world. Should a nation in defiance of all the treaties to which it has given adhesion make war on an offending neighbor, then by the terms of the Kellogg pact, it must be treated as an outlaw. In these days nations cannot engage in war without the assent of a vast majority of their citizens.

In August, 1914, the governments who made war received enthusiastic and almost unanimous support from their people. The people themselves must be held responsible for any act of aggression perpetrated by their armies and navies. The only question, therefore, is whether the injured state and its protectors are entitled to resort to methods of blockade in self-defense and for the purpose of enforcing respect for international rights. Is killing the only possible and tolerable sanction?

To say you must not capture food ships because it would have the effect of starving women and children looks so simple and benevolent. But let us pursue the argument. It is all on the assumption that war has actually broken out, in self-defense against an aggressor. The President accepts war in such a contingency and counsels preparedness against such a possibility.

In that case, are the defenders to be permitted to bomb the cities of the aggressor? Presumably not, for you might blow up women and children. But surely that means that you cannot bomb or bombard railway centers where they assemble and shunt ammunition trains packed with shot and shell ish t

But surely that means that you cannot bomb or bombard railway centers where they assemble and shunt ammunition trains packed with shot and shell and poison gas cylinders to destroy the gallant defender of your liberties and homes and shatter your towns and villages where women and children dwell.

Forbid War Altogether.

It is easier to prevent war than to circumscribe its horrors. Let us therefore concentrate on forbidding war altogether. To raise a controversial issue like the freedom of the seas is to sidetrack peace. The commandments of peace are becoming too much involved.

"Thou shalt not kill" is an intelligible command. But to say "Thou shalt not kill except when King or President says it is legitimate in self-defense and if thou must and does kill, then it is forbidden thee to starve children, but not to kill their fathers or even to kill women and children provided it is done by bombing or bombardment"—that is too complicated a commandment and must in practice confuse the moral issue.

Churchill Sums Up Differences In Views on Navies that at the conclusion of the war, in which 175 German submarines had been destroyed by British action out of 182 destroyed by all other naval forces, she found herself numerically inferior for the first time in modern battleship strength to the United States. This however, caused no ill feeling—still less any alarm—as no question of naval rivalry had ever arisen within living memory between the English-speaking peoples; and the arrival of more numerous American battle squadrons upon blue water was accepted in that fleeting hour of rejoicing with placid interest.

America's Concession.

The United States Government, however, and the leaders of American public opinion did not think it right to steal a march in a matter of this kind upon a kindred and comrade nation with whom they had just passed through so stern an ordeal. It would be a mistake not to do justice to American motives at this juncture. If the United States could promote the cause of disarmament by sea or land, she was willing to abrogate her temporary and accidental superiority in modern battleships. This policy was expressed in the far-reaching proposals set before the Washington conference in 1921 by Mr. Hughes, the Secretary of State, and accepted forthwith by Lord Balfour, without previous reference to the British Cabinet but with their immediate subsequent indorsement.

Three years had now passed since the armistice, and the British Government, after a searching inquiry as to the utility of immense battleships in modern conditions, had decided in 1920 to construct four new battleships embodying all the lessons the Admiralty had learned from the war and certainly superior in important respects to any vessels then afloat. These vessels had not been projected in any sense as a reply to the American wartime fleet; they were simply the resumption after nearly six years of the construction of the replacement ships necessary to keep the battle fleet in being. At the same time, not as a part of bargain but in pursuance of a general policy of disarmament, Britain had cast upon the scrap heap more than 2,000,000 tons of war shipping, including some 40 battleships which though outclassed by later developments had an important military value.

Where Opinions Diverge.

The Admiralty experts were much in love with their new ships and had always been brought up to pay no attention to American building, as war between the United States and Great Britain had for many years been formally excluded from all practical consideration. They were therefore reluctant to abandon two out of these four vessels as proposed by the Washington conference, and they not see that the sudden and splendid growth of the United States Navy in modern battleships had anything to do with the ordinary replacement programs of the British fleet. The Government, however, anxious to meet the wishes of the United States, eager to economize, and determined not to be drawn into a new naval competition, gladly and earnestly set their hands to the famous agreement of 1921.

Now here is where the first divergence of views and impressions begins. The United States Government felt that they were doing a magnanimous, a generous, and in the eyes of their naval experts a quixotic thing in sinking so many fine ships that had been newly built or were so far advanced; while British naval circles, and not naval circles only, would rather the matter had been left alone, each Power building whatever it thought necessary and both getting rid of as many vessels and as much expense as possible. There were, of course, cynical persons who said that many of the American battleships, hastily put together under wartime conditions and not embodying the pregnant lessons of the Battle of Jutland, would never be a match if match there was to be, for the far more matured and modern conceptions embodied in the latest British design; and that the American naval authorities were well aware of this. I only mention these persons for the purpose of reprobating their suggestions.

Cost of Navies Not Cut.

The Washington conference did not produce the results which were hoped. It did not thrust questions of British and American naval strength once for all outside the range of practical interest. As things turned out, it did not diminish the expense of naval armaments. The battleships of the three leading naval Powers were strictly limited by agreement, but there had never been any question of limiting the light cruisers, destroyers and other minor construction. On the contrary, the British representatives had made it plain that under the strict instructions of their Government, they could not entertain the idea of a limit upon light cruiser construction nor, while the submarine remained an accepted weapon of war, upon the construction of antisubmarine flotillas. This condition was readily accepted by the United States.

And here begins the second of the misunderstandings which cloud the discussion of the naval problem. The British had insisted that light cruisers should not be limited because large number of these vessels are vital to our food supply. The Americans were willing to agree to this because they thought this branch of the subject was of no great importance to them. But mark what followed.

Maximum Becomes Minimum.

A maximum of 10,000 tons and eight-inch guns had been piously placed by the Washington conference upon so-called "light" cruisers. Until this limitation was imposed no naval architect would have thought of building vessels of this size virtually unarmored for the purposes of scouting and commerce protection or control. But from the moment that the limitation was declared, the maximum became the minimum. The Japanese began the construction of light cruisers far superior in speed and gun power to any that existed. The British cruiser fleet, which was very numerous but dating from the early years of the war and rapidly wearing out, found itself about to be outclassed in Asiatic waters.

In 1923 the Admiralty convinced Ramsay MacDonald's first administration that the immediate construction of five cruisers of the largest permitted size was necessary, and the Conservative Government followed year after year with smaller but still substantial replacement programs. Whereas the cruisers to be replaced were old, small, cheap ships, their substitutes must all take the form of vessels costing as much as a battle cruiser before the war. Meanwhile, as no new capital ships were being built by any Power except as prescribed by the Washington agreement, these new unarmored cruisers came to be regarded, in my judgment most mistakenly, as cardinal units in naval power.

After a year or two of this "light" cruiser construction both by Great Britain and by Japan, the United States, which had much neglected its cruiser fleet, observed with vexation that naval competition appeared to be proceeding and naval armament appeared to be growing with undiminished rapidity. The light cruiser construction which had been deemed at Washington to be insignificant had now apparently become of the highest importance, and was, moreover, the only thing that was being done at all. From this point we rapidly advance through the Geneva conference and its misfortunes to the present most earnest and most needful attempt to reach a new arrangement or at least understanding.

I have set out the sequence of events in a narrative which, though necessarily incomplete, is, I believe, neither one-sided nor untrue. The knowledge and comprehension of the whole chain of causation cannot fail to be helpful to those who wish to arrive at fair and helpful judgments at the present time.

To Address Child Conference.

P. F. Drury, safety director of the Automobile Club, and R. S. Holden, principal of Franklin Vocational School, will speak at a meeting of the Child Conservation Conference Tuesday at 1:30 p. m. at the auditorium of B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co., Broadway and Washington avenue. The Ashland School Mothers' Club will present a sketch, "A Manless Wedding," and the Carondelet School Mothers' Club Kitchen Band will play.

go on the gang of late as we used to have," he added, "for niggers are cheap now. We can hire 'em from other counties almost for their keep."

It was decided by all hands at the courthouse that my missing Negro must have gone up from Dixie County.

I drove out some 10 miles to the headquarters camp. There on both sides of the road were the cabins where the laborers live. One and two-room affairs made of pine boards, set in rows among the pine trees. The ground was so low that water stood in long, narrow lakes between the roadway and the houses. Swarms of mosquitoes played about. Drinking water came from wells sunk just below the surface of the ground. Women and children peeped from the doorways or sprawled laxily on benches in front.

In the headquarters hut I found the bookkeeper and a boss man. The latter sat at a table near the entrance way, a gun strapped at his side and a businesslike shotgun on the table in front of him. Talking across this shotgun I inquired as to the two Negroes, Buck Jackson and Jack Brown.

The bookkeeper, a pleasant young man and unarmed, dragged out piles of records. Yes—here was Buck's name. He worked for a few weeks, and they had to send him back to Jacksonville because he was diseased. Jack was in another camp somewhere.

The workmen were coming in at evening. Quietly among the cabins I talked to them. One hungry looking tan boy in his teens had been recruited in Atlanta the week before. Another came from South Florida to Jacksonville, looking for work, and fell into the hands of the recruiter there. Another—Will Blake, came in from Jacksonville. He has lived there for years, and is well known among his Negro neighbors. Hard times struck Will last year and he wandered down Forsythe street to look for a job. At the office of a Negro employment agency he paused.

"You see, they has a 'cruiter, an' he tells you he can git you work. Promised me $3.50 a day, an' good place to stay. Said we'd go to Cross City. White man drove me out, with my wife an' two other colored men. Promised her work, too. Comes on out heah. That's 10 months ago."

And in the 10 months, Will said, he has drawn in money less than $20. He has drawn from the commissary his food, a pair of shoes, and a few miscellaneous items. That's all. He has no shirt—just a dirty undershirt under a sort of jumper. His trousers are ragged and soiled. "I had 'em on when I come out heah," he says. His wife worked at washing for awhile, and then fell ill with malaria. The commissary wouldn't give her no clothes. "She got nigh ter naked, an' I let 'em take 'er back to town," Will explains.

In 10 Months' Time.

"One month, I got $9.40 in the envelope. That's mos' I ever got. nex' month I didn't git none, an' the $9.40 was charged 'gainst me. Mos'ly I never got nothin' but a 'owe' slip on pay-off day."

I thought Will's story might be interesting if told in the right place in Jacksonville. "Get in my car and I'll take you to town," I invited him. A look of alarm crossed his features.

"Cap'n, do you know what'ud happen if'n I got in yo' car an' rode off? We'd git down the road thar. They's two men waitin' with guns. They'd ketch me an' I'd go to the gang fer six months!" He gave me the names of a number of Jacksonville Negroes who were on the chain gang at that moment for trying to "jump their accounts."

"You Never Pay It Out."

A number of workmen told strikingly similar stories: The 'cruiter. The promise of $3.50 a day and good working conditions. The white driver takes charge. The ride to the camps. The boss men with guns to see that none leave after that.

"You never gits through payin' the driver fer bringing you out," one man complained bitterly. "He pays the 'cruiter for you. He brings you out, an' the company buys you from him. It's all charged 'gainst you, an' you never pay it out!"

Six months on a Florida chain gang is not a pleasant experience. I went to the barbed-wire inclosed gang camp of Taylor County. One of the rough-and-ready guards, a stocky, unshaven native of the piney woods, assured me his camp was full of account jumpers.

Could I talk with some of them? No, they were out on the road. I could talk with four prisoners who were in the camp, repairing a truck. I did so, and got the names of several who had recently come to the gang for running away from lumber and turpentine camps.

I drove out to where the gang was working, digging ditches by a new roadway, working in water halfway to the knees. Dozens of hollow-eyed, hungry, weary Negroes. One was keeping up a pretense of singing so they would shovel the slimy mud in unison. It lacked but a few minutes of sundown.

From "Cain't to Cain't."

"How long do you work?" I asked a guard.

"We work from cain't to cain't," he assured me with a grin. "From when we cain't see in the morning 'til we cain't see at night."

Six months of that—with chain-gang grub, blistering heat and mosquitoes—is supposed to cure a turpentine nigger of running away from his job and account. It is safe to say that most of those men sentenced to the gang in Taylor County on the basis of the 1919 law were recruited under misrepresentation; were forced to work under intolerable conditions; were caught and held under warrants that assert a misdemeanor under an unconstitutional law, and sentenced without a semblance of a defense—for fraud!

Plenty of evidence as to who sponsored the law of 1919 comes to light in the letters from the legislators of that session. Senator A. W. Wilson writes: "I remember the bill. It was intended to protect the turpentine and sawmill owners."

What Legislators Say.

Senator John L. Moore of West Palm Beach, chairman of the committee that approved this bill, says this: "It is my recollection that the people most vitally concerned in the passage of this bill were the turpentine operators of the State."

Former Senator J. B. Johnson of Live Oak, now Circuit Judge in Tallahassee, notes tersely: "Read the law carefully and don't try to read something into it that was never intended."

Senator W. A. Russell of Crescent City, former president protem. of the Senate, warns against prejudice, and asks: "Do you think yourself justified in drawing on your imagination for facts?" And notes further: "Read the law. No discrimination between whites and Negroes."

A number of legislators of that session could not even recall the law. As one explained, "A lot of bills come up, and some are crowded through at the last moment."

Former Senator W. M. Igou of Eustis, now Secretary of State of Florida, declares: "I do not consider this act vicious when it is construed in its proper sense." Senator R. H. Rowe of Madison says: "I would not sanction its repeal. If there are abuses they should be charged up to the courts and not to the law."

Two former members joined Senator Calkins in condemning the law. W. A. McLeod of Milton, now a Judge, writes emphatically that the law is unconstitutional, and—"I have been for some time refusing to issue warrants under same." Former Senator W. T. Cash, now State Librarian, asserts he voted against this law, and does not think it is constitutional.

Senator Moore's letter is a vigorous defense of the law, and summarizes the plaint of the employers of Negro labor thus: "I personally know that the custom practiced among some classes of labor and among some turpentine operators makes it quite a hardship on the operators, who advance money and merchandise to their employes, to have them leave their employment, or be persuaded away without repaying their indebtedness. Certainly it was not the intent of the Legislature to provide a criminal process for the collection of debts."

"If the Law's There."

In his Jacksonville office, Aycock caught up my challenging inquiry vigorously. "We don't have anything to do with what the law says! If the law's there, it's there. You say you talked to Judge Culpepper. If you want to discuss the law, go back and discuss it with him. Take the law up with him—not with me!"

"Furthermore—let me show you something," he continued. "Here are hundreds of accounts. They show that we lose thousands of dollars each year in accounts the workmen jump."

"How much do you pay your Negroes each day, on the average?" I asked.

"Well"—he hesitated. "They get paid by piece work. The bosses keep track of the work, and the men are paid accordingly."

"And in the course of several months' work can't they make enough to keep ahead of their commissary bill? Why are they always in debt?"

"Don't you know niggers?" he exploded. Then followed an account of their laziness, shiftlessness and general cussedness.

"So—what are you going to do? Get that law repealed?" a Jacksonville attorney asked. "Do you know how many legislators of this State represent lumber and naval stores interests?"

How It's Done.

"And if it is repealed," a county Judge in North Florida remarked, "don't you know there's lots of ways of holding niggers? Listen and I'll tell you how it's done. A boss hires a nigger, and gives him a pint of whisky to celebrate. A guard goes around and arrests him for having whisky. The boss tells the nigger he'll bail him out of it, but if the nigger ever runs away the boss'll let the law jail him for having whisky!"

If the law is repealed, it will be because there sits in the Governor's chair of Florida a man in whom the best citizenry of Florida have faith. Gov. Carlton writes:

"You may be assured the matter about which you write will be sifted to the bottom at a very early date.

"I have examined the law to which you refer and, while I do not recall the circumstances or conditions of its passage, no reasonable interpretation could be placed on the law which would justify the action described in your letter. It may be used as an excuse, but it is a mere perversion of justice and would not be taken by any lawyer to hold that a man could be imprisoned for debt.

"I am very glad you brought this feature to my attention and you may be assured the matter will not be neglected."

U. S. Investigation Promised.

It is safe to assume that the great majority of the people of Florida hold no brief for their 1919 law. The facts herein outlined were given over to the agents of the Bureau of Investigation, U. S. Department of Justice of Jacksonville. They promised a speedy investigation of their own. But the difficulties in the way of legal action were keenly summed up by a business man of Perry—a leader of his community.

"Yes—all you say is so. We know how conditions are. Als you can talk your head off to the U. S. Government, and they can investigate to their heart's content. Do you know why they can't get any convictions? Here's why: Suppose they arrest some operators. All right. Now bring them into court. They're men of wealth and respectability. They own big property. They elect the county and State officers. Who's the jury? Men who owe 'em money!

"Accuse 'em of peonage. They bring in records to show they don't owe a nigger a penny. The owner, the boss men, the bookkeeper, the commissary clerk all testify. And what else?

"Every big company has favorite niggers who get good wages and act as straw bosses. They put them on the stand. They been working for that company for years; paid every month and never mistreated.

"And against that line-up, you got a poor devil of an ignorant nigger off a chain gang! Think you can convict? Don't be absurd! Who would that jury believe?"

So any moves of State of Federal officers may be awaited with interest.

Learn Better Bridge from Milton C. Work and the Country's Leading Experts

A new series of bridge games under the personal direction of Milton C. Work is being broadcast at 3:30 each Tuesday afternoon over Radio Station KSD. The advance hands for each game are published Monday in the Post-Dispatch. The detailed account of the game appears each Wednesday.

These games will be of great interest and assistance to all bridge players, as they show how the country's leading experts bid and play. Each game is analyzed for both Contract and Auction by Mr. Work.

Watch for the advance hands and try each game your own way. Next tune in on KSD and play it with the experts. Then study the account of the proper play and compare your methods with those of the experts.

The reports of these radio bridge games appear exclusively in this territory in the

IMPROVED STREETS OPEN TO TRAFFIC

Parts of Bircher-Kingshighway and of Vandeventer Avenue Finished.

Two notable sections of street improvements were opened last week, on Vandeventer avenue and Bircher-Kingshighway. Their completion is of considerable benefit to traffic.

Replacing an old dirt lane, Bircher-Kingshighway has been paved for three blocks between Kingshighway, at Penrose Park, and Union boulevard. There are two 26-foot roadways, one for westbound and one for eastbound traffic, separated by a central parkway. The street is 104 feet wide between property lines. Warrenite was used for the pavement.

For eight blocks, between Union boulevard and Thrush avenue, the concrete base has been laid for similar pavement on Bircher-Kingshighway, a new thoroughfare, which, curving gradually to the north from Thrush avenue, changes its name there to Kingshighway Northwest. This curve, stretching over about seven blocks, extends to Lillian and Partridge avenues. Grading has been done in that section. The city expects to finish the whole project between Union and Lillian this winter.

Recently the paving of Kingshighway Northwest for 10 blocks, between Lillian and West Florissant avenues, was finished. This section also has two roadways and a center parkway. From West Florissant to the intersection of Goodfellow avenue and Hall's Ferry road at the northern city limits Kingshighway Northwest has a 20-foot concrete pavement, but there is a blockade at the Wabash Railway track between West Florissant and McLaran avenues, due to construction of a new overhead bridge for the railroad.

Vandeventer avenue, which has been widened from 60 to 80 feet between Market street and Washington boulevard and is being similarly widened between Enright and Easton avenues, now is open as a broad traffic artery from Page boulevard to Easton avenue. All work has been done on the Washington-Enright section except the construction of a sidewalk for half a block south from Lindell boulevard, which awaits the removal of temple Shaare Emeth.

The Enright-Easton stretch has been finished between Enright and Page and on the east side, where it is now open to northbound traffic, between Page and Easton. The west side will be finished in about a week. There is an obstruction to traffic in Page at Vandeventer, while the crossing is being repaved, but part of the width of Page is kept open. This condition will continue for a few days.

Irish Debtors' Paradise.

BELFAST, Nov. 23. — County Clare has a bonny little island in its bounds which has become a debtors' paradise. The sole communication with the island, where several families live, is by small boats on which court messengers are not accepted as passengers. District Justice Gleeson has ruled that the Sheriff must invoke the aid of a destroyer to gain access to the community. But since Ireland has no destroyers the Sheriff is stumped.

Appeals to Test Legal Power of U. S. Radio Board

KYW Opens Fight to Retain Cleared Channel Sought by Eastern Stations.

Thorough tests of the authority of the Federal Radio Commission to regulate radio will shortly be made before the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. Pending in the court are several appeals from decisions of the commission.

One of these appeals, filed by three stations in Chicago, WEHS, WKBI and WHFC, protest against their being changed without first getting a hearing. The commission believes it has the authority, upon expiration of a license, to reassign a station to a different wave with different operating hours and power, assuming that it is in the "public interest." The Chicago stations assert that before changing them the commission should grant a hearing.

An appeal, by WTMJ, Milwaukee, questions the authority of the commission to place an additional station on the wave used by WTMJ, without first holding a hearing. The commission has granted an increase in power to a station in Maine, which operates on WTMJ's wave. WTMJ holds this action will seriously affect its service area.

The Westinghouse Co., which operates KYW-KFKX at Chicago, has appealed for an order requiring the commission to allow it to continue to operate its station on cleared channel of 1020 kc, with the power and hours of operation as authorized by its license, which expired Oct. 21, without restriction or qualification except as contained in the previously existing license. It would restrain the commission from issuing any license to any other party for use of 1020 kc.

Five second zone stations have made application for the present KYW channel which was "loaned" from the second zone to KYW until some station in that area should justify a claim to it. They are WCAU and KYDKA, Philadelphia; WLBW, Oil City, Pa.; WLAP, Lexington, Ky., and WWJ, Detroit. The latter station wants to build a 50,000-watt station using a new channel.

Requests Flood in On Sir Harry Lauder

Letters, telegrams and telephone calls from all sections of the country, requesting various Lauder numbers, began pouring in as soon as the announcement was made by the National Broadcasting Co. that Sir Harry Lauder would broadcast for the second time.

So evenly divided were requests for songs that a tabulation was necessary before the numbers could be selected.

Sir Harry will take part in two programs through the NBC system next Sunday night, singing before a microphone in the studios of KEL, Los Angeles. He will be heard first during the Enna Jettick melodies program from 7 to 7:15 p. m. His second appearance will come 23 minutes later in Collier's hour.

His first program of the evening will include "Roamin' in the Gloamin'"; "Wee Hoose 'Mang the Heather," "End of the Road," and a fourth number to be selected.

During his Collier's hour broadcast Sir Harry will sing "When I Get Back to Bonnie Scotland," "I Love a Lassie" and another number.

Cleared Wave Investigation by Congress Likely

Pressure to Get More Stations on Air Steadily Increasing at Washington.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The action of the Radio Commission in clearing 40 channels will be subjected to the closest scrutiny in Congress.

Listeners in hundreds of communities throughout the United States are complaining to their Senators and Representatives that they are being deprived of stations because of the cleared channels.

It all revolves around the commission's General Order 40, which set aside 40 of the 90 broadcasting channels as national waves, only one station being allowed to use such a channel at night.

On the 40 cleared channels, only about 10 of the stations are using sufficient power to serve more than normal local areas. Thirty of the 40 cleared channels are used with only 5000 watts, while the present capacity of these channels is 50,000 watts.

The reason for the failure of the cleared channel stations to use the higher power is not hard to find. It costs about $250,000 to install the higher powered equipment. Most stations hesitate about sinking such a large amount of money in equipment with present unstability.

Senators and Representatives are urging that with low power on the cleared channels, it would be possible for the commission to place two or even three such stations on each channel. That would permit licensing 50 to 100 new stations with power ranging from 1000 to 5000 watts.

Marcella Shields Wins Stardom In Net Broadcast

A FEAT performed by Marcella Shields, radio actress, is still talked about along Broadway. When the "talkies" changed the movie situation many silent-film producers had attractions ready for release. Something had to be done.

MARCELLA SHIELDS.

At this point in a real-life scenario, Miss Shields walked into a movie studio in New York City. Someone's ear caught her voice above the hubbub of worried conferences. It was a voice that had been heard on the stage ever since its owner was 4 years old. It sounded good. There was an infectious humor in it.

A voice test was arranged. So well did her tones register that producers ordered Miss Shield's voice synchronized with the silent lip movements of the actors.

For weeks preceding the premier of "Lilac Time" with Colleen Moore; "Submarine" with Jack Holt; "While the City Sleeps" starring Lon Chaney, and others. Miss Shields spoke for characters in the Star Tenor McKinley High Boy

Oliver Smith Set Record for 220-Yard Run as Captain of St. Louis School Track Team.

THE tenor who has been winning fame in radio as soloist with the A & P Gypsies and on other programs is Oliver Smith, who was born Oliver Schmid in Jefferson County, Mo., not far from St. Louis. He is the son of Charles Schmid, a contractor and a descendant of pioneer settlers. His mother resides at 7417 Maple avenue, Maplewood, Mo. He changed his name to Smith when in the Government service during the World War.

He first sang in public in the Memorial Methodist Church, on Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, when only six years old. He was paid fifty cents for a solo, "Life Is Like a Mountain Railroad." He attended Hodgen school, and was captain of the track team at McKinley High, where he set a record for the 220-yard dash. He was president of the McKinley High Literary society and sang in the glee club. Later he attended Washington University, where he specialized in sociology. He was studying singing at the time, and was a member of the Apollo Club.

By this time his voice had developed into a tenor of fine quality and he did considerable concert singing, making 144 concert appearances in one season through the Middle West.

Soon after the World War broke out, he moved to Washington, D. C., where he became a "dollar a year man." He also sang as a soloist in the "Church of the Presidents." Before the end of the war he was sent over-seas. After the Armistice was declared, he was assigned to duty with the Peace Commission.

He took advantage of his opportunities to study singing and acting in Paris, and eventually made a concert tour of France. Then he won a place with the Paris Grand Opera and Opera Comique. He made his American operatic debut

KYW Experiment In Synchronization Called Success

5000-Watt Station and Smaller One Work Together to Penetrate Chicago 'Dead Spot.'

Synchronization of KYW with a "booster" station on the North Side of Chicago is a success, tests of several months' duration indicate. The station is now getting a strong signal into the area, which formerly was a "dead spot," according to Walter C. Evans, superintendent of radio operations for the Westinghouse. This success is said to strengthen the argument that dual transmission helps eliminate dead spots and fading.

The simultaneous broadcasting on the same wave by KYW and its sister transmitter is the second synchronization achievement of the Westinghouse Co. The first is that of WBZ, Springfield, Mass., and WBZA, Boston.

Completion of the new 50,000-watt transmitter near Glenn Ellyn will not immediately affect these two Chicago transmitters. When a new station is built, it is always run with the old one in reserve until a thorough trial has been given the new equipment.

The synchronization of KYW and KYWA, as the "booster" transmitter is called, "is effected by use of a low basic frequency tone instead of a high frequency as in the case of the two New England stations. This tone is carried from one station to the other by telephone wires, thus insuring that the transmitters will be completely in synchronism.

KYW at present is authorized to use a power of 5000 watts and KYWA 500, but the second station is using only a small amount of power to cover its territory.

Recent attempts at synchronization between WTMJ, Milwaukee, Wis., and WJAY, Cleveland, O., and between WAPI, Birmingham, Ala., and KVOO, Tulsa, Ok., were not so successful. This may be partly accounted for by the fact that it was attempted without the use of wire connections between the stations. Synchronization without telephone wires was found impossible by Westinghouse engineers when the first experiments were made with WBZ and WBZA.

TURN THE DIAL TO THE POINT MARKED "RECORD"

Many of These Modern Features Are Exclusive With the New Grebe

Screen Grid Tubes—The use of which results in sensitivity never before attained. Weak signals from distant stations are amplified clearly and distinctly.

New Control for New Power—But in the New Grebe this added power is controlled. Overlapping of stations is eliminated . . . strays are kept out. You get the full tone value made possible by that exclusive Grebe feature—the Equalized Band Pass Filter.

Single Audio Stage Means No Hum—Grebe reception is so strong . . . so pure in tonal characteristics . . . that only a single audio stage is needed. Hum and microphonic disturbances are eliminated.

Large Diameter Speaker . . . an Original Grebe Idea—Full tone range is effectively accomplished by special large diameter electrodynamic speaker . . . so successfully introduced by Grebe.

For Superb Reproduction of Phonograph Records—You can play your favorite phonograph records by a mere turn of the tuning dial. This automatically connects the electric phonograph pick-up with its specially wound transformer.

Cabinets Designed for Lasting Beauty and Acoustic Perfection—The New Grebe is obtainable in a wide choice of selected walnut and mahogany lowboy and highboy models. Furniture of characteristic beauty and dignity. In a word, Grebe craftsmanship.

©1929—A. H. Grebe & Co.

WITH this New Grebe in your home, the time will never come when you cannot get . . . and re-produce . . . your favorite music. You may be an enthusiast for the stirring beauties of the organ. You may want the Fifth Symphony, as rendered by a 150-piece orchestra. Or you may long for an hour of the latest and gayest dance music. You have but to make your choice, and turn the dial of the New Grebe to the point marked "Record."

Every Grebe Model has this Special Equipment

Instantly . . . automatically . . . there clicks into operation a separate circuit for phonograph pick-up. A specially designed transformer . . . to take care of the particular range of frequencies set up by phonograph records . . . snaps into action. And from the large diameter speaker flows all the brilliance and depth and character of the music as originally recorded. Full, natural . . . and true at every volume level. Reveals in it, and you are enjoying something which no other receiver has ever given you before . . . Tri-toned* radio!

Craftsmanship with 20 years of background

Into every one of these New Grebe receivers has been built the pride of craftsmanship which has been a Grebe tradition since 1909. Each set is as nearly perfect a musical instrument as it is possible to build. And when you examine Grebe cabinets from the standpoint of a critical furniture buyer you will find them fitting settings for this splendid achievement in musical reproduction.

Your Grebe dealer wants to let you hear Tri-toned* radio in your own home. Ask for a 48 hour demonstration . . . telephone him today!

*What is Tri-toned Radio? Every musical instrument has three distinct characteristics: 1. Pitch, by which we distinguish the note as being high or low; 2. Intensity, or loudness; and, 3. Tone, or character by which we distinguish the sound of one musical instrument from another. In Grebe Radio you have re-production that gives you perfect blending of all three characteristics without unnatural over-emphasis of any part of the scale.

Net Key Station Run Upon Exact Time Schedules

To visit the key station of one of the nation-wide chains is to learn the literal meaning of precision. In no other business in the world is such stress and importance placed upon the word "precision." Every word uttered is weighed in relation to time. Every human movement is gauged by the hand of the clock.

Notables in Corridors.

In the 24-story building of the Columbia Broadcasting System in New York City a visitor is at once impressed, upon entering the reception room, with the quiet luxury.

The wide corridors diverging from this room lead to the studios and are known to those who frequent them as "Little Broadway," because it is not uncommon to see Paul Whiteman, Ruth Chatterton, Helen Morgan, Edgar Guest, Ruth Etting, Jesse Crawford, as well as other important figures in the amusement field, sifting through it on their way to appointments.

The keeping of an appointment with the microphone is the first iron-clad rule of broadcasting.

Following the artists into the studio one arrives at the actual technique of a broadcast. A symphony orchestra is ready to go into action. The baton of the conductor is raised. The announcer is at his microphone post. Absolute silence prevails and all have their eyes fixed on the control operator who sits in an adjoining, soundproof glass enclosure awaiting the last word of the program that precedes it. By a system of mute signals he indicates to the announcer and conductor that he now controls the wire. The announcer presses a button alongside the microphone, the orchestra bursts into the strain of melody. The country hears.

These sound impulses pass into the mouthpiece of the microphone and are sped on their way to the man in the control room, who blends and modulates them to the taste of his trained ear by means of the amplifying mixer before him. By a series of dials on this instrument, the tension of instrumental and vocal notes are registered, so that the operator may selectively proportion them before sending them forward to a more careful censoring control. Here they go through the rigid tests of their ear phones and the loud speaker, meanwhile retaining the same principle and identity of an ordinary telephone.

Then follows the process of sending the broadcast to the chain or group of stations, scattered over the entire country, who await the "stand by" signal on their receiving end. To every station on this chain there are two direct private wires, one of which carries the program, the other, serving as a communication wire to check up any deficiency in the service.

The programs are dispatched like ordinary telephone messages and not until they reach the transmitters do they become the waves of the air, known as radio.

Twin Screen Grid Tube Being Developed in U. S.

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD,
Associated Press Radio Editor.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 23.—Only one additional wire will find its way into a radio receiver when the double screen grid or five-element tube is ready to be used.

This tube is undergoing its laboratory evolution, with engineers hoping that some of the new valves will be available to experimenters within the next year.

The additional wire will be required to carry the bias for the second screen, which will be a positive voltage of from 7½ to 12. Otherwise the circuit is similar to that for the present screen grid.

The five-element tube, according to present indications, is to have a screen for the plate just as in the 224, with an added screen for the grid. The new screen lowers the internal resistance and results in greater amplification in actual reception than has been heretofore obtained, engineers say.

Laboratory technicians declare that the new tube has one important advantage. No special radio frequency transformers are required. They say it is difficult, if not almost impossible, to build coils that will be a perfect match for the present screen grid.

Coils designed for three-element tubes have been founnd efficient for twin screen grid tubes. Small primaries of six to 10 turns give the rated voltage amplification of 200 times per stage.

Play About Gilbert And Sullivan in KSD Eveready Hour

One of the most important partnerships in art was that of Gilbert and Sullivan, who wrote the greatest series of comic operas the world has known.

Although temperamentally unlike and sometimes at variance, each seemed to be the perfect complement of the other in the production of operas that have delighted millions.

The highlights of the collaboration of Gilbert and Sullivan will be the basis of the Eveready Hour over KSD on Tuesday evening.

At their first meeting, in 1869, Gilbert was 33 and Sullivan still in his twenties. Gilbert was a cynical, impulsive, quick-tempered. Sullivan, the composer, was quiet, always the gentleman and very much the dreamer.

Gilbert, who knew little of music, at first astounded Sullivan by appearing to know more than the composer did about musical composition. Later this was revealed as one of Gilbert's witticisms, and he admitted that he had cribbed and memorized from the Encyclopedia Britannica the technical information which floored Sullivan.

The Eveready Hour dramatic version of the lives of the two will show their meetings, at which were born such celebrated operettas as "Pinafore," "Iolanthe," "The Mikado" and the others.

A musical program based on themes of most of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas will be a feature.

As a mark of gratitude to amateur transmitters who have made important contributions toward short wave research, the French Government exempts them from paying radio taxes.

Texas Station Tuning 'Broadly' On St. Louis Sets

KRLD Frequently Prevents Any Reception of KNX at Hollywood, Cal.

Owners of selective radio sets who do not live under the shadow of KMOX's transmitter are not reporting any reception difficulties because WTAM, Cleveland, O., and WTIC, Hartford, Conn., are broadcasting with 50,000 watts on adjoining channels. KMOX is on the 1090 channel; WBT, Charlotte, N. C., on 1080kc; WTAM on 1070; WTIC on 1060; KNX, Hollywood, Cal., on 1050 and KRLD, Dallas, Tex., on 1040.

The only interference in that part of the broadcast band that amounts to anything is that caused by KRLD, which is "very broad," often preventing reception of KNX and sometimes "washing over" on WTIC. Incidentally, KRLD is using only 10,000 watts.

Listeners are experiencing the equal difficulty in tuning in the Pacific Northwest stations. KJR, a 5000-watter at Seattle, Wash., is on the 970kc channel, just above KDKA on 950kc.

Tuning in WBT and WPG, one on one side of KMOX, the other on the other, is a real feat.

WBZ, Springfield, Mass., a 15,000 watt station on 990kc, just below KDKA, always has been difficult to tune in hereabouts.

Cutting through between WLW and WGN and getting WOR, Newark, N. J., is still a good test of selectivity in this region.

The stunt of tuning in coast-to-coast with a one-notch turn of the dial is easier now than in the days when KNX, Hollywood, and WBAL, Baltimore, Md., were the stations involved. WTIC now shares time with WBAL, so there is little difficulty—when KRLD is not smothering KNX.

McCormack on Air Thanksgiving Night

John McCormack is to sing "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Mary Dear," for which the famous tenor wrote the words; "Bird Songs at Eventide," "Bantry Bay," Rachmaninoff's "To the Children" and Stanley Dickson's "Thanks to God," in his radio appearance on the Victor program at 9 o'clock Thanksgiving night over KSD and allied stations.

The orchestra, under Nat Shilkret, will play for the first time on the air the conductor's new march, "The Victor," which is to be used hereafter to introduce this program.

The Police Department of New York City plans to equip 500 police motor cars with receiving sets, which will be tuned in on a central broadcasting station at headquarters. To keep secrecy, the messages will be sent in code on a special wave length.

Texas Station Tuning 'Broadly' On St. Louis Sets

KRLD Frequently Prevents Any Reception of KNX at Hollywood, Cal.

Owners of selective radio sets who do not live under the shadow of KMOX's transmitter are not reporting any reception difficulties because WTAM, Cleveland, O., and WTIC, Hartford, Conn., are broadcasting with 50,000 watts on adjoining channels. KMOX is on the 1090 channel; WBT, Charlotte, N. C., on 1080kc; WTAM on 1070; WTIC on 1060; KNX, Hollywood, Cal., on 1050 and KRLD, Dallas, Tex., on 1040.

The only interference in that part of the broadcast band that amounts to anything is that caused by KRLD, which is "very broad." often preventing reception of KNX and sometimes "washing over" on WTIC. Incidentally, KRLD is using only 10,000 watts.

Listeners are experiencing the usual difficulty in tuning in the Pacific Northwest stations. KJR, a 5000-watter at Seattle, Wash., is on the 970kc channel, just above KDKA on 980kc.

Tuning in WBT and WPG, one on one side of KMOX, the other on the other, is a real feat.

WBZ, Springfield, Mass., a 15,000 watt station on 990kc, just below KDKA, always has been difficult to tune in hereabouts.

Cutting through between WLW and WGN and getting WOR, Newark, N. J., is still a good test of selectivity in this region.

The stunt of tuning in coast-to-coast with a one-notch turn of the dial is easier now than in the days when KNX, Hollywood, and WBAL, Baltimore, Md., were the stations involved. WTIC now shares time with WBAL, so there is little difficulty—when KRLD is not smothering KNX.

McCormack on Air Thanksgiving Night

John McCormack is to sing "Kathleen Mavourneen," "Mary Dear," for which the famous tenor wrote the words; "Bird Songs at Eventide," "Bantry Bay," Rachmaninoff's "To the Children" and Stanley Dickson's "Thanks to God," in his radio appearance on the Victor program at 9 o'clock Thanksgiving night over KSD and allied stations.

The orchestra, under Nat Shilkret, will play for the first time on the air the conductor's new march, "The Victor," which is to be used hereafter to introduce this program.

The Police Department of New York City plans to equip 500 police motor cars with receiving sets, which will be tuned in on a central broadcasting station at headquarters. To keep secrecy, the messages will be sent in code on a special wave length.

Here and There on the Air —By J. L.

THE first of a series of concerts by the newly-formed KMOX male chorus of 25, under the direction of Max Steindel, solo 'cellist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will be given from 8:30 to 9:30 p. m. next Thursday, Nov. 28. Thirteen other concerts will be given by this group over KMOX, Tuesday evenings from 6:30 to 7, beginning Dec. 3.

MAX STEINDEL members of the Apollo Club at St. Louis.

The 25 men in this chorus are

Steindel has conducted many choruses and pageants. He was conductor at the dedication of the State Capitol of Missouri, conducting both choruses, dancers and orchestra. He has conducted oratorios such as "Elijah," "The Messiah" and "The Creation." Two years ago he was guest conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at a pop concert and also conducted the pageant of Robin Hood given last spring at Villa Duchesne

Mrs. Esmerelda Berry Mayes will be accompanist and assistant to Steindel. D. C. Zytowski is president of the chorus.

The Matchless Baton in PAPI'S Hand . . .

"COULD I be sure that everyone could hear the orchestras I have conducted with the same realism with which my SILVER RADIO recreates music for me, I would be happy indeed."
—Gennaro Papi.

4 Screen-Grid Tubes Needs No Aerial

A Radio for the Finest Home

SILVER RADIO is mounted, appropriately enough, in the very finest of consoles: patterns are available in sufficient variety to suit the most exacting requirements. The Concert Grand, (illustrated)—peerless in the beauty of its diamond-matched walnut panels flanking a glorious center panel of figured bird's-eye maple—is priced, without tubes, at $173. Other models $160 and $195.

The surprising technical superiority of SILVER RADIO is felt in the thrill of clear, humless reception, extreme distance-range and selectivity without any aerial connection, resulting from the exclusive combination, under world-famous Silver-Marshall engineering, of features such as screen-grid power detection (4 screen-grid tubes in all), band-selector tuning, and the now famous Overtone Switch, minimizing static interference. Requiring no aerial connection for local or distance reception, SILVER RADIO is unique in its convenience.

...and the Matchless SILVER RADIO in PAPI'S Home

NOT the faintest trill of the violin—not the lightest touch of the kettledrum—can escape the master ear of Gennaro Papi as the expanses of the Metropolitan, or of Chicago's Ravinia Opera, resound to orchestra and chorus under his command.

Certainly it is no mere coincidence when Papi selects to adorn his own home the selfsame SILVER RADIO which has set the pace throughout 1929 with quality built upon successful screen-grid research and production since 1927—product of America's first screen-grid manufacturer—Silver-Marshall . . . You cannot, perhaps, employ directly the ear of a Papi to select your radio—but with a radio like SILVER, which really does things no other can equal, it does not require a Papi to see the difference. Any SILVER RADIO dealer can, in fact, show you in three minutes, by actual comparative test, the same clear superiority, of tuning as well as of tone, that is built into the product of this famous laboratory.

Few Broadcasters Made Profit in 1927

A Revenue Bureau compilation shows that 97 broadcasters out of the some 600 which were in operation during 1927 reported $73,363,297 income. Of these, 20 grossed $66,121,000 for a profit of $9,828,929; 58 reported grosses totaling $7,241,897, but a loss of $1,181,127. Almost 11 per cent of the $73,363,297 was shown as profit.

It is reasonable to suppose there will be a marked increase in the percentage of profit shown for 1928 and 1929, since the industry has really just gotten into its stride during these years.

Will Announce Program and Listen to It at Same Time

Deems Taylor, composer of "The King's Henchman," will announce, with comment and explanation a two-hour broadcast from 5 to 7 p. m. Thanksgiving Day, which is to to go on the air over KMOX and 40 other stations by means of an electrical transcription device. Actually, during those two hours, Taylor will be in the music room of the Colonial farmhouse on his farm near Stamford, Conn.

"The most interesting thing about this two-hour broadcast," said Taylor, is the fact that it gives the radio listener a chance to compare performances. There are six military bands on the program, from England, Ireland, Scotland, Germany, France and John Philip Sousa's from the States."

The program will include music by bands, orchestras, instrumental ensembles and choruses from nine European countries.

Artists in Chain Programs on St. Louis Stations

ALEXANDER KIRILLOFF, leader of the Russian balalaika orchestra that plays in the Troika Bells concerts over KSD at 1 o'clock Sunday afternoons.

JOSEPH WHITE, who won radio and vaudeville fame as "The Silver Mask Tenor" and has returned to broadcasting. He was scheduled as soloist for Gillette program over KWK last night.

G. MAILLARD KESSLERE

HELEN HOUSE, contralto, who is to be one of the soloists in the Brown Bilt Footlites broadcast at 7 o'clock next Friday night over KMOX.

PEDRO DE CORDOBA, internationally known actor, who is narrator for the Westinghouse Salute broadcasts at 6:30 Wednesday evenings over KWK and an NBC chain.

Radiograms.

The Federal Radio Commission has received applications for more than 200 new broadcasting stations. Petitions have been filed by 200 other stations for changes and increases in power.

A license was recently granted to the world's smallest and lowest powered broadcasting station, located on the chest of a parachute jumper, and using only one watt of power. The license was granted to Roosevelt Field, New York City. It will be used by the parachute jumping instructor at the field, who will tell his class on the ground what he is doing after he jumps from a plane in flight. He will talk into a microphone strapped to his chest, and his voice will be picked up by a receiving set on the ground.

Some screen grid receivers have a tendency toward broad tuning on strong signals. This broad tuning is greatly emphasized by too long an aerial. Screen grid tubes provide great sensitivity and permit operation of a receiver with a very short antenna.

A Policy that Guarantees You the Utmost in Radio Performance

The Stewart-Warner Radio is kept right up to the minute by constantly incorporating every worthwhile scientific discovery, and by adding every worthwhile engineering improvement as quickly as found practical.

This policy has enabled us in the middle of this radio season to offer only the latest, most modern radio. A set that in comparative tests has won the title "The Set with the Punch."

If you are contemplating the purchase of a radio you may buy a Stewart-Warner now in full confidence that you are securing the best that 23 years of large scale precision manufacturing experience can produce.

Stewart-Warner radios are scientifically manufactured. Our output is limited by our painstaking accuracy in maintaining quality.

You may buy with the assurance that you are buying an up to the minute radio and getting full value for the price you pay.

Our price is based upon the cost of large scale production plus only a fair profit. We have not lowered the quality. We cannot lower the price.

Twenty-four million satisfied Stewart-Warner customers have been sold on this policy. It applies to radio as to our many other products.

Note the outstanding features of the Stewart-Warner Radio listed here at the left. Ask you dealer to give you an immediate demonstration. Performance will decide for you which radio you want to own.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

The radio that gives you most, NOW costs the least! SCREEN-GRID

THE RADIO that does everything you want your radio to do is now the lowest-priced quality radio in the world.

You can actually have this famous Atwater Kent Screen-Grid Set in your home tonight and pay much less than the price asked for sets that still use old-fashioned tubes.

This new saving of $27 is the kind of sensation that has come to be expected from Atwater Kent.

Atwater Kent was the only radio manufacturer in a position to make first successful use of the wonderful new Screen-Grid tubes.

Atwater Kent was the only one with seasoned methods and a factory big enough to make fine radio on such a scale. The enormous success of this new set opened the way for countless new efficiencies in the Atwater Kent factory.

Now again Atwater Kent shares with the public the benefits of manufacturing improvements. Thus the saving made possible by world-wide demand comes back to you in this startling $27 reduction and the new low price of $109.

That's the story behind the great news. Get your Atwater Kent now at the new price and congratulate yourself the rest of your life.

This Model CR-255 $144 Less Tubes

In cabinets $109 and up, less tubes

Allen McQuhae On Air Tomorrow

Music of Victor Herbert, sung by Olive Kline, soprano, and Allen McQuhae, tenor, and played by an orchestra directed by Adrain Schubert will be the feature of the General Motors broadcast over KSD tomorrow night. Both singers and the orchestral director were selected for this broadcast because of their familiarity with the music of the Irish-American composer, and acquaintanceship with the ideas he endeavored to express in his songs.

Miss Kline has been heard in General Motors concerts so often that she has been called the "Family's most intimate friend." Adrain Schubert is also an old friend of the "Family." Allen McQuhae, Irish tenor, sang in 21 successive radio recitals in a single season. He has been off the air for months.

Mississippi Station Joins NBC Network

WJDX, Jackson, Miss., will be added to the National Broadcasting Co. system on Dec. 1. The addition of the Southern station brings the number served by the NBC to 72 stations. WJDX is the first station in Mississippi to become a permanent outlet for a national network.

WJDX operates on a wave length of 236.1 meters (1270 kc) with 500 watts power. KECA, Los Angeles, owned and operated by Earle C. Anthony, Inc., has become the seventh station in the Pacific Coast network of the NBC. KECA operates on 1430 kilocycles with 1000 watts.

Lightning Arrester Needed.

Every outdoor antenna should have an approved lightning arrester, a small protective device inserted in the lead in and ground system. A radio antenna so fitted serves as a lightning rod, in that it allows static a path to the ground, so does not accumulate a dangerous charge of electricity.

Radio Commission Lacks Money for Paying Employes

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Administration of radio may be temporarily halted on Dec. 1. On that day the Federal Radio Commission may be forced to discharge its entire staff of employes, and wait for a month or two before making a move.

Money, or rather the lack af it, is the root of the trouble. The Radio Commission has only a few hundred dollars available.

It had been counting on getting $25,000 from the Department of Commerce. The Comptroller-General has ruled that the money cannot be transferred.

With a payroll of $16,000 every two weeks, the Radio Commission will be forced to suspend operations, unless the Comptroller-General reverses himself, or money is obtainable from some other source.

Amos 'n' Andy Time Change Due to Protests

Comedians to Broadcast at 7 P. M. Eastern Time for Atlantic Coast and Again at 10:30 P. M. for Mid-West Listeners — NBC Offices Deluged With Letters

CORRELL and Gosden as Amos 'n' Andy. Because of protests by listeners, their time on the air has been changed again. Beginning tomorrow they are scheduled at 10:30 p. m. over all stations using St. Louis time; 9:30 Mountain time; 8:30 Pacific Coast time. Listeners in the Eastern time zone will hear them as now at 7 P. M. So the comedians will broadcast twice each night, except Sunday.

The change in time of the Amos 'n' Andy broadcasts, beginning tomorrow, from 6 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. St. Louis time, 9:30 Mountain time and 8:30 Pacific Coast time, was due to the deluge of protests from listeners throughout the Middel West. That these protestants will be much better pleased by the shift to so late an hour is doubtful.

The principal reason for the avalanche of letters was the fact that hundreds of thousands of listeners in states using Central Standard time did not get home in time to tune in Amos 'n' Andy. Listeners in states using Eastern Standard time were generally satisfied, because Amos 'n' Andy were broadcasting to them at 7 p. m. instead of 11 p. m. They will continue satisfied, probably, as they will hear the comedians at the same hour.

Gorrell and Gosden, who play Amos 'n' Andy, will have to make two studio appearances every night except Sunday.

More than 15,000 letters protesting against putting Amos 'n' Andy on the air at so early an hour as 6 p. m. have been received at the National Broadcasting Co. offices and by the sponsor every day since the shift went into effect last Monday. The total number of protests is more than 100,000.

The first day's mail contained 200 letters of protest from Denver, Colo., alone, one containing a petition bearing 1634 signatures. Many letters threatened to boycott the sponsor's product. Every letter indicated that Western listeners felt themselves discriminated against in favor of the East. A Denver newspaper carried an eight-column head on the first page on Amos 'n' Andy and inside an editorial demanding that they be put back on their old time.

A Chicago newspaper whose station, WMAQ, carried the Amos 'n' Andy feature, has been conducting a ballot on the change. Only 4 per cent of listeners voting favored the change to 6 p. m.

Protests, some of them violent in tone, have been received in large numbers by KWK, St. Louis, which has been broadcasting Amos 'n'

What's New In Radio Industry

More Broadcasts Sponsored by Radio Manufacturers Than by Any Other Industry—New Lyric Models Out—Grebe Develops Sets With Small Audio Stage—W. E. Fuetterer to Distribute Gulbransen Receivers.

IN sponsoring broadcasts the radio industry ranks first, the automotive industry second and the drug interests third, according to a recent survey by the Radio Manufacturers' Association. Within the year the number of radio manufacturers supporting programs about doubled until today 27 of them are actively sponsoring programs. During the first six months of this year they spent nearly $2,000,000 for time on the air and entertainers.

Screen Grid Power Detector in Gulbransen Sets.

The W. E. Fuetterer Supplies Co. has been appointed distributer of Gulbransen receivers. Screen grid power detection is used in these sets, which also have a double primary circuit designed for exceptional selectivity for distance tuning and to get rid of interference from local stations.

There are nine tubes in the chassis, which is in one unit with the power unit. Audio transformers are of large size and the final audio stage uses 45-type tubes in push pull.

By using a local-distance switch, several tubes can be cut out of the circuit for reception of local stations or the full efficiency of the receiver can be called into play. A special point is made of matching the R F transformers, and comparison tests with master sets are made in the laboratory.

Cabinets are in walnuts and veneers of fine woods.

These sets are made in Chicago, where the Gulbransen Co. has been making pianos for years. The results of experience with pianos are evident in the construction and finish of the furniture models.

New De Luxe Set Models.

Three de luxe cabinet models have been added to the Lyric line of receivers. The bodies—all in Italian Renaissance style—are similar. The cabinet legs are different, heights of models ranging from 41 to 50 inches. Dial panels and insides of door panels are finished in butt walnut, while front mouldings are carried around on the side panels. The appearance of authentic Renaissance furniture, which was finished with oil which darkened with age but had high lights rubbed up by constant wear, has been reproduced in the Lyric cabinets. Either the eight-tube or 10-tube Lyric chassis may be had in any of these new models.

Fits Receiver Into Auto.

Ralph Manley, a radio engineer of Anderson, Ind., reports an experience with one of the new Crosley screen grid No. 21 models in an auto.

"I have a coupe car, so mounted set and speaker on the shelf back of the seat, putting the B and C batteries on the rear deck and using the storage battery of the car for my A supply," he writes.

"I used a copper screen in the top for my aerial, grounding the set to the frame of the car. I received five or six stations over 500 miles distant.

"I then thought I would take a drive and enjoy the music. Then trouble began. The engine noise was louder than the music. I eliminated the noise by using a 25,000 ohm resistance in a series with each spark plug and a 30,000 ohm resistance in series with the center wire on the distributor cap, which is also the wire to the ignition coil.

"To eliminate noise from the generator, I shunted across from the relay box to the ground with a .25 mfd. condenser. I found that by this arrangement I could ride along and enjoy music from distant stations."

New Models Have One Audio Stop.

Use of three screen grid tubes and a power detector in a new type of circuit makes it possible to have only one audio stage in the new Grebe tubes, yet produce all the volume usable in a home. The single audio stage uses two 45 type tubes in push pull. Hum elimination and avoidance of second harmonics are two advantages gained.

Test for Set's DX Range.

A coin test of the distance reach of a receiver is explained by McMurdo Silver, the Chicago radio manufacturer.

The aerial is disconnected, but the ground wire remains hooked up for this tryout. A 50-cent piece is fastened under the aerial connecting post. If the radio rates A-1 sensitivity, a finger held on the coin in this position will bring in all local stations and a few distant programs. On an extra sensitive receiver the programs will actually jump several inches from finger to coin, Silver says. With a finger close to the coin, the program should spread over only 2 or 3 degrees on the dial, if the radio is adequately selective, he declares.

New De Forest Sales Manager.

G. J. Hallam has been appointed general sales manager of the De Forest Radio Co., Jersey City, N. J., manufacturers of De Forest audions. Hallam goes to the De Forest organization at a time when the distribution of radio tubes is becoming increasingly extensive and diversified. Incidentally, he is a pioneer aviator, having piloted airplanes back in the earliest days.

Amos 'n' Andy Time Change Due To Protests by West

Andy. Many St. Louisans favored the 6 p. m. time, but a majority opposed the shift.

The reason for the change to 6 p. m. was said at NBC headquarters to have been numerous complaints that the 11 p. m. time was disrupting Eastern households, as children were clamoring to postpone bedtime until Amos 'n' Andy had signed off.

WLW, the 50,000-watt station at Cincinnati, O., dropped Amos 'n' Andy when their time was changed to 6 p. m.

Ford Billings, director of the station, said he did not regard this feature as one for the dinner hour, anyway. Much of WLW's audience is in the Central Time area, so the 10 p. m. time was satisfactory to them.

Commenting on the explanation that children were kept up too late waiting to hear the program, Billings said WLW had not received a letter indicating that children cared to listen to the act.

Detecting Noisy Battery.

A noisy battery can be detected by means of a headset. After the set has been used for a while and the noise again starts, connect a headset directly across each 22½-volt section of the batteries. There will be a loud click when the headset is first connected. The noisy battery will make a sputtering sound in the receivers, but the batteries that are not giving the trouble will be free from noise. Be sure to make this test only after the noise has started in the set. A noise of this kind will continue in the receiver, even after the aerial and ground have been disconnected.

Betty Crocker on Air Thanksgiving Day

Betty Crocker will broadcast Thanksgiving morning at 9:45 over KSD a special Thanksgiving message. This message will take the place of her usual Thursday morning radio cooking school lesson, which is postponed until Dec. 5, when she will broadcast the last lesson in her fall term.

"Hearty Winter Desserts" is the subject of this lesson, in which she will give recipes and suggestions for steamed puddings.

Star Radio Tenor Was High School Pupil in St. Louis with the Chicago Civic Opera, creating the title role in "The Legend of the Piper."

Returning to St. Louis in 1920, he sang as soloist in Pilgrim Congregational Church and Shaare Emeth Synagogue, and taught singing at Shurtleff College, Alton, Ill. He also sang as soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

He made his radio debut in Chicago four years ago, and sang from stations in Cleveland and Cincinnati, finally going to New York. Despite his long singing experience, it was felt, when he won an audition to decide who would be the tenor soloist with the A. & P. Gypsies, that he was not sufficiently widely known for his name to attract listeners to the program. Accordingly, he was billed with the orchestra anonymously. But by the time a year had passed he had won such popularity and so many requests were received that the name of the Gypsies' soloist be revealed, that this was done. Since then Smith has become one of the featured radio tenors.

Incidentally, the singer is a brother of the St. Louis aviator, Lieut. Edgar C. Schmid, who is a friend of Col. Lindbergh.

gripping moments. Making conversation all day long was no small job, especially as in some pictures she had to play as many as five different roles with different vocal characterizations. When the first synchronized talking picture reached Broadway, it was Miss Shields' voice that won as much admiration from critics "in the know" as the acting of the stars.

Soon after that a radio director, spending a night off at the first "talkies," heard a speaking voice that he liked. Tracing it to its owner, he demanded that she appear for a radio audition.

So well did this turn out that Miss Shields was soon a "regular" on NBC programs, appearing with Helen Handin in the "Two Troupers" skit. She wrote many of the skits, using her own experiences on the road.

Within a few months she was appearing on others' programs. She now is co-star with Rudy Vallee in the Fleischmann Hour each Thursday evening over KSD.

Broadcasting stations in Europe use waves from 200 to 2000 meters.

Greater Power, More Cylinders, Forecast in 1930

New York and Chicago Shows Expected to Reveal Trend in This Direction—High-Powered Cars Said to Be Safe.

"More power to you!" seems to be the phrase that automobile manufacturers have whispered to their new 1930 model motors. Of the 44 makes to be exhibited at the national automobile shows in January, details of at least one-third of this number have reached show headquarters. Of the remaining two-thirds, while nothing has been officially announced, rumor has it that many of these will reveal increased horsepower.

As usual, the two national shows will be held in Grand Central Palace, New York, and the Coliseum, Chicago, respectively, under the auspices of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. The New York exhibit will take place from Jan. 4 to 11, and the Chicago show from Jan. 25 to Feb. 1.

Each season these shows reveal definite progress in car construction, and 1930 will be no exception to the rule. By taking note of a dozen or more of the new types, it is possible to gauge certain tendencies and trends of design. Increase in horsepower is, of course, not new, for manufacturers have been stepping it up for years. Many of them began with one cylinder; then the two-cylinder horizontal-opposed design was tried by some; others experimented with a three-cylinder, two-cycle engine; for a long while the four-cylinder type became fairly well standardized; sixes next had their boom; then came V-type eights and V-type twelves, and more recently straight eights. This season the first twin eight is announced.

However, methods for obtaining greater horsepower have been varied. One outstanding feature is the development of what is referred to in engineering circles as the reamer method of increased horsepower; that is, enlarging the bore of the cylinders, a number of the popular-priced ones having increased the bore one-eighth of an inch. Compression ratios seem to have about reached their peak from the practical standpoint. Engine speeds—revolutions per minute of the crankshaft—are being increased slightly by those manufacturers who appear to have been a bit backward in accepting the higher speeds. There are still two classes of thought in regard to engine speeds. One prefers a medium speed, and by using certain gear ratios or engine size, or both, obtains the desired rapid acceleration. The other class favors the really high speed engine.

When quantity production in automobile came into focus, the average person did not desire to purchase a high-powered motor. One reason was the matter of economy in fuel consumption, but an even more pronounced reason was fear of driving a high-powered car. This was especially true of women who were afraid of meeting with accidents.

Usage, however, proved that in the case of a person who knows how to drive a car properly, the high-powered is less dangerous than the low-powered machine, for the simple reason that, with the increased acceleration possible, the driver is better able to get out of a dangerous pinch, such as dodging a runaway or becoming struck when shifting gears on a bad hill. The fact that traffic regulations have been perfect in most communities means that on concrete boulevards cars can be driven with perfect safety at higher speed than was the case in the days before regulated traffic.

How many cylinders? This is a question that the greatest engineer minds have endeavored to answer, but it has never been settled to a point of standardization. Specifications tables at present available reveal that 28 makers are now producing sixes; 22 have eight-cylinder cars; one offers a leading model with a six or an eight cylinder power plant, and a minority still produces fours.

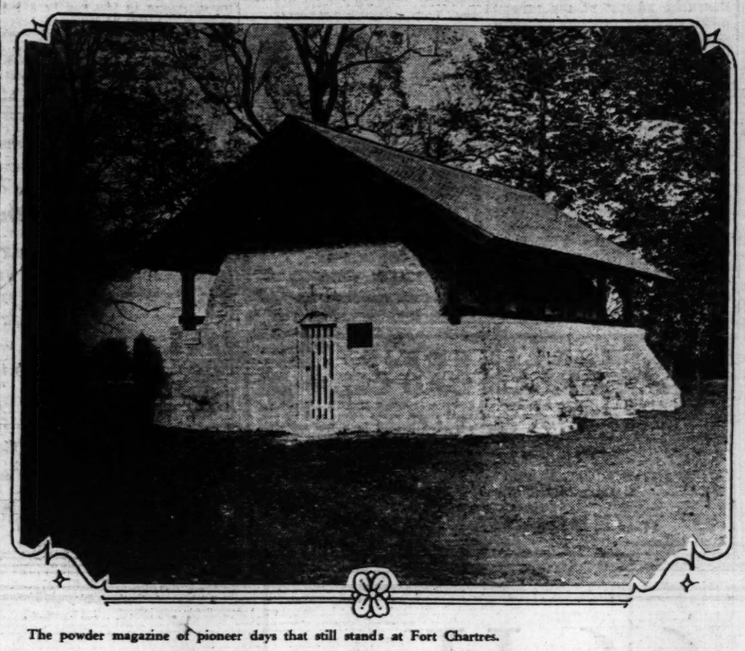
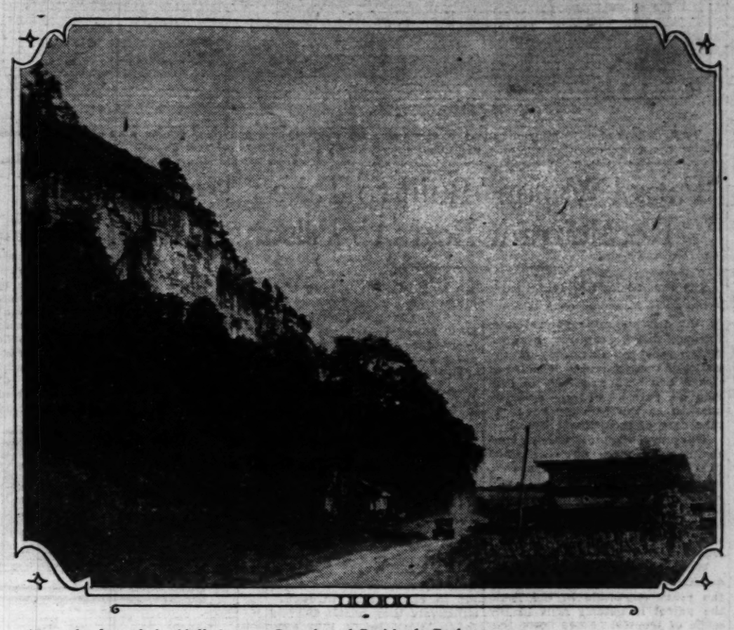
Tour to Old Fort Chartres, on Mississippi, Is Interesting One-Day Trip



The powder magazine of pioneer days that still stands at Fort Chartres.



Along the foot of the bluffs between Renault and Prairie du Rocher.

By F. A. BEHYMER.

IT would be difficult to discover a one-day motor tour out of St. Louis as crowded with change of scene and interest as a leisurely trip to old Fort Chartres on the Illinois bank of the Mississippi, near Prairie du Rocher. Within less than 50 miles are to be found the level richness of the great American bottom, the vistas of hill country in autumn garniture, a curious geological area where the landscape is pitted with "sinks," rock bluffs rising high above the treetops at their base and again the lowland, quaint villages along the way, historic spots at the journey's beginning and ending and the clash of contrast between the old and the new.

Crossing the Municipal Bridge and turning left a block at the end of the east approach into Route 3, doubling back on it under the bridge approach, the way lies for a couple of miles through an important factory section, including the industrial community of Monsanto. On ahead and off to the left airplanes are sailing, circling and swooping. Pupils of the Parks Airport are up taking their lessons, learning to play their part in the new air era. And then, turning aside from the paved track, one is, quite suddenly, back in the seventeenth century, in old Cahokia, where the white man's history began in the Middle West.

Still standing there are the Holy Family Church of weather-boarded logs and the Jarro mansion which extended its hospitality to Lafayette when he visited St. Louis, and a few weather-beaten stones that mark the resting place of men long dead. Scattered about are a few decaying curiously fashioned houses that were homes when St. Louis, like Cahokia, was a village outpost, on civilization's westward march.

Hemmed in between the motor highway on one side and the airport on the other, lacking now even the foliage that screened it while the summer lasted, beat upon by the honking of horns and the putter of planes, Cahokia heeds the one no more than the other, but sleeps on, secure in its historic heritage.

Leaving Cahokia and crossing the drainage ditch bridge, the traveller comes to another sharp contrast, a quiet village in a fertile lowland given over to the gaucheries of an oil boom, dooryards devastated, skeleton rigs above the housetops, tanks, where unincumbered lawns ought to be and oil over everything. Not a pretty sight, but typical of what happens to a town when somebody finds oil thereabouts. And now the deadly borers, having done their worst to Dupo, are moving out into the countryside and even to the top of the nearby line of bluffs that the highway approaches on its way to Columbia, first skirting them and then piercing them and winding upward to where Columbia sits, crescent-shaped, a pleasant place in a prosperous countryside.

This being a leisurely trip and the day hardly begun, it will not be amiss to turn to the left in the middle of the town and climb to the cemetery on its hill, out that way, and stand here and view the sweep of the curiously curved town and the farther sweep of the wider scene.

Returning to the trail it is only six miles to another well-favored town, Waterloo, seat of Monroe County, with its tree-circled courthouse.

Four miles beyond Waterloo there is a sign, at the right of the road, that points the way to Prairie du Rocher and old Fort Chartres and, if one is going that far, to the ferry that crosses to Ste. Genevieve. The road leading that way is not paved, but it is well surfaced and offers no hindrance in fair fall weather. And for the faint discomfort of travel over unpaved roads there are greater compensations than are offered by the roads that are paved, for it is one of the crimes laid to the paved roads that, offsetting their usefulness, they despoil the changing scene.

It should here be told that, before long, there will be concrete all the way for those who like concrete better. Not connecting here with Route 3, but 16 miles further along, at Ruma, where Route 3 swings closer to the river. Then it will be a mere eight miles or so over the upland and dropping down into Prairie du Rocher and thence on, four miles to the fort. From the top of the hill above Prairie du Rocher and down through the town and so on to the fort the paving has been completed but between Route 3 and the top of the hill construction is still in progress and it is no way for anybody to go. So, for the present, there is nothing to do but turn off where the sign points and there will still be some very good reasons for turning off there, in fair weather, even after the paved way from Ruma is finished.

Not far from the turn-off the region of the sinks is entered. At both sides of the road, in field and forest, there are great circular depressions, sloping to a point at the center, products of the age-long action of water draining into crevices of the porous geological formation. Some of them, through clogging, have become partially filled, sufficiently to make cultivation feasible. Clogging of others has created ponds. Most of them are precipitous and the water that trickles down their sides still drains at the center into lower regions, where it works unceasingly, unseen, carving out the wonders of a cave, underlying all that region, which is claimed to be as vast and as marvelous as the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky.

The entrance to this cave is a mile or two to the left, on a side road, into which a turn is made at St. Joe, three miles beyond Burksville. Once, a good while ago, facilities were provided for entering and exploring but in late years there has been no effort to bring the cave to public attention.

On beyond St. Joe, which consists of a store, a church, a cemetery and a dwelling or two, there are more sinks, in places so thick as to discourage farming and even in the quaint old village of Renault they are to be found, craters on the edge of which old-fashioned houses perch dizzily. This Renault is a treasure in itself, still reminiful in its architecture of the early French influence.

A little beyond Renault the country becomes more broken and presently you are at the top of a steep and winding hill and there is a view across the lowland to the Missouri hills that lie beyond the river.

At the bottom of the hill the road runs along at the base of the bluffs, sheer barriers of rock in striking and curious formations, rising above the treetops, bluffs of rugged beauty not excelled by any that front the Mississippi from the mouth of the Illinois to where they end above the mouth of the Ohio.

This is not the shortest way from Renault to Fort Chartres, but it is the best way to go, partly because the road that is traveled below the bluffs and partly because of the town that is reached, Prairie du Rocher, at the end of that road. It were a thing to be regretted, missing either. As for the town, it has the same charm as Renault, though larger and more important, the same atmosphere of the time when it was a very stronghold of French custom and culture.

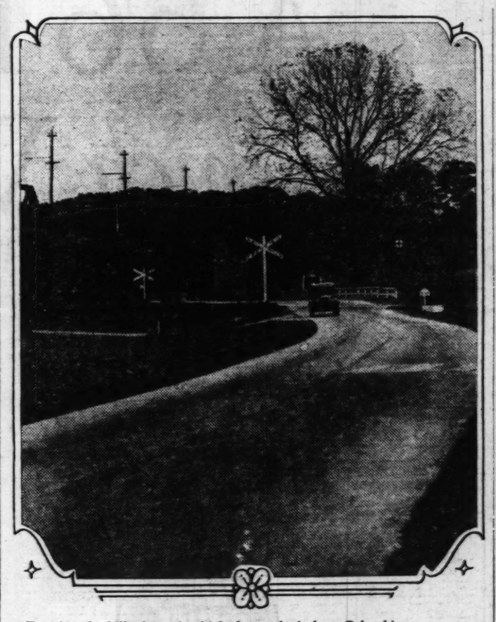
Entering the town, passing the mill, the dirt road ends on concrete, rising to the left on the way to Ruma and stretching to the right across the lowland to the fort, but it is a great mistake to hurry on, with Prairie du Rocher lying to one side, invitingly, a restful place to tarry, homes of odd architecture up one street and down another. After that it is a smooth spin of four miles out toward the river, except where a fill is yet to be paved, coming then to the gateway of Fort Chartres, guarded by the great guns of the late war.

This, then, is Fort Chartres, planted in 1718, earthworks and a wooden stockade at first, later walls of stone 16 feet high and two and a half feet thick at the base, inclosing barracks, stables, storerooms, officers' quarters and magazines, the stronghold which was the dominating center of French dominion. Until 1772, as the histories tell, it served well its purpose, and then, because of the encroachment of the river, causing the riverward wall to crumble, it was found untenable and the headquarters of the Illinois country were moved to Kaskaskia.

All this is now a State park, and not only the walls but the foundations of the buildings are outlined and one has been restored, as nearly as may be, and is to be used as a museum.

Homeward bound, there is a gain in leaving the paved approach at the fort and going north to the village of Kidd, or Boxtown, turning right there toward the bluffs, saving four or five miles and gaining not only a better view of the line of bluffs, but an easier ascent to Renault through the winding way of Grand Pass.

Back on Route 3, if the day is not too far spent, the return may be varied by cutting across from Columbia to Millstadt or Belleville, and so home.



Entering the hills through which the road winds to Columbia.

How New Vacuum Gear Shift Operates

As told in this section last Sunday, the Newmarket gear shift does away with hand lever control, as shown. Vacuum tubes lead to two small cylinders mounted on a cross member at the rear of the transmission case. A dial mounted below the steering wheel is set for whatever gear is desired, the clutch pedal pushed in and the gears shifted.

Health Service Warns Against Monoxide Gas

Poisonous Fumes From Automobile Exhaust Often Fatal in Winter.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 23.—The United States Public Health Service warns automobile owners at this time of year to be on their guard against the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning which is a constant threat to human life in the cold months. Motorists are especially cautioned against running the engine in a small closed space for any considerable period.

The Health Service warns against staying any time after driving into a garage and placing the car there, once the doors are closed. Within a very few minutes, it is pointed out by physicians connected with the service, the air becomes charged with the poisonous gas, resulting fatally in many instances.

Tests have been made in a small, inclosed garage, 20 feet long, 10 feet wide and 10 feet high. A small 23-horsepower engine was run and it was found to discharge about 25 cubic feet of gas a minute. Samples of the gas revealed an average content of 6 per cent carbon monoxide, or 1.5 cubic feet of the deadly gas per minute.

This was with a small engine. Larger ones, naturally, give off more poisonous fumes. This means of course, that the air will become laden much more quickly.

A ratio of 15 parts carbon monoxide to 10,000 parts of air is considered by Health Service scientists as a dangerous degree of concentration to which one may be exposed. The extreme danger is illustrated by the fact that the small engine being run only for warming up purposes would give off enough poisonous gas if the garage were closed to contaminate the air to the danger point in about three minutes.

The danger from carbon monoxide poisoning is that the gas is the more insidious because it does not make its presence known. It is colorless and tasteless, and virtually odorless, for the odor from the exhaust is not the carbon monoxide but the other components. The deadly substance attacks the red blood cells and so affects the respiratory organs that they become paralyzed and death quickly follows.

The fact that the victim loses consciousness so easily is the direct cause of many fatalities from carbon monoxide poisoning. Before running an engine in a small garage, car owners are warned, the precaution should be taken to see that windows and doors are opened. It is emphasized that this should be done even if the engine is to run for a very few minutes.

Modern Road Markers.

New York State is introducing a new system of highway numbering and road marking to aid in the comfort and convenience of the millions of motor tourists. These new signs will have black raised letters on a white background and will be octagonal in shape. Within the letters will be small button reflectors so that the signs will have the appearance of being illuminated when the rays of a headlight are turned on them at night. Twenty-eight thousand State route markers will be used and 4500 State and United States route markers. In addition, 2000 new detour markers and 2000 "junction" markers are being used.

Winter Touring Is Popular in New York State

Snow Removal Program Prepared by Counties as Motorists Seek Recreation.

With extensive snow removal programs prepared by many counties, New York is attaining a high rank among the regions for winter motor touring. Each year sees an increase in this form of diversion and it is expected that the coming season will set a new volume for the number of those who enjoy driving through the tingling air, amid glittering snows and besides ice-bound lakes.

New York State leads all others in the area devoted to parks and recreation grounds and in diversity of attractions. Its forest preserve alone is the greatest natural park in the country, with the single exception of Yellowstone National Park, according to Alexander MacDonald, Commissioner of Conservation.

There are more than 50 of these parks and the aggregate area is larger than the total land sections of Delaware and Rhode Island. The total acreage in New York devoted to park purposes, including the Adirondack and Catskill forest preserves, is more than 2,200,000.

Every year the provisions made for winter tourists are being extended. If the motorist is seeking recreation, amid rural surroundings for a day, week end or longer, it can be found, with accommodations for man and car within easy distance of virtually all of these interesting places.

With assurances pledged by a number of countries that New York-Montreal highway will be kept open all year around there is every prospect that the volume of motor travel into the Adirondacks will remind the tourist of summer traffic, especially during the holiday period and the winter sports at Lake Placid.

As a world-wide recognition of the charm of the Adirondacks as a winter playground, the third Olympic winter games for 1932 will take place at Lake Placid. The bobsled run, which will be one of the longest in existence, will be built on one of the mile-high mountains and will furnish a vertical drop of 200 meters, compared with 156 meters and 130 meters on the bobsled runs used in 1928 Olympics.

From the day when the hunting season opens until the ice turns soft in the spring, the hum of the motor traveler is heard throughout the mountain highways as thousands visit the pine belt for the attractions offered on all sides.

"The number of folk who use the State parks runs far into millions every year and includes not only the residents of New York but hundreds of motor tourists from all parts of the country," said Commissioner MacDonald.

"There are facilities for every form of recreation, both summer and winter, from sea bathing to mountain climbing in the summer and skating, skiing, tobogganing and snow shoeing in the winter. The park system extends from Montauk Point in the east to Lake Erie on the west, and from the Palisades on the Hudson to the St. Lawrence River, with unsurpassed highway facilities that make all parks easily accessible.

Extra Bulbs.

An extra kit of headlight bulbs always is a good investment. They are almost sure to be needed.

One-Pedal Gear Shift Control Is Announced

Swedish Inventor Asserts That His Device Combines All Functions of Clutch, Brake, Accelerator Pedal and Hand Lever—In Use in Sweden for Three Years.

Dr. Fredrik Ljungstrom, noted Swedish engineer and inventor, who has been in this country some little time, announces the new Spontan automatic transmission, which he has been developing for a number of years. This transmission features a single pedal control whose action embraces all the functions fulfilled by clutch, brake and accelerators pedals and the gear-shift lever in the standard type of automobile. The system has been in successful use in taxicabs in Stockholm for the past three years, and has been installed in a number of well-known American cars abroad for demonstration purposes.

The system embraces both an automatic variable speed transmission, in which the gear ratio is determined by a combination of centrifugal and inertia forces, and an interlocking connection between the control pedal and the throttle and brake controls. In its natural position the single control pedal is away from the floor, as is the clutch pedal in the standard arrangement of the controls, the engine is idling and the brakes are set. This latter effect gives to the system the advantage of a "dead-man" control, as complete release of the pedal at any time, whether voluntary or otherwise, immediately throttles down the engine and fully applies the brakes.

When the pedal is slightly depressed its movement at first releases the brakes, and thereafter controls the throttle exclusively, the brakes meantime being held in released position. Control of the relation between the speed of the engine and that of the propeller shaft is determined entirely by the relation between the speed of the engine and the tractive resistance of the car. When the engine is idling the torque transmitted is very low, nevertheless it is sufficient to cause the car to creep on level road unless the brakes are applied, so that the interlocking brake control is a feature inherent to the use of the automatic gear change.

Reverse movement is accomplished by lifting the control pedal above its normal position by means of a stirrup. After this has been done, depression of the pedal causes the car to move backward, instead of forward, the action and control being otherwise the same as in forward movement of the car. Forward movement is again restored by lifting the pedal, by means of the stirrup, a second time, and again depressing it.

The automatic speed conversion of the transmission proper is accomplished by means of an intermittent ratchet action contributed through the use of a pair of roller clutches. Reversing the car, it may be said incidentally, is accomplished by merely reversing the action of these clutches.

Intermediate between the engine and the propeller shaft is a floating assembly, which is associated with the latter by means of the roller clutch unit and with the flywheel of the engine by means of drag links. Motion of the flywheel, causing the entire assembly to revolve, acts primarily upon a pair of "bob-weights," which are analogous to the flyweights of a conventional fly-ball governor. These weights may move inward or outward radially, while the entire mechanism revolves, and as long as the torque transmitted by the engine is greater than the torque required to drive the car they will be held in their outward position by centrifugal force. In this relation a direct drive effect is secured, which is the normal operating relation of the gear.

When the torque resistance becomes greater than the torque impressed by the engine, on the other hand, the primary effect is to pull the bob-weights inward. As these weights are mounted on eccentrics relative movement in this part of the mechanism, due to the lag of the driven parts, causes the weights to be first pulled inward and then permitted to fly outward again under the constant pull of centrifugal force.

Thus when overcoming starting resistance or climbing grades, the "slip" in the transmission mechanism causes the bob-weights to flap in and out as the entire mechanism revolves. On the inward travel of the weights centrifugal force is being overcome, while on the outward travel it is being added to the torque of the engine. Thus a series of alternating impulses is established, and the remainder of the mechanism is devoted to the transformation of these alterna-

Auto Industry Holds Up Under Market Crash

Dealers Receive Brunt of Blow, Manufacturers Not Hurt, Observer Says.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 23.—That the recent collapses in the stock market will have some effect on the automotive industry is inevitable, according to E. H. Cram, an observer of the industry. No such debacle, hurling prices from dizzy heights to nearly rock bottom, could occur without producing vibrations which would be felt the length and breadth of the land.

Because of the many and varied factors involved, it is difficult to foresee to what degree of intensity the blows will strike the automotive industry. Yet an analysis of the situation enables one to determine what direction the force will follow.

As regards the manufacturers, the breaks could have occurred at no more propitious time if their effects were to be made the less consequential. Production already was in the midst of a seasonal recession and output was being curtailed with increasing rapidity. A few plants had closed for inventory. Others were planning to do so shortly. At many factories preparations for new models to be introduced next year had reduced activity almost to a minimum and in several instances employment had been lowered.

Latest statistical information released prior to the disaster revealed in virtually all companies satisfactory balance figures, earnings and inventories. The industry was fortified with a sound financial structure to stand the shock.

However, dealers will not be so fortunate. Because of the heavy production, they have had a hard struggle all year. Even prior to the stock market breaks, heavy inventories burdened them and few appeared on the way to exceed 1928 profit records. Indications were that on the whole they would show less earnings this year than last. And now the situation is still more trying.

Actual reduction in buying power in the automotive market resulting from losses suffered in the stock market is problematical and difficult to arrive at definitely. In such market collapses there are always those who gain while many others lose. Still, the bears are largely big operators, fewer in number and with greater individual resource of wealth behind them in proportion to those who constitute the bull side. The general public is not on the bear side.

There is no question but that the buying power of those who were involved in the bull market is momentarily at the lowest ebb to which it has declined in a long time. On the other hand, it must be remembered that the number of persons caught in the flood of selling was small as compared with the entire population or the potential buying power of the nation.

However, that lessening of purchasing power will exercise some limitation on future new car buying cannot be doubted. The amount is anybody's guess, but it is the dealer's greatest concern. With stocks already heavy, his possibilities of moving them to the extent that satisfaction will be obtained are considerably reduced.

The automotive industry has proved itself an exceptional one in that it recovers more easily from stock market blows than do many other industries. The condition produced by the combined results of unprecedented production during the early part of the year and the effect of the stock market on new car buying during the next six months probably will cause the industry to get under way and proceed at a slower and more cautious pace during the first part of 1930. In fact, it is quite likely that both production and sales for the first half of the coming year will be below the levels of the corresponding period of the current year.

It is the dealers who will face the immediate effects of the stock market crashes and these effects will be to some extent adverse. Their influence on the manufacturers, while not of immediate consequence, can very well result in a considerably changed program for 1930.

Devises Windshield Cleaner That Will Combat Ice, Sleet

A new windshield wiper, equipped with a metal container that distributes a film of anti-freeze solution over the windshield, effectively preventing formation of ice and sleet, has been invented by Jose Ciura De Castro, treasurer of the National Motors Corporation of America, with offices in the Arcade Building. A patent for the device has been applied for and production will begin soon, according to Ralph De Castro, president of the company.

Two Men Join Local Sales Staff

C. E. "Buzz" Graves, president of the Auburn-Graves Motor Co., Inc., local distributor of Auburns and Cords, announces the appointment of Dan Regan and Henry Huestis to his sales staff.

Regan has been connected with the sale of automobiles for 20 years, also selling high-priced machines. Huestis was at one time a salesman for one of the larger automobile dealers in St. Louis.

"Patrol Wagon" Built to Take Recalcitrant Bears to Prison

The much-talked-of crime wave seems to have spread even to some of the wild animals of Yosemite National Park, according to word received by the director of the National Park Service. Because of this it has been necessary to provide a patrol wagon specially adapted to the peculiar need to take care of recalcitrant bears.

The patrol wagon is unique, consisting of a piece of corrugated pipe large enough to contain a bear, sealed at one end and equipped with a trap door at the other end. It is mounted on pneumatic wheels to make the riding easy and attached to an automobile truck.

When word is received at headquarters that a bear is disturbing the peace anywhere in the park, the patrol is quickly sent to the scene of trouble. Since bears live solitary lives, each holding sway over certain areas, the disturber is likely to be the only bear in his particular neighborhood. The pipe bear trap on wheels is then detached and a piece of meat placed inside.

This guilty bear, smelling the meat, usually crowds into the pipe in search of it. The trap door slams shut and the bruin is a prisoner.

Bears so caught in the inhabited portion of Yosemite Valley are sentenced to banishment. They are marked with a daub of paint for purposes of later identification, and taken to the lower end of the park and released. If they "repeat" they are identified by the paint mark.

During October, 14 bears had rides in the patrol wagon, and only one, a mother bear, was found to return to the scene of her disgrace. She had an 8-months-old cub which was left behind, and her mother instinct being stronger than her fear of the law, she reappeared in a few hours.

October is a month of intense activity on the part of the park bears. They are then preparing to go into hibernation and, since they are not to eat again for four or five months, it is necessary that they should accumulate sufficient fat to carry them through. Instinctively they hustle actively for food. They break into screened porches, cabins, camps and other places which they suspect of harboring food supplies of any sort. Having been spoiled by feeding on "combination salad" at the garbage dumps of the hotels and camps during the summer, they become lazy and take what seems to them the easiest way of getting food, instead of foraging for it in the natural manner. They often find out, as has many a man creature, that what seems like the easiest way does not always turn out to be entirely pleasant.

Motorization of Infantry Begun At Camp Eustice

Fleet of 56 Cars and Trucks Gives Regiment Speed of 15 M. P. H.

Motorization of infantry is being effected generally at this time in the armies of the world and the United States army is at present conducting its first experiment along this line at Camp Eustis, Lee Hall, Va.

It is the Thirty-fourth Infantry that no longer has to hike with the slow military tread, riding instead in a fleet of 56 Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks. Extensive manuevers which have been conducted since last August have proved so successful that indications point to complete motorization of the army within the next few years.

The Camp Eustis experiments with the Chevrolet caravan have shown that it is possible to move a regiment with all its necessary supplies at an average speed of 15 miles an hour.

Another advantage that has been discovered is that cross-country travel has been found practical anywhere that the ground is hard. A tractor, included in the equipment, carries a lead horse for emergency purposes.

Today several regiments of British troops are being moved by motor cars. Through the British and American experiments it has been definitely learned that completely motorized units can transport 800 men eight times more swiftly than they can travel afoot.

Aside from the slow speed of animals there is the added inefficiency of mules and horses carrying heavy loads of feed for the other animals and themselves. One truck can carry 900 gallons of gasoline, an adequate reserve supply for the entire motor force.

Weymann Fashions Fabric Body for Two-Door Sedan

A new idea in custom bodies is presented by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co. with their new offering of a two-door sedan as designed by Weymann. Instead of designing this car in the American mode, Weymann has brought from Europe a duplicate in detail of some of the famous models owned by foreign nobility.

Many innovations new to Americans will be found in this new model. The body is entirely flexible, being constructed by hand of light but very tough ash framing. Every joint is formed by a steel pivot that allows perfectly free movement and weaving of body parts. Instead of the usual metal covering, Weymann bodies are inclosed with a weatherproof, long-wearing fabric material that requires no painting and cannot be dented. The covering, in appearance, is similar to grained leather.

Advantages of this new Weymann body are absolute silence, extreme durability and individuality in luxury and appearance.

Urge Caution in Closed Garages Against Monoxide

Warnings of the danger attending the operation of any automobiles in a closed garage, owing to the ever-present peril of carbon-monoxide poisoning, are being sent all Oldsmobile and Viking owners by Oldsmobile-Viking service officials. The warning is timely, inasmuch as the advent of cold weather increases the likelihood of owners starting their cars and warming them up before opening their garage doors.

Illinois Concern Enjoined From Featuring Simoniz

In handing down a decree restraining the Karbrite System, Inc., from advertising and featuring Simonizing, Judge Oscar Hebel of the Superior Court of Cook County, put an end to a scheme to extract money from persons interested in establishing themselves in the auto cleaning business.

Action was taken when it was found that they were misleading motorists by advertising Simonizing at low prices and substituting inferior products for Simoniz and Simoniz Kleener, which are specifically manufactured for use in this process.

According to Elmer Rich, president of the Simoniz company, this decision will protect motorists from the unscrupulous practice of substitution of questionable products for those nationally advertised and well known.

Income Pays All Federal Expenses Of Carlsbad Cave

If all the activities of the Federal Government paid the same return on their investment as does the Carlsbad Cave National Monument, New Mexico, income taxes would no longer be necessary. According to the records of the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior, during the first four months of the present fiscal year the revenues collected at the monument and turned into the Treasury amounted to 82 per cent of the appropriations available for all the Carlsbad Cave expenses during the entire fiscal year.

The revenues are derived primarily from the $2 guide fee charged all adult visitors making the trip through the great limestone cavern. Children 16 years of age or under, accompanied by an adult, are admitted free. The revenues derived from the cave have been mounting steadily, those of the fiscal year ended last June 30 showing a 70 per cent increase over 1928 and one of 157 per cent over 1927.

French Car Travels 20,000 Miles at 82 Miles an Hour

All records for sustained speed, previously held by American cars, were shattered on the Montlhery track near Paris, France, when Marchant, Morel, Kirlioff and Leroy de Presale drove their 12-cylinder sleeve-valve Voisin 20,000 kilometers in 224 hours 39 minutes 58.78 seconds, for an average speed of 82.97 miles per hour.

The engine of the Voisin is the same type used in all Willys-Knight cars built by the Willys-Overland Co.

The 20,000-mile record was made in 241 hours 43 minutes 40.9 seconds, an average of 82.73 miles per hour.

Says Fuel Supply Is Sufficient for Next 50,000 Years

Technologist Lists Quantities of Petroleum Known to Exist.

For the next 50,000 years, at any rate, American motorists may feel assured of ample fuel supply, for their cars, boats, airplanes and whatnots. Nor will it be necessary to carry a tank full of TNT or nitroglycerin in the car to get us there and bring us back.

Thus one great national worry was laid at rest, when Thomas A. Boyd, fuel technologist of the General Motors Corporation, recently talked to the Canadian section of the Society of Automotive Engineers' meeting at Toronto.

Boyd cited the known quantities of petroleum, crude petroleum, petroleum sands and shale deposits, and described three ways of converting coal into liquid fuel. These are pyrolysis, or coking at high and low temperatures; hydrogenation and gasification. The speaker dealt at some length with the Bergess hydrogenation process.

Speaking of the relative amounts of power contained in gasoline, Boyd stated that this hydrocarbon contains 19,000 British thermal units; TNT has 6500; nitroglycerin 2200; dynamite, 2500, and black powder, 1250.

New Principle of Tire Building Is Announced

Called Most Important Since Balloon Tires Came Out Eight Years Ago.

Announcement of the perfection of a new automobile tire construction known as the "air-flight" construction, described as the greatest advance in tire making principles since the advent of the balloon tire eight years ago, is made by the Fisk Tire Co., Inc., of Chicopee Falls, Mass. At the same time, J. H. Simons, southwestern zone manager of the company, arrived in St. Louis to take up with H. L. Flood, district manager, problems of merchandising the new product.

Because of the new basic design, performance and efficiency is said to have been increased. The new principle has met rigid tests, it is asserted.

Briefly stated, the air-flight principle means that, due to a larger air chamber, more scientific distribution of materials and more flexible materials, the load of the car is carried more on the air contained within the tire and less on the tire itself, resulting in smoother riding and minimum of bumps caused by shocks of the road that cannot be absorbed by the superfluous ruber in tires of the old type of construction, according to Fisk engineers. The new tires are also said to eliminate swaying at high speeds and to allow transmission of the engine power to a greater extent than either the balloon or the high pressure type of tire. Production of the new tire has already started.

Seven points of superiority are listed by the designers of the new tire over balloon or high pressure tires. The larger air chamber allows the weight of the car to ride less on the rubber and more on the air. All-cord material used in the construction of the tire carcass reduces internal friction and adds strength without rigidity or weight, and makes increased cushioning possible over the old type of tire construction.

The multiple cable bead reinforces and gives added strength to the tire at the rim and also increases side wall flexibility, while the increased length of what is known as the "flex area" in the side wall provides greater use of the air chamber in absorbing road shocks and eases jolts that are transmitted to the car due to uneven road conditions.

A stream line tread of the same width as the tire at the rim does away with superfluous and useless tread rubber that in ordinary tires is an unnecessary drag, and allows the tire to have greater air cushioning qualities. This stream line tread responds more promptly to acceleration and holds the car on a true straight-away course without side sway at high rates of speeds. Greater road contact of that tread results in longer tread wear and provides better non-skid qualities, it is said.

New Principle of Tire Building Is Announced

Called Most Important Since Balloon Tires Came Out Eight Years Ago.

Announcement of the perfection of a new automobile tire construction known as the "air-flight" construction, described as the greatest advance in tire making principles since the advent of the balloon tire eight years ago, is made by the Fisk Tire Co., Inc. of Chicopee Falls, Mass. At the same time, J. H. Simons, southwestern zone manager of the company, arrived in St. Louis to take up with H. L. Flood, district manager, problems of merchandising the new product.

Because of the new basic design, performance and efficiency is said to have been increased. The new principle has met rigid tests, it is asserted.

Briefly stated, the air-flight principle means that, due to a larger air chamber, more scientific distribution of materials and more flexible materials, the load of the car is carried more on the air contained within the tire and less on the tire itself, resulting in smoother riding and minimum of bumps caused by shocks of the road that cannot be absorbed by the superfluous rubber in tires of the old type of construction, according to Fisk engineers. The new tires are also said to eliminate swaying at high speeds and to allow transmission of the engine power to a greater extent than either the balloon or the high pressure type of tire. Production of the new tire has already started.

Seven points of superiority are listed by the designers of the new tire over balloon or high pressure tires. The larger air chamber allows the weight of the car to ride less on the rubber and more on the air. All-cord material used in the construction of the tiré carcass reduces internal friction and adds strength without rigidity or weight, and makes increased cushioning possible over the old type of tire construction.

The multiple cable bead reinforces and gives added strength to the tire at the rim and also increases side wall flexibility, while the increased length of what is known as the "flex area" in the side wall provides greater use of the air chamber in absorbing road shocks and eases jolts that are transmitted to the car due to uneven road conditions.

A stream line tread of the same width as the tire at the rim does away with superfluous and useless tread rubber that in ordinary tires is an unnecessary drag, and allows the tire to have greater air cushioning qualities. This stream line tread responds more promptly to acceleration and holds the car on a true straight-away course without side sway at high rates of speeds. Greater road contact of that tread results in longer tread wear and provides better non-skid qualities, it is said.

Credits One Idea for Growth Of Business in Last 17 Years

ST. LOUIS man who, 17 years ago, started in business with hardly any capital, but a great deal of enthusiasm and an impelling idea, today operates one of the most complete lubricating stations in the country. His present location at 1929 North Kingshighway boulevard, on the same site where he built his first 10 by 16 foot tin shack, is known to thousands as the "Oil Well."

L. C. Wilderman credits the growth of his business to a single idea. Years ago, on a cold, wintry day, a customer drove in and asked that the grease be taken out of the differential of his car.

"Impossible! That grease is too hard," was Wilderman's answer.

"But I want it out," rejoined the customer. And then it was that Wilderman made the discovery that he has since capitalized.

Procuring a length of garden hose, he attached it to the steam boiler in his plant, the hose nozzle was inserted in the differential and the steam turned on. It worked. The solidified grease and grit turned into a liquid mass that slowly drained out, until the casing was empty.

But although the grease was gone, moisture from the steam remained and it was this moisture that required months of experimentation to eliminate.

So efficient has steam proved in the cleaning of transmissions and differentials that Wilderman's service station has become widely known. In the past two years he estimates 60,000 cars, from almost every state, were lubricated there.

Last June Wilderman obtained a patent for his steam process. Now he plans to enlarge his main plant and ultimately to branch out to other parts of the city.

Al Schulz Made Weber Wholesale Used Car Manager

George Weber, president of the Weber Implement and Auto Co., St. Louis Hupmobile distributer, announces the appointment of Al Schulz, well-known in local automobile circles, as wholesale used car manager.

SCHULZ

Schulz has held the position of used car manager and also sales manager for several local auto dealers in the past and was once connected with the Weber company as a branch manager. Later he organized the Owl Motor Co., in which he sold his interest to again resume work with Weber.

His new position will consist of selling used cars to dealers in St. Louis and the surrounding territory.

Notes Decline In Production Of Crude Oil

Phillips Petroleum Co. Head Says Supply and Demand Are Now Stabilized.

In a recent interview with the Wall Street Journal, Frank Phillips, president of the Phillips Petroleum Corporation, said, "The material decline in production of crude oil during the last 30 days, due to voluntary pro-ration in California and the mid-continent area to current requirements, will stabilize the petroleum industry, conserve its resources and improve its earnings.

"It is particularly significant that pro-ration is voluntary, showing a whole-hearted co-operation and resulting in supply and demand being balanced for the first time in years. Another constructive factor is the unitization plan which is meeting with practically unanimous accord by both large and small companies. The American Petroleum Institute meeting at Chicago next month is expected to develop further constructive measures. It seems certain that the oil industry is rapidly reaching a better condition than at any time during recent years of overproduction."

Traffic Jams Cause Loss.

The loss from traffic congestion in the United States is estimated to be not less than $2,000,000,000 a year.

21-Year-Old Car Being Driven From Georgia to Factory

Traveling under its own power, a 1908 Marmon is on its way from Atlanta, Ga., to the Marmon factory at Indianapolis, Ind., where it will play an important part in the program of the 1930 Marmon-Roosevelt jubilee of the company's distributers and dealers.

The 21-year-old Marmon is being driven by G. H. Brizendine of the factory staff and is expected to arrive Dec. 9. Throughout the three-day meeting the 1908 car will be on display with current Marmon models in the Manufacturers' Building at the Indiana State Fairgrounds.

Prior to leaving Atlanta, the old Marmon was the property of C. B. Gibson of Augusta, Ga., who had used the car every day for a number of years. The name of the original purchaser is unknown and the car's early history likewise has been lost in the passing of the years. A conservative estimate, however, places the total mileage of the car at more than 250,000 miles in its 21 years of use.

Sabine Returns From Tire Session

The Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. will have its greatest year in 1930, according to W. G. Sabine, branch manager for the tire company, who has returned from the annual meeting of branch managers at the Akron, O., factories.

Sabine declared that sales for 1929 were the largest in the history of the company.

Representatives from all over the United States attended the conference to hear Harvey S. Firestone and other executives sum up the company's excellent progress during 1929 and outline the 1930 program.

Improved Show Cars Now Being Displayed

The improved Plymouth models now on display at showrooms throughout the country are the cars which will be displayed at the national automobile shows at New York and Chicago in January, according to announcement by A. Van der Zee, general sales manager of the Plymouth Motor Corporation.

"Our program," Mr. Van der Zee stated, "has been one of continuous improvement. As rapidly as our engineers have developed features which increase the utility and pleasure to be derived from the Plymouth car, these features have been put into production and thus made promptly available to the motoring public."

Bodies BY FISHER

Exemplify its big car quality . . .

To see the Pontiac Big Six with its range of magnificent bodies by Fisher is to realize at once that no other automobile in the world at its price offers so impressive a combination of big car luxury and quality with small car cost.

So perfectly have Pontiac's Fisher bodies embraced the beauty and practical utility characteristic of the highest priced cars, that Pontiac alone in its field is able to offer you such unmistakable—

Big Car Style—Smart, graceful poise of line, perfect proportions, colors of surpassing beauty, luxurious interiors and all of that impressive quality which entails no sacrifice to price.

Big Car Comfort—Deep, wide, resilient cushions. Unusual leg and head room. Adjustable driver's seat and easily regulated Fisher VV windshields.

Big Car Durability—All Fisher bodies for Pontiac have the sturdy, weather-tight, hardwood-and-steel construction. Joints are mortised, glued and bolted or screwed. Steel braces reinforce all joints where strain occurs. Heavy felt is placed between wood and steel to assure body quietness. In every particular, Pontiac bodies are rigidly inspected for strictest adherence to big car standards.

Consistent with the big car character of its Fisher Bodies are Pontiac's impressive—

Big Car Speed—Highest top speed and most spirited acceleration found in any low-priced six—proved by the "fifth wheel," most accurate speed measuring device known to automotive engineers.

Big Car Power—Pontiac's 200-cubic-inch engine develops sixty brake horsepower at 3,000 r. p. m.—greatest power of any car in its field.

Big Car Reliability—Assured by such features as the Harmonic Balancer—full pressure oiling—crankcase ventilation to maintain quality of engine oil.

The fact that the Pontiac Big Six embodies so many big car qualities seems more remarkable than ever when you learn that Pontiac's economy of maintenance and operation is comparable to that of some of the smallest cars on the road! Come in and drive the Pontiac Big Six. And let us tell you how our purchase plan and our appraisal of your present car will enable you to enjoy a Pontiac with amazing ease.

Pontiac Big Six, $745 to $995, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Bumpers, spring covers and Lovejoy shock absorbers regular equipment at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

At St. Louis Airfields

A NATIONAL sales organization with Walter Beech, head of the Travel-Air Co., as president, and Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., as vice president, has been established by the Curtiss-Wright interests to direct the wholesale distribution of products of six airplane factories controlled by the Curtiss-Wright organization.

Beech and Maj. Robertson have divided the country into six sales districts and plan to have a Curtiss-Wright dealer at every airport. The new company, known as the Curtiss-Wright Sales Corporation, will direct distribution of the following factories: Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co., Long Island; Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., St. Louis; Keystone Aircraft Co., Bristol, Pa.; Travel-Air Co., Wichita, Kan.; Loening Aeronautical Co., Bristol, Pa.; and Moth Aircraft Co., Lowell, Mass.

Air Travel Growing.

Reports covering the first seven months of operation of Southwest Air Fast Express, St. Louis, Springfield, Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Kansas City and Dallas, show that the number of pay passengers increased from 225 in April to 1600 in October. Other high months were August, 1259 passengers, and September, 1171.

$300,000 Power Plant.

A power house and a water tank of 200,000 gallons capacity are nearing completion at the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co. at Lambert-St. Louis Field. The new construction will represent an investment of $300,000 when completed. The power house equipment will include apparatus for making the gas used in welding in the manufacture of planes. The water tank is being built as a reserve for the fire sprinkler system recently installed in the factory.

"Bud" Gurney Moves to Cleveland.

"Bud" Gurney, who made St. Louis his home since coming here with Lindbergh in 1923, has moved to Cleveland, where he becomes operations manager for Continental Airlines, the Cleveland-Louisville air mail line. The concern is a subsidiary of the Universal Aviation Corporation.

Gurney followed Lindbergh on the St. Louis-Chicago mail route and, with the purchase of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation by Universal, became assistant operations manager for the new company. His transfer to Cleveland is in the nature of a promotion and will give restless "Bud" more to do. Eyre Stoniger, who flew the St. Louis-Chicago mail route with Gurney, is a pilot for Continental Airlines.

Plans to Increase Output.

Re-employment of some of the 260 men recently laid off at the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., will begin shortly after the first of the year. Production, now two planes a week, will be increased gradually to 18 planes a week next July, when the entire force of 500 men is expected to be at work.

Ryan Planes in Many Lands.

Thirty-six Ryan planes valued at $405,000 are now in use in foreign countries. Ryan broughams are in operation in China, Mexico, New Guinea, Australia, Japan, England, Argentina, Guatemala, Canada and Italy.

Woman Flyer Stops Over.

Miss Mary von Mack, contestant in the last women's air derby, and her two black-and-tan terriers visited Parks Airport last week. She was flying a Wright J-5 Travelair enroute from Detroit, Mich., to Los Angeles, Cal., accompanied by C. L. Lievest and wife of O'Fallon, Ill.

Flying Duck Hunters.

The duck hunters are becoming enthusiastic. Oscar Wiesz, in charge of the mail hangar for the Universal Corporation, leads weekly expeditions to the Missouri River, the hunters including Pilots Braznell, Johannpeter and Rentz, Ralph Rugh, photographer for Universal, has his private duck lake west of Lambert Field.

Planes for China.

Ten Thrush monoplanes to be used in air mail and passenger service in China are nearing completion at the Curtiss-Robertson factory. The planes are scheduled for shipment next month and will be used on a 3000-mile route planned by Major Robertson while in China early in the year. Five additional planes will be sent to China later.

Three Thrush monoplanes and two Robins have been built here for a flying school to be operated at Havana, Cuba, by Curtiss-Wright Flying Service.

Visitors at Lambert Field.

Visitors to Lambert-St. Louis Field during the week included D. W. Ballew, Nashville, Tenn.; Dick Knox, Indianapolis; S. Falkenrath, Salt Lake City; Herman Hames, Chicago; and J. C. Newton Jr., Philadelphia.

Uniforms for Pilots.

Instructors and service pilots at the Curtiss-Wright Flying School and Aviation Service, to begin operations at Curtiss-Steinberg Airport on the East Side next month, will wear forest green uniforms with Sam Browne belts and overseas caps.

According to announcement from Curtiss-Wright headquarters at New York a reduction of 25 per cent in passenger fares is to become effective immediately. The reduction covers all air rides, ranging from 15-minute sightseeing hops to cross-country trips.

Water System Completed.

The water system at Lambert-St. Louis Field was completed Thursday. The fire hydrants have been coupled up and all buildings, hangars and the public comfort station are now supplied with water.

On Hunting Flight.

Acting Field Manager Parks and several engineers in charge of city work at Lambert-St. Louis Field flew to Springfield, Mo., yesterday on a two-day hunting trip as guests of the Safeway Line.

Glider Clubs Promoted.

In an effort to increase the field of potential airplane purchasers, large aircraft manufacturing concerns are sponsoring the glider clubs of the country.

A meeting of representative manufacturers has been called at New York Dec. 5 to discuss a glider program for next year. Maj. William B. Robertson, head of the Curtiss-Robertson Co., will attend the meeting.

A glider club of 40 members was organized here last Wednesday under the direction of Curtiss-Wright Flying Service. It is planned to establish the club at Curtiss-Steinberg Airport. B. Russell Shaw, airport engineer, and Maj. C. R. Wassall, chief pilot for Curtiss-Wright here, will assist in directing the club.

Braniff Quite Universal.

Paul B. Braniff, who organized the Braniff Airlines in Oklahoma, which later became part of the Universal Airlines System, has severed his connection with the Universal Co. Braniff remained in charge of the Braniff division following the sale to Universal last spring.

Robertson Instructs Woman Flyer.

Mrs. Ruth Stewart, the first St. Louis woman to be licensed as a pilot, is continuing her flying instruction under the direction of Dan Robertson.

Flying Circus at Parks.

A flying circus, postponed from last Sunday, will be held today at Parks Airport. A Lockhead-Vega cabin monoplane with a reported speed of 190 miles an hour will be flown at the exhibition. An improved parachute, which is said to open faster than that now generally used, will be demonstrated by J. J. Dunkle of Trenton, N. J., who will drop from a plane. There will be no admission charge.

Air Official Drops In.

Erle Halliburton, president of Southwest Air Fast Express, accompanied by C. E. Fleming, traffic manager, and Larry Fritz, operations manager, visited the S. A. F. E. organization at Lambert Field last week.

Colombian Takes Air Course.

Victor M. Covelli of Colombia, South America, has enrolled for a limited commercial course at Parks Air College.

Excursion Air Rates.

Week-end excursion rates of $40 for the round-trip flight, St. Louis to Chicago, became effective over the Universal System yesterday. The regular fare is $20 one way. Planes leave Lambert-St. Louis Field for Chicago at 12:45 and 4:15 p. m.

Free Refresher Course.

A refresher course, open to graduates of the school without charge, has been established by the Von Hoffmann Flying School. The school also recently established a home study course for persons planning a flying course.

Murel Bouse, manager of the Von Hoffmann school, is on a flying trip to California, where he will inspect instruction methods employed in aviation schools there.

Hangar for Gliders.

Members of the St. Louis Glider Club, headed by Harry Kuchina, president of the Kuchins Furniture Co., plan to build a hangar at Creve Coeur Lake.

Enrollments for School.

Five enrollments have been received for the Curtiss-Wright Flying School, to be opened next month. The first students are: Edward Smith, a grocer, 1222 Clara avenue; S. G. Karst, a jeweler, Paul Brown Building; Edwin Welch, Lexington, Mo.; Harry Ellis, Cairo, Ill., and Robert Hogan, Kerrick, Minn. A new Curtiss Fledgling training plane for use in the school was delivered here last week.

Parks P-2-A Certificated.

An approved type certificate has been issued by the Department of Commerce for the Parks P-2-A, a three-place open biplane with Whirlwind engine.

Twelve Join Universal School.

Twelve St. Louisans were enrolled last week in the Universal Flying School. They are: Roman Fournelle, Charles Spears, Michael Sommers, John Prentis, Loring Roever, M. Smith, John La Presta, David Hendrix, J. A. McAuliffe, Harry Heill, Arthur Gundlach and Fred Riethmueller.

Basketball Team Goes by Air.

The Universal Flying School basketball team will use a plane for out of town trips. The team is scheduled to meet a number of the smaller college fives in Missouri and Illinois, as well as teams representing the eight other Universal Schools.

Emergency Landing Fields.

An emergency landing field has been established at Mihaska, the Ozark resort of Albert Von Hoffmann, near Bourbon, Mo. The resort is on the airways route between St. Louis and Tulsa.

Qualified for License.

Four graduates of Parks Air College qualified for limited commercial licenses last week. They are: Henry C. Huber, St. Louis; James Merrell, Mohegan, W. Va.; Milton Finton, Youngstown, O., and Charles Hollinger, Casper, Wyo.

Local Flying Instructors in Snappy New Uniforms

Instructors of the Von Hoffman Flying School at Lambert-St. Louis Field present a semi-military appearance in their new garb.

Speedy Plane on Exhibition Today At Parks Airport

Parachute Jumps, Races and Stunts to Feature Air Circus.

Three parachute jumps, races for civilian and military planes and a speed exhibition by the fastest commercial airplane in America will be features of an aerial circus and flying exhibition to be given today at Parks Airport. Admission to the field will be free.

Beginning at 11 a. m. with a parachute jump by "Lucky Jack" Merrell, professional wing-walker and 'chute jumper, the program will proceed without interruption until darkness. Merrell will make another jump at 4:45 p. m. and Sergt. James Brennan of the Thirty-fifth Division Air Service, Missouri National Guard, will make a jump from 10,000 feet at 3:30 p. m.

A Wasp-engined Lockheed monoplane especially equipped for racing and capable of a high speed of 190 miles an hour will be exhibited to the visitors in a special demonstration. A 25-mile race for civilian flyers and another for officers of the Missouri and Illinois National Guard flying services will lead up to an aerial potato race, a novelty for St. Louis.

Pilots in the potato race will be required to fly three times around a closed course, landing after each round to pick up a potato from the landing field. Silver cups will be awarded the winners of the various events in addition to cash prizes.

Creation of Radio Beacon for Flyers Big Achievement

Development of the radio beacon, which sets a precise course for the aviator through fog, cloud, darkness or other condition of poor visibility, is placed first among the contributions of the United States Bureau of Standards to aviation in the annual report of Dr. George K. Burgess, director.

Three other activities of the bureau in aiding the advance of aeronautical science are specifically mentioned by Dr. Burgess. These are the development of methods of shielding airplane engine ignition systems in such a way that a minimum of interference with the ship's radio equipment is experienced; the type-testing of plane engines for certificates approving their air-worthiness, and the effort to discover a means of insulating cabin planes to reduce the noise of the engine or engines.

The latter experiment, the report points out, has been marked by considerable success in the course of the past year.

Colored Licenses.

Thirty-one states in the Union will change the color combination for automobile license plates in 1930 and 16 different motifs will be used throughout the country. This indicates that there is a tendency on the part of the states to standardize the color scheme.

Add Convertible Coupe to Line; 7 Models Now

Chrysler Announces New Body Type on Series "70" Chassis.

The addition of a convertible coupe on the Chrysler "70" chassis is announced by J. W. Frazer, general sales manager of the Chrysler Sales Corporation, at Detroit.

With this model now in production, the line includes seven body styles.

The new Chrysler is long, low and graceful, with smart lines. It is a dignified coupe with the top up, and with the top lowered has the appearance and dash of a fleet roadster.

The radiator is high and wide and enhances the impressiveness of the frontal area, where the vertical ventilating shutters contrast vividly with the chrome-plated radiator shell, bowl-shaped headlamps and other bright work. The hood is distinguished further by the parking lamps, joined by a band of cromium across the cowl. The hood appears longer than it actually is because of the subtle effect produced by the narrow vertical louvers on the sides. The entire length of the car is emphasized by sweeping curves and stream-lining, the graceful contoured rear deck reflecting the arcs of the fenders.

The smartly tailored top, covered with heavy and durable gray-toned Burbank, is suggestive of the custom creation, and is in harmony with the cobalt blue and lustrous white-striped black finish of the body. Heavy bows and staunch pillars of hardwood insure quietness and rigidity. When lowered the top fits closely and compactly to the body.

Seat cushions and back are in pillow-type upholstery of grain leather that harmonizes with the color of the exterior finish, while charm and luxury are reflected in the fittings, designed in modernistic style by Chrysler and executed by Cartier et Cie, Paris and New York jewelers. The instrument panel, garnish mouldings, window lifts and other interior fixtures reflect the same motif. The frames enclosing the windshield and the window glasses are chrome plated and tarnish proof. The ventilators are in each side of the cowl, while a removable curtain in the rear of the top allows extra ventilation or conversation with passengers in the rumble seat. In front of the rear fender on the curb side is a compartment for golf equipment or other luggage. Another is found behind the front seat.

Gross-Butler Co. Changes Name to Gross Motor Co.

Interests of Kansas City, Mo., Man Acquired, Sol Gross Announces.

Sol W. Gross, president of the Gross-Butler Motor Co., distributer in this territory of Graham-Paige automobiles, yesterday announced that local stockholders had acquired the interests of John Butler of Kansas City, Mo., and that hereafter the firm will be known as the Gross Motor Co.

A notably successful year led to the action, Gross said. Since the company was organized in October, 1928, sales have increased 47 per cent over the previous year. Twenty-five new dealers have been added in the territory, which includes Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, in the past year.

B. R. Ford, formerly general manager of the Tate Motor Co. and widely known in automobile circles, recently became connected with the company in the capacity of secretary and general manager.

Butler, head of the company bearing his name, is Kansas City distributer of Graham-Paiges. His interest in Gross-Butler was purely financial, according to Gross, and he took no active part in its operation.

Expert Says Brake Pedal Should Not Be Applied Quickly

Motorists whose cars are equipped with sensitive brakes such as Bendix, Steeldraulic and Lockheed Hydraulic should be particularly careful not to depress the foot pedal too suddenly, according to P. W. Noel, brake expert of Kramer Bros., Inc.

An easy, gradually increasing pressure will stop the car just as quickly and eliminate the tire wear, dangerous skidding and possible damage to the car, he says.

That the misuse of brakes can cause damage to the car was proved recently in test made with a car belonging to an official of the company. The brakes were jammed every time a stop was to be made. The test ended when a rear spring bolt sheared and allowed the axle to slip out of line. The car was then taken to the shop and carefully checked. The front axle was found to be slightly twisted, tire rod sprung and the camber and castor of the front wheels materially affected.

Local Auto Maker Sees Bright Side To Market Crash

"The recent severe reaction in the stock market has wiped out billions in the values of securities. Naturally, even the paper loss of such a vast amount of money will undoubtedly affect to some degree purchasing power in this country," said Russell E. Gardner Jr., head of the Gardner Motor Co. here in a recent interview.

"The general opinion of the press would indicate that it is felt that luxuries will suffer most. In many cases automobiles have been mentioned. I feel that the automobile industry will naturally be affected to some extent, but I don't feel that the automobile is in any sense a luxury, except possibly in the case of a few very high-priced, custom-built jobs that are such a small percentage of the total market as would be negligible.

"Personal transportation in this country as supplied by the automobile is now a necessity, and I cannot visualize the average American doing without his automobile. There are close to 25,000,000 motor-driven vehicles now in this country, they are being used every day, and they are, therefore, wearing out and must be replaced, and in my opinion, will be replaced with new automobiles as and when the occasion demands."

0 BOYS TO ATTEND WINTER CAMP DEC. 27

ive-Day Session Will Be Held at Irondale Reservation.

Outdoor camping will be practiced by 60 St. Louis Boy Scouts next month, according to plans for the annual St. Louis Boy Scout Winter Camp at the Irondale Reservation, announced by Charles H. Mills, activities diretcor of the local scout council. The Winter camp for local scouts has been conducted by the council during the Christmas holidays for the last three years.

Practically the entire five days of the camp, from Dec. 27 to Dec. 31, will be spent in the open, Mills said. The only time spent indoors will be during some of the meals, which will be served in the Ranger Lodge on the reservation. This Lodge will be kept heated at all times.

Even the sleeping will be done practically out of doors, as the scouts will "turn in" for the night in the open-front Adirondack shacks of the Ranger Camp; three-sided leantos, with the ground for floor, and kept warm only by a fire built in front of the open side. Despite their al fresco construction, however, it is claimed that by using the correct type of fire these shacks may be kept warmer than the ordinary log cabin.

The program for the camp is also all out of doors, including tracking, exploring, hiking, woodcraft, pioneering, trapping, campfires, and, if the weather permits, coasting and skating. If there is snow, a snow battle will be held around a snow fort.

Several men from the headquarters staff will be in charge of the activities at the camp, Mills said. The regular Irondale Camp chef, Frank Barnes, has been engaged.

Attendance at the camp will be limited to second and first class scout, as it is necessary that the camper have previous camping experience. Reservations for the camp will be received at headquarters starting tomorrow.

Troop Notes

NORTH DISTRICT.

A talk on "Getting New Scouts" was given by Scoutmaster Simons at the regular meeting of Troop 3, at the Grace Holy Cross Church last week. The evening following, an officers' council was held at the home of the senior patrol leader. Six officers were present at the council. The troop is planning a hike to Kenwood Springs today.

The scouts of Troop 69 of St. Elizabeth's Church are planning to give a play in December. A special scout service was held at the church last Sunday morning, the entire troop receiving holy communion and a special sermon being delivered by Father Reginet at the 9 o'clock mass. Afterward a hike was taken by the scouts, and a number of outdoor tests leading to second and first class rank were passed. Scoutmaster Sampson of the troop will be absent this week, as he is going to Baltimore on a business trip.

The Coo-Coo patrol is leading in an inter-patrol contest being held by Troop 88 of the Salem Church, being 50 points ahead of its nearest rival. The plumbing booth exhibited by this troop at the recent merit badge show placed seventh in Class A.

Thirteen scouts of Troop 198, one of the best known Negro troops of the city, held a four-day camp near Ferguson last week under the leadership of Assistant Scoutmaster Charles Maxwell. The scouts were taken to the camp in a truck. Maxwell and Junior Assistant Scoutmaster Sam Brazil, who were in charge of the commissary, claim a record in that the total cost to each boy for transportation and all meals for the three days was only 52 cents. While at the camp the boys practiced tracking, marksmanship and nature study, and also played a number of outdoor games.

SUBURBAN DISTRICT.

Sixty-three scouts received awards at the Suburban District Court of Honor last Thursday evening, and six commissioned officers also were honored. These latter were Scoutmaster M. L. Brailow, Maplewood 3; District Commissioner George A. Newcomb, Overland; Scoutmaster F. F. Williams Jr., and Assistant Scoutmaster James E. Patterson, Overland 1; Assistant Scoutmaster Victor Rockel, Overland 2, and Assistant Scoutmaster Gregg Puster, Webster Groves 15. The program at the court, in addition to awarding of honors, included entertainment by Scoutmaster William T. Sherman, Richmond Heights 1, who played a jews-harp, and his son, who played a chromonica. Maplewood 3's drum and bugle corps gave several selections. Dr. C. E. Colgate, Suburban District Commissioner, spoke on "The Merit Badge Program and Its Value in Vocational Guidance," and also told something of the recent Merit Badge Show.

A new troop, Clayton 1, has been organized at the DeMun School, under the sponsorship of the school Parent-Teachers' Association. Dr. William E. Hutson will be scoutmaster, while the troop committee will consist of Henry I. Cohn, chairman, Charles W. Flach and Harry P. Fabricius. Meetings will be held at the school on Wednesday evenings. The 11 boys who have registered so far will be presented with a parade American flag and a troop flag by the association at its regular meeting at the school Tuesday.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

The last south district court of honor to be held this year was conducted at the Missouri School for the Blind last Wednesday evening. Judges Grimm and Rutledge presented the awards to the scouts, while Scoutmaster L. John Lewis of Troop 198 had charge of the opening and closing ceremonies. Music was furnished by an orchestra composed of some of the older scouts of Troop 131. Troop 232, of the Blow School, had the most scouts present, therefore was given the privilege of carrying the American flag on the stage.

Nearly 200 persons attended the third annual troop entertainment of Troop 157, of the Advent Lutheran Church, at the Swiss Hall Friday evening, Nov. 15. The scouts put on a program of sketches, the outstanding one of which was judged to be "If Men Played Bridge Like Women." A singing of the "Schnitzelbanc" by members of the Wolf patrol also was acclaimed. The performance, which lasted about two and a half hours, was concluded by an investiture ceremony, in which three new members were admitted into the troop. Music was furnished by the De Molay Band.

Fifty prospective scouts were guests of Troop 168 at a meeting at the St. Pius Church last Wednesday evening. The parents of some of the boys also were present, and to them Field Executive Shippey spoke briefly on scouting. After the meeting the Mothers' Club of the troop served ice cream and cake. Scoutmaster J. C. Metzger of this troop has been appointed a deputy commissioner of the South District, and will take over his duties next month.

WEST DISTRICT.

Fifty scouts and two leaders were awarded a total of 105 merit badges at the west district court of honor at the Ben Blewett Junior High School Wednesday evening. Troop 54 of Temple Israel won the privilege of carrying the American flag by having seven scouts present to receive a total of 28 badges. Scout Donald Oungst of Troop 101 acted as bugler at the court, while music was furnished by a section of the St. Louis boy scout harmonica band, led by Scout Walter Swistowicz. Scoutmaster LeRoy Lane of Troop 101 had charge of the opening and closing ceremonies, while Activities Director C. H. Mills of the local scout council gave the address of the evening.

Eleven scouts of Troop 26 of the Delmar Baptist Church passed tests while the troop was on a hike to their campsite near Overland a week ago yesterday. Three scouts passed their 14-mile hike, two finished up their pioneering merit badge work, and six passed second and first class tests. Two members of this troop received first-class pins and seven others received merit badges at the recent court of honor. F. H. Smock, a former sailor, gave instruction in drill work to the troop at the meeting Friday night.

A joint meeting of Troops 98 and 134 was held at the headquarters of the latter at Clara and Delmar avenues, a week ago Friday evening. The Flying Eagle Patrol of Troop 98, under the leadership of Patrol Leader Jim Oliver, presented a comedy sketch entitled "The Concert," while the Moose patrol, led by Patrol Leader "Kewpie" Farrell, also gave a stunt. The Cubs of St. Rochs, where Troop 98 has headquarters, gave a playlet "Trying to Amuse Grandfather," in which Cubs Burns and Donohue starred. Several other stunts were staged by the scouts of Troop 134, and games were played under the direction of Senior Patrol Leader Manning. Scoutmaster Dr. Renfrow spoke to the joint meeting on intertroop friendship.

Assistant Scoutmaster "Eggie" Bischoff has donated a riding horse to Scoutmaster Dr. Staley's camp at Castlewood. The scouts have named the horse "Bischoff's Pride," or "B. P." Patrol Leader Jim Oliver of this troop spent last Saturday and Sunday in Chicago, visiting the Field Museum.

Twenty-six scouts of Troop 101, of the West Park Baptist Church, hiked to the city waterworks last Sunday and were shown through the building by Superintendent A. N. Morrison. Later they hiked to Creve Coeur, where dinner was cooked and eaten, and a Sunday school service held. Several tests were passed during the afternoon. At the meeting last week the patrols were instructed to choose a hobby. The Beavers selected electricity, but the other patrols voted to wait a week before making their decision. Scouts Vernon Sansouca and Elmer Gathelman were elected troop cheer leaders at the meeting. Field Executive S. C. Reaves visited the meeting during the evening.

Six new members of Troop 246, of the B'Nai Amoona, passed their Tenderfoot requirements while on a hike taken by the troop to Creve Coeur last Sunday. The hike was under the leadership of Senior Patrol Leader Harvey Rudolph. The troop arrived at 11:30 o'clock and spent the remainder of the morning in instruction and test-passing. The scoutmaster and junior assistant scoutmaster laid a trail and gave the scouts some instruction in tracking. Immediately afterwards, Scout Stanley Gidolowitz succeeded in passing all the requirements in this subject.

Local Company Makes 6-Wheel Truck

The four rear wheels on this 3-ton International have dual tires. The inclosed van type of body was produced by the St. Louis Body and Equipment Co., 4111 Forest Park boulevard. The truck is one of a fleet of four used by the Brashear Truck Co., operating between St. Louis and Kansas City.

Auto Attains High Speed With Use of "Silent Third" Gear

To prove the wide range of usefulness possessed by the internal-geared silent third speed of the modern type four-speed transmission, a Graham-Paige 837 sedan was recently put over the circuit of the San Antonio Scenic Loop, covering the 40 miles in 50 minutes having been started in third and having finished the test without using any other speed.

To accomplish this feat without changing gears requires a transmission ratio that will deliver lots of power for climbing steep hills, and in addition be capable of maintaining high road speed. The silent third of the Graham-Paige transmission was designed to provide these two qualities, its ratio being intermediate between second and high speeds of three-speed garsets.

Covering the 40-mile loop circuit in 50 minutes required high speeds wherever possible, and the third speed proved capable of maintaining a pace of 60 miles an hour. The engine remained cool throughout the test, the indicator showing 195 degrees at its highest point.

Ultimate Cost High.

It is an unsound theory that the motorist acts upon when he defers having a small repair made because of the cost. Costs are low when repairs are small.

315,549 Autos Inspected In Safety Drive

A total of 315,549 automobiles, or about half the number of Missouri, were inspected during the "Save-a-Life" campaign conducted from June 1 to July 15, according to a report by Oscar G. Steininger, Missouri Motor Vehicle Commissioner. The campaign was conducted under the direction of Maj Robert E. Lee of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, past president of the St. Louis Safety Council.

Of the cars inspected, 204,000 had good horns and 63,476 horns were defective. It was found necessary to adjust 76,943 steering mechanisms and 1472 were completely replaced. Inspection of brakes brought about the adjustment of 31,957 sets, 7975 being relined; 107,705 individual lamps needed readjustment and 19,002 were replaced.

It is planned to conduct a similar plan early in 1930. The Missouri Legislature will be asked to make the annual campaign a State function, as has been done in New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia and other states.

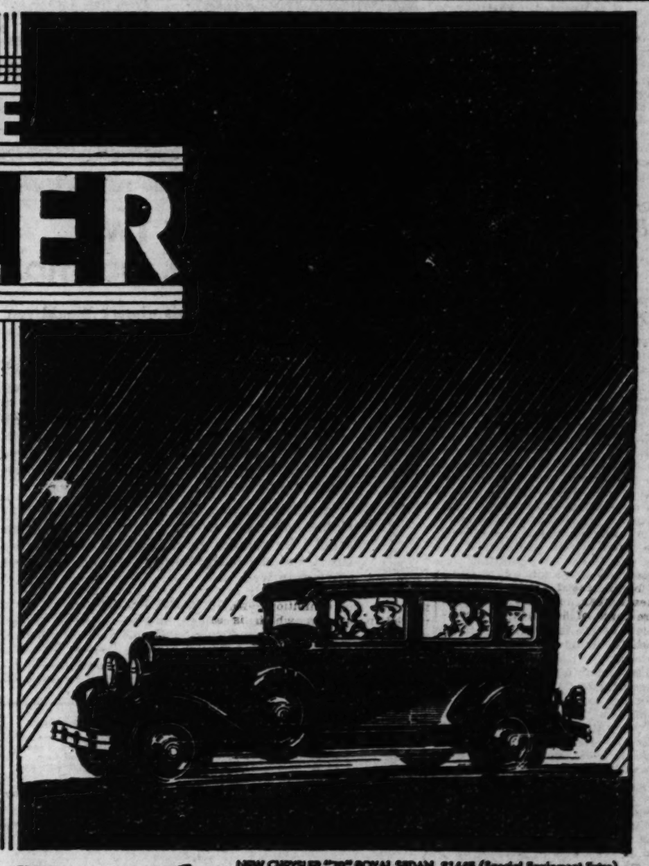
MULTI-RANGE CHRYSLER



This IS Performance!

The new Multi-Range Chryslers have brought into existence a new kind of thrilling performance—faster car speed at SLOWER engine speed; amazing acceleration and smoothness; new ease and swiftness in hill-climbing—the result of many basic engineering improvements, including Down-Draft carburetion and the exclusive Multi-Range four-speed transmission and gear shift.

Stepping out from a standstill in Starting Range, you experience a wonderful new quickness of get-away. In middle gear, the Acceleration Range, you find far greater pick-up than is customary in "second", together with the silence and smoothness of "high". And when you shift into the Speed Range, there is an immediate sense of "floating".

Never before have you known such ease of gear-shifting—nor such responsive performance. You shift gears faster—with a mere flick of the wrist—and without clashing.

These new Chryslers radiate quality—both in outward design and interior trim. Bodies are longer and wider. Headroom is greater. And fitments by Cartier give a final touch of elegance. Truly, these are motor cars of today.

Supercharger is Installed on an American Car

Driven at Crankshaft Speed, It Differs From Those Used Abroad.

One of the most interesting of the mechanical innovations seen on passenger cars at the recent Chicago Automobile Salon was the supercharger installed on a stock Stutz automobile. For some time, according to Col. E. S. Gorrell, president of the Stutz Motor Car Co., his engineers have been conducting experiments with superchargers, finally obtaining a satisfactory design.

The Stutz is the only American passenger car so equipped. In Europe, a few have superchargers, notably the German Mercedes, and some models of the British Bentley.

It is asserted that on the Stutz the supercharger not only gives greater speed, but provides an equal advantage in acceleration and hill climbing.

On the Stutz the supercharger is of the low-pressure positive displacement type, running at crankshaft speed. It is said to be entirely different in principle and operation from the turbine type formerly used on racing cars and European machines, which types operate at several times crankshaft speed.

On the European cars the mechanism does not function until after the throttle is wide open. The Stutz supercharger, on the other hand, is available whenever the driver wants to use it and operates at any engine speed. The driver need only pull a button on the dash and the supercharger cuts in with added power.

A gain of from 10 to 17 per cent in acceleration, hill-climbing ability and top speed is obtained on the Stutz, it is asserted. Variation in results depends on the skill of the driver, atmospheric conditions and type of body.

It forces additional air and gasoline into the combustion chamber, thus increasing power. The mechanism is constructed to exceedingly rigid specifications. One of its desirable results is that it changes what was previously maximum speed into easy touring speed, free from strain.

For this purpose a flywheel "transformer" is employed in association with the roller clutches. This is merely a heavy flywheel, freely mounted on a sleeve which is driven from the bob-weight assembly previously described, but connected through a series of springs. This flywheel, under the influence of the alternating forces set up by the flapping motion of the bob-weights, becomes in effect a pendulum, whose inertia opposes the alternations of the sleeve which drives it. In this way a systematic alternating motion is established, the roller clutch connection with the drive shaft permitting the sleeve to drive in one direction and ratchet in the other. Notwithstanding this intermittent driving effect, observers declare that the "beat" of the mechanism is imperceptible under ordinary circumstances.

The system affords a remarkable demonstration, which is characterized by extraordinarily rapid acceleration. This is due, of course, to the automatic feature of the gear and also to the fact that no time is lost in gear shifting. Marked operating economy is offered as one of the advantages of the system, because of the "free-wheel" feature which is inherent in the construction. The transmission was first exhibited at the Commercial Motor Show in London in the fall of 1927, and is already familiar to executives of several of the American automobile manufacturing companies, who have had opportunity to drive cars equipped with it in Sweden.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART EIGHT. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 24, 1929. PAGES 1—6M

Irene Bordoni in "Paris"

Musical Farce Comes to the Shubert Tonight—American Has Four or Five Dark Weeks in Sight But May Resort to a Big Talking Picture to Fill the Gap — John Drinkwater's Comedy, "Bird in Hand," Next Attraction at the Grand Avenue Show House — Downtown Theatre Has Two Plays Scheduled for Month of December.

IRENE BORDONI, who made a movie of her play, "Paris," is beating the film into town by coming with the drama herself to the Shubert Theater tonight. The American, which started off bravely enough at the beginning of the season with five weeks of Theater Guild offerings, followed by "Blackbirds," may not have another "legit" attraction until the middle of next month. At the present it has booked, for some time in December, a tentative date for Bert Lytell in "Brothers." A certain engagement, starting Christmas week, is the big musical comedy, "Connecticut Yankee." To bridge over the gap, Manager Beismann is trying to get the talking motion picture, "The Great Gabbo" in for a run of several weeks. This is a big film entertainment which runs for more than two hours and which has been a sensation in other cities. The Orpheum theaters control it and may decide to put it on at the St. Louis Theater later in the season but, despite the tremendous success of "Rio Rita" in that house for the past two weeks, the vaudeville magnates are not anxious to do away with their stage acts again in the near future. The American was wired for the talkies last summer but so far no "road show" pictures have been available for the house.

NO matter what the announcement may mean dramatically, the coming of Irene Bordoni does mean three pretty definite things. First, that there will be a display of the latest fashions; second, that much of the evening will be given over to songs, sung, sometimes in French and sometimes in English, in the inimitable manner of Bordoni; and, third, that the play itself will have farcical inclinations.

Miss Bordoni's first successes were from the prolific pen of Avery Hopwood, who was responsible for the so-called bedroom farces, and in these she created her own form of entertainment, which is neither a straight comedy nor a musical comedy, but which may be best described by the coined word, "musicomedy." The songs which Miss Bordoni sings during the evening are not interpolations which break the continuity of the play, but they have an important place in the book and much of the action is dependent upon them. This, of course, means that the play and the songs must be written with Miss Bordoni in mind.

"Paris," the latest Bordoni vehicle, is the work of Martin Brown, who is also the author of "The Lady," "Cobra," and "Great Music," and the songs have been written by Cole Porter, the composer of many popular hits. In addition to a large cast, Miss Bordoni will have the support of Irving Aaronson and his dance and recording orchestra, "The Commanders."

PROSPECTIVE patrons of John Drinkwater's comedy, "Bird in Hand," frequently speculate as to the significance of the title, but they may be informed that the name chosen by Mr. Drinkwater has no cryptic reference to the old adage. Rather, "Bird in Hand," which opens a week's engagement at the Shubert Rialto Theater two weeks from tonight, takes its title from the name of a quaint wayside inn in Gloucestershire, to which Mr. Drinkwater has been in the habit of going for years when on fishing trips.

The inn has been in the destinies of one family for more than 160 years, and the playwright is always treated like one of the family by the present incumbents. The events related in his play were suggested to him by incidents that happened during one of his sojourns there. Mr. Drinkwater himself chose and directed the original London cast which will come here in "Bird in Hand." It includes Freda Bruce Lockhart, Olga Slade, Denis Mantell, Percy Rhodes, Richard Littledale, Eliot Makeham, Douglas Jefferies and Arthur Ridley.

The entire seating capacity for the Monday evening performance on Dec. 9 has been purchased by the St. Louis College Club for the annual scholarship benefit performance.

LIKE the American, the Shubert has some dark weeks ahead and following "Bird in Hand," nothing is booked at present, until Dec. 29, when Schwab and Mandel, who sent St. Louis last "Good News" and "The Desert Song," are sending their latest musical comedy, "Follow Thru." It will come direct to the Shubert after completing a run of six months at the Apollo Theater, Chicago.

Some of the outstanding song hits of recent seasons are in "Follow Thru," among them being "Button Up Your Overcoat," "Lucky Star," "I Want to Be Bad," "You Wouldn't Fool Me, Would You," "I Could Give Up Anything But You" and "If There Were No More You." De Sylva, Brown and Henderson wrote the score and also were the composers of "Good News."

THESE dark weeks in St. Louis and elsewhere on the road are worrying the theatrical producers who already have plenty to worry about in the way of talking movie competition. Now the Broadway managers would like to have the actors work on Sundays in New York where, for many years there have been no Sabbath performances of legitimate shows. The actors reply that the managers must first clean house, after which, possibly, they will consent to discuss the question of Sunday in a more receptive frame of mind. This is the gist of the recent flurry which ended, temporarily, when fifteen hundred members of Equity voted, three to one, to reject the proposal of producers and playwrights for a seven-day week.

A mere trade union would simply have rejected the proposal. But Equity, in spite of certain exclusive tendencies, which led, over a year ago, to the restrictions placed upon English actors, is a professional rather than a trade union, and as such it has the sense to realize that the good of the theatrical business as a whole is its own good. It has the sense to see that certain conditions that do not strictly come within its own authority are responsible for many of the theater's present troubles. And therefore Equity cannily demands that the question of Sunday be laid on the table until several more grievous and elementary ills are cured by the managers themselves. That is why it demands a complete reorganization of the weird game of selling tickets, the expense of which is one of the major annoyances of the theatergoer, and one of the chief reasons why people hesitate to go to the theater in New York.

THE resolution voted by the members of Equity is strategically interesting, and economically, of course, simply horse sense. There is no use try-

Nathan Milstein, Russian Violinist, Soloist This Week

Plays Glazounow Concerto With the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra — Bloch's Concerto Grosso Also on Program.

NATHAN MILSTEIN, young Russian violinist, makes his St. Louis debut as soloist of the fourth pair of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's Golden Jubilee concerts at the Odeon Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week.

Milstein is on the sunny side of 25. Four years ago he made his way out of Russia, unknown except to that other, then unknown Russian prodigy, Vladimir Horowitz, with whom he had concertized, taking pay in butter, flour or sugar —anything that would provide food for them during the darkest days of the Russian revolution.

Horowitz escaped from Russia first. Milstein followed after a year—and had to leave his Guadagnini behind. Without a penny, without a fiddle, without a friend except the unheralded Horowitz, he managed to make his way to Berlin.

Milstein found friends, a patron who provided a Stradivarius, launched himself in concert and was a sensation in Berlin.

He was born in Odessa. Therefore destiny decreed that he should be a fiddler. He studied with Stoliarski, until he was 10. Then the family decreed he must study with Leopold Auer. That was in 1914. A journey to Petrograd. Work under that great master. War—and then the revolution.

In Petrograd Milstein had met young Horowitz. They managed to struggle along, to keep their courses fixed by the polar star of art. They even joined forces to play concerts throughout Russia. Boy pianist and boy fiddler. That was in 1923. They took their pay in whatever they could get—mostly food.

Then the escape from Russia. After his Berlin triumph, after his career was launched in Western Europe, Milstein enrolled himself with Eugene Ysaye as pupil.

Milstein will play the Glazounow Concerto for violin with the local orchestra.

For St. Louis will also hear for the first time at these concerts the Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra by Ernest Bloch, whose "America" won the Musical America prize for the best symphonic composition last season and had the honor of being presented simultaneously, by the Philadelphia, Boston, New York Philharmonic, Chicago and San Francisco orchestras, whose conductors has unanimously awarded it the prize.

Senor Arbos will also present for a first time "Fete Dieu d' Seville" and "L'Albaicin," two of his own brilliant transcriptions of piano pieces from Isaac Albeniz's "Iberia" suite. These are companion pieces to that "Triana" which has had to be repeated by the orchestra at every one of its six performances in the past two seasons.

A Russian conception of Spanish music is presented in Rimsky-Korsakow's brilliant Capriccio Espagnole" with which the program, which is opened with Cherubini's "Anacreon" overture—is brought to a brilliant close.

Director-Composer.

All of the music in the picture "The Love Parade" was composed by Victor Schertzinger, film director. Maurice Chevalier is starred in the production, which was directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

Wenger, Stage Artist, Signed by Studio

John Wenger, former art director for the Roxy Theater in New York, and recognized as one of the foremost artists of American stage set design, has arrived in Hollywood to design settings for "Paramount on Parade."

Wenger, for the past ten years, has been closely identified with the New York stage, and has created sets for the Metropolitan opera, the Boston opera, for almost innumerable Follies, Scandals and similar revues and for some period was the art director of the Roxy theater and other Rothafel houses.

A Three-Day Festival of Little Plays

St. Louis Authors Represented in Dramas Which Will Be Given by Amateur Groups at Bishop Tuttle Memorial.

TWO plays written and directed by St. Louis authors are included in the program of the three-day Drama Festival, starting tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Bishop Tuttle Memorial, Thirteenth and Locust streets.

These plays, both of which will be produced on Monday evening, are "The Stranger Unheard," by Milton McGovern of St. Louis University, and "Sir Folly," by Rev. Daniel Lord, S. J.

In addition to these plays Monday evening's program will include "The Dowry of Columbine," by Jagendars, directed by Miriam Epstein, and "Finders Keepers," directed by Anne Corbett.

Tuesday evening's program is a group of one-act comedies. "The Artist," by A. A. Milne, presented by the Webster Groves Theater Guild. The Morse School of Expression will do "Jones Versus Jones," by Florence Louise Speare. "A Cup of Tea," by Florence Ryerson, will be given by The Little Theater of Washington University, directed by Miriam Epstein, and Webster College will present "Lady Fingers" by Glenn Hughes.

On Wednesday evening the group from the Christ Church Cathedral will present an adaptation of "Why the Chimes Rang," by McFadden.

The festival is sponsored by the Bureau of Amateur Dramatics of the St. Louis Civic Theater, of which Sarah Gertrude Knott is executive director. The object is to arouse interest in the new organization which has tentative plans to maintain a library where plays and theater magazines will be available; to publish a bulletin of information about local dramatic events; to promote a Shakspearean drama week in the spring; to hold an Easter religious pageant, and subsequently to have a drama tournament.

AT THE PLAY

By Robert Littell

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.

THE past few weeks on Broadway have been, with one or two exceptions, dismally barren. Any number of mediocre playlets and shoe-string ventures have come in, stayed a brief unprofitable moment and dissolved again into the darkness of foolish hopes. The stock market has contributed to a situation which finds only the few big successes able to more than pay their way.

Such shows as shamble in are for the most part doomed in advance. A typical case is that of a recent frail offering which, while better than the average rubbish, shows how easy it is to write a play and how hard it is to write a good one. It is called "Your Uncle Dudley," and it is the result of a collaboration between Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson.

"Your Uncle Dudley" is an obvious and hollow playlet that manages to waste such talents as those of Mrs. Jacques Martin and Walter Connolly. There are moments in it of easily contrived humor and 100 per cent villainy which keep your mind from wandering and make you, against your better judgment, curious to see how it is all going to come out, though you know exactly how it is all going to come out. But this sort of mild absorption in a thoroughly machine-made plot does not mean that you are really having a good time, for one did not have a good time.

THERE ought to be a closed season during which playwrights are not allowed to paint mothers black and then shoot them. It's too easy. The authors of "Your Uncle Dudley" are not content with painting the sneaky, disagreeable mother of their piece black. They give her a priming coat and then slowly administer dark daubs on top of that, and then, so that there will be no mistake in your minds, a final varnish and the deepest and glossiest villainy.

Few comedies could survive such heavy doses of poison. And "Your Uncle Dudley," not being a very good or even a passable comedy, comes apart at all its seams, leaving you very little but the resourceful facility of Mr. Connolly and the refreshingly broad humor of Mrs. Martin.

The story, which repeats itself oftener than an after-dinner anecdote, concerns a public-spirited, good-natured, much-imposed-on small-town business man (Mr. Connolly) and his sister, the villainess, and her daughter, and the mother's crafty efforts to help aid said daughter win a $5000 song recital competition and Mr. Connolly's efforts to get her out of the house.

THE mother might be described as having a complex. She stoops to everything to win that prize and keep her daughter to herself. She pulls the meanest trick on another contestant, and when her daughter is secretly married she pretends to drink lysol, and when her daughter tries to telephone her husband she stages a fainting fit.

We learn to hate her good and plenty. We spent most of the evening snarling at her low machinations. There is hardly any time left to smile at Mr. Connolly's almost overgenerous supply of tricks and business or to chuckle at Mrs. Martin's salty portrait of a direct and free-spoken old lady.

Music and the Cinemas

Strike, Apparently Settled a Week Ago, Now Back Where It Was When Musicians Walked Out—"Rio Rita" Did Enormous Business for Two Weeks With Tunes Furnished Only by the Films—Reviving Old Plays for the Screen Calls for Modern Language in Place of the Once Snappy Wise Cracks—Stealing Scenes Goes on as Usual, However.

By NIE.

AFTER two announcements that the musicians' strike had been settled and only awaited the signature of the local union to a compromise agreement it now develops that it may be some time before the players sign up. In the meantime the Ambassador, Loew's, the Missouri and most of the neighborhood houses are doing without the men in the pit. Charles Skouras and a committee representing the musicians of St. Louis, went to New York and after several meetings with the officials of the International Union a plan was drawn up which both sides thought would be acceptable. So certain were the theater owners that things had been fixed up that they announced the return of Ed Lowry to the Ambassador and Milton Slosser to the Missouri. Then the matter was put before the local union and the arrangement was turned down.

What the next move will be remains to be seen. The theaters are perfectly willing to go along as they are now running for it is reported that, with no music salaries to pay, the cinema houses involved, while playing to smaller gross receipts, are actually making more money.

Although the St. Louis Theater has not mixed up in the matter, having come to terms with its players at the start of the season, the musical play, "Rio Rita," has just ended a two weeks' run at that house without the benefit of a human orchestra. The receipts for the engagement were the largest the Grand Avenue play house has ever known, running over $120,000 for the two weeks. The music was furnished by the film itself and the result would seem to indicate that the pictures can supply their own tunes in a manner to satisfy the fans. Today the St. Louis returns to its regular policy of pictures and vaudeville with a live orchestra in the pit.

THE second week of Pickford and Fairbanks in "Taming of the Shrew" at Loew's was not satisfactory, from a box office standpoint. Apparently all the St. Louis lovers of Shakspeare crowded into the house the first week. Out at the Fox Janet Gaynor and Charley Farrell are having a try of another week with "Sunny Side Up." The popular appeal of these two young stars, who are on the up grade and not slipping, as are Doug and Mary, together with the sure fire hokum in the picture are expected to put it over for another seven days.

IF any one doubts that the English language is changing, and changing rapidly, he has only to look through the lines of famous stage plays of 10 or 15 years ago.

Some of the slang expressions of those days have gone straight into Webster and the Encyclopedia Britannica, while others are as dead and antiquated as the dodo bird.

Robert Lord and Arthur Caesar found this out when they came to write the screen dialogue for the Vitaphone version of "So Long Letty," the stage farce which made its bow about 1915 with Charlotte Greenwood playing the lanky Letty.

"So Long Letty" was then one of the snappiest farces as regards its slang. However, many of the lines had to be eliminated in 1929 because they smacked of the "23-skidoo" and "Hello, chicken" vintage. On the other hand expressions that were than slang are now good English, and couldn't be used for smart patter.

Lord, who is one of Hollywood's best known scenarists, and Caesar, who is a Broadway wit with a big reputation, wrote the dialogue for the screen version and brought it down to the last minute for modern audiences. Miss Greenwood is playing the lead in the picture, which is at the Grand Central this week.

BUT if language changes in shows some of the old tricks remain and the "lens-grabber" has become a "line-biter" in the modern talking pictures. Eddie Cline, a director, who learned how scenes are "stolen" from rival players in the old Mack Sennett days, declares that scene-stealing is still being done in these modern days of dialogue pictures, but with a different technique.

"We called them by the term of 'lens grabber' in the old days," Cline says. "They were always trying to steal the scene from other players by unusual or striking actions, for the voice made no difference then. A favorite trick was to slowly back up, so that the other person you were working with had to turn his back to the camera to work with you. In that way you dominated the scene, because you had the other fellow with his back to the camera.

"I know a young leading man who was playing opposite a feminine star whose husband was directing the picture. He came on the set one day with only the back of his neck made up. When the director protested, the leading man told him that was all the audience would see of him in that picture, anyway.

"Now the fellow who backed up, has had to learn a new technique in stealing scenes. He is known as a 'line-biter' now. He snaps off the end of another person's lines by interrupting just before they have finished, in order to steal the scene.

"Another trick is to adopt that 'parade rasp' that Kipling told about, and dominate the scene by crisp, crackling tones.

"We will always have some scene-stealers as long as we have pictures. As fast as new screen technique is invented, the erstwhile 'lens louse' will invent new ways of dominating the scene."

Cline directed "The Forward Pass," the football picture which is at the Missouri.

LORETTA YOUNG, who is featured with Douglas Fairbanks Jr., in "The Forward Pass," has "clicked" and now almost everyone in Hollywood is boasting that he or she discovered her.

At least five real celebrities are getting a very human, natural pleasure from their "I told you so's."

They are glad to say, now, that some time or other two or three years ago they remarked: "Loretta Young is just a kid; but she will become one of the screen's greatest actresses with normal luck and the right handling."

Colleen Moore is one of the foremost claimants. She gave the 17-year-old "find" a chance to play a bit in a film in which Loretta was only an extra, "Naughty But Nice."

In connection with the same picture, Mervyn Le Roy, director now,

"Manuel De Falla and Spanish Music"

The First Book in English on the Celebrated Contemporary Composer—A New Choral Work on an Epic Theme Under Way.

By Thomas B. Sherman

WHEN Raquel Meller first came to this country a few years ago the astute showman who had her in charge was able to charge a $25 admission fee on her opening night and get it. News of her success evidently must have got back to Madrid for in a little while a cablegram from King Alfonso arrived which congratulated La Meller on what she was doing to acquaint the Americas with Spanish art.

This "Spanish Art" consisted of songs such as "El Reliquario"—a touching ballad concerning a bull-fighter who after being gored by a lustly infuriated bull, spent the time ordinarily allotted to a priest or a doctor in singing a snappy refrain—6-8 time—about a charm his petite amia had given him.

No man in his senses will question Mme. Meller's effectiveness. She is one of God's loveliest women to begin with and her method of delivering the most commonplace sentiment is so rich in suggestiveness that the tawdry little thing becomes important—for the time being at any rate. But if the songs she sang in America constitute Spanish art or any part of it, then so is your "Red Hot Mamma."

The whole spectacle of La Meller, her bunches of violets, her collection of stock Spanish rhythms, and her expensive press agents, led a world-weary music reviewer to suggest that a public which preferred Raquel Meller to Pablo Casals would never welcome genuine Spanish art for the reason that such an audience wouldn't recognize it. By this he meant that unless it sounded like "La Paloma" and wore a high comb nobody would know whether it was Spanish or Finnish.

This gentleman's pessimistic reflections were occasioned by an encounter with a typical Broadway audience. On a happier day he must have realized that no serious artist could expect much support from chronic pleasure hounds but that a different element of the public might be counted on to support not only the well established Mr. Casals but other Spanish artists who came to these shores.

But there is one idea implicit in his remarks which is provably true, namely that even cultivated American audiences have only a loose conception of what is characteristically Spanish in music. That being so, it follows that at a time when a composer is most completely Spanish in substance he may seem to be not Spanish at all to a foreign audience. The expression "foreign audience" is substituted advisedly for what is true of America is probably true of European audiences as well, since they too have received most of their ideas of Spain from the "Spanish" music of Bizet, Chabrier and Lalo.

THIS point is taken up in an interesting book which has just been published by Alfred A. Knopf. It is called "Manuel de Falla and Spanish Music," was written by J. B. Trend, the English critic and has the distinction of being the first analysis of Falla and his music to be published in English. In speaking of Falla's concerto for harpsichord and small orchestra he says: "Falla's concerto for harpsichord and small orchestra shows a further development in the direction of the Puppet Show (El Retablo).

"It is quite unlike the kind of music which is immediately recognizable as Spanish; yet it leaves us with the paradoxical conviction that the less superficially Spanish Falla appears, the more intimately Spanish he becomes."

By this the author does not mean that Falla is limited to becoming the ultimate interpreter of the Spanish soul. The plain inference is that Falla's music will always preserve a Spanish core however much it may take on the burden of universal implications. But that it will tend more and more to become the song of humanity is not an unreasonable prediction in the light of what he has already accomplished.

It is possible that Manuel de Falla may be the composer who will redeem our age from its sterility, its hardness and its indifference. In the music that has been played in St. Louis, principally by Mr. Arbos, one detects a quality which is lacking in most modern music. It would be misleading to describe this quality as emotion for that might suggest the lilies and languors of nineteenth century romanticism. What it really amounts to is a kind of compassion without which, according to Anatole France, no work of art can achieve greatness. The nostalgia that saturated the "Nights in the Gardens of Spain" came from a general sadness of life as much as from a sadness of remembered beauty.

IT was my intention to devote this article to Mr. Trend's book, but up to the present it has consisted chiefly of digressions. I am also uneasily aware of having pushed some of the author's conclusions farther than he intended. I hope the reader has noted this and made the necessary distinction between what the author said and what I thought he meant.

In a short preface Mr. Trend declares that the object of his book is to "give an account of the work of a contemporary composer—to understand his intentions, describe his methods and point out his achievements."

He succeeds in carrying out this intention to a surprising extent despite the fact that the main text contains only 179 pages.

Falla is represented to the reader as a child of the Spanish musical renaissance but Felipe Pedrell, Falla's mentor and forerunner is credited with being the father of that renaissance. Pedrell was a musical antiquarian, a tireless research worker, a critic and a composer. He went back to the facts of the Spanish musical tradition and placed them within reach of living composers and Falla himself said of him that he was a "master in the highest sense of the word, for both by precept and example he showed Spanish musicians where their road lay and led them along it himself."

Falla not only exposed himself to this body of material but went to all available sources on his own account. As a consequence his music, with the exception of El Retablo and the Harpsichord Concerto is in a style that is generally recognized as the "Spanish idiom." But from the first he put the artistic method in vigorous practice and the folk material was definitely stamped with his personality.

"Contrary to what is generally believed," says Mr. Trend, "in Falla's works there are practically no quotations and the one instance in which he has made use of Spanish folk songs in their traditional form is the collection of Seven Spanish Songs, in which characteristic folk songs of the peninsula have been provided with pianoforte accompaniments which are at the same time brilliantly pianistic and yet thoroughly in keeping with the spirit of the original melodies."

But the importance of the Spanish idiom in relationship to Falla's work is such that a chapter is devoted to its origins. Three important influences are listed, the Byzantine liturgical music which was adopted by the Spanish church, the Moorish invasion and the invasion of Spain by bands of gypsies. Of these Pedrell believed the Byzantine influence to be the most important but the author contends that all three working together and fused by the Andalusian nature, were responsible. There is other Spanish music less answerable to these sources but th y were what produced the music of Andalusia which is the section of Spain to which DeFalla belongs.

MR. TREND reviews and analyses all the important compositions by Falla, including "La Vida Breve," "Nights in the Gardens of Spain," "Love the Sorcerer," the "Fantasia Betica," the "Three-Cornered Hat," "El Retablo" (the Puppet Show) and the Harpsichord Concerto.

The new work on which Falla is engaged at present, according to the author, is a choral work, "Atlantida," and it is based on the epic poem by Jacinto Verdaguer.

The introduction to the poem says:

"There met together on the high seas a ship of Genoa and a ship of Venice and they made ready for battle. There came a great tempest, and a flash of lightning set fire to the magazine of one of them which, being blown up, drew down the other also into the deep. Men-at-arms and mariners went to the bottom; alone, from the prow of one of them was saved a young Genoese, who clutching a spar was able to reach the land. An old man living on the seashore in retirement from the world came to receive the castaway; he led him to a rustic altar of the Virgin and then to his own hut, where he entertained him. Some days after seeing the sailor wistfully regarding those waters, he told him their ancient history to distract him from the shipwreck just past."

Then the old man proceeds to tell the young mariner the wondrous story of the lost continent of Atlantis. As the hermit's story unfolds the Genoese sees a new world rising before him. The young man is Christopher Columbus, whose imagination is now on fire and who will not rest until he has coined the jewels of Isabella into money for his expedition to a new world. When the three ships put out to sea the old man is watching from a promontory. Ultimately Columbus sees a row of palm trees, which becomes a "vast Gothic cathedral filled with music."

Frank Spahn Sings With Symphony at Popular Concert

THE St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at the Odeon today presents the third "Pop" concert of its Golden Jubilee year and the first St. Louis soloist of these Sunday concerts. The soloist is Frank H. Spahn, precentor at the First Congregational Church of Webster Groves and soloist of Shaare Emeth Temple, a baritone whose beauty of voice and skill in singing have made him popular not only in appearances with the orchestra, but in oratorio and recital throughout this section.

Besides these numbers Senor Arbos has provided a program which opens with the "William Tell" overture and closes with Chabrier's pyrotechnical Spanish rhapsody.

MUSIC AND DANCE CALENDAR

Sunday—Symphony "pop" concert, Odeon, 2:15 p. m.

At Charles Galloway's second organ recital of the current series at 3 o'clock this afternoon, at Graham Memorial Chapel (Washington University), the assisting artist will be John Kessler, young pianist, who recently returned to St. Louis from a year's study in Paris, under Phillip, noted pedagogue and teacher. Mr. Kessler, with Mr. Galloway's orchestral accompaniment on the organ, will play the Concerto in C Minor, by St. Saens. Mr. Galloway's organ numbers for this afternoon are: Concert Overture, by Maitland; Angelus-Meditation, by Matthews, and Festival Prelude on "Ein Feste Burg," by Faulkes. These recitals are part of the extension course of Washington University, and are free to the public.

A joint recital will be given by Samuel Houston Mayes, 'cellist, age 11, and Morris Feldman, pianist, age 12, at the Wednesday Club Auditorium, Dec. 6, at 8:30 p. m.

Symphonic at Odeon Tuesday Night in Russian Program

A program of Russian sacred classical and folk songs will be presented at the Odeon on Tuesday evening when the Russian Symphonic Choir of 22 young men and women clad in the native costume of Russia will provide the third attraction of the Civic Music League under the direction of Basile Kibalchich. In the third group is "The Volga Boat Song," made popular in America by Chaliapin. In contrast is the Gardens Song and the Bridal Song and Gypsy, the last named by Gretchaninoff. The classical group includes Rachmaninoff's Prelude C sharp minor, Tschaikowsky's Peasant Scene from "Eugene Onegin," Borodin's Evening Song from "Prince Igor," and a selection from Sadko by Rimsky-Korsakoff. The sacred group includes a Rachmaninoff number "To Thee We Sing," which is sung in the mass of the Russian Greek Orthodox Church. "Holy Week," the most ancient liturgical melody in use in the Greek-Catholic church, describing the biblical prophecies of the coming of the Messiah will also be heard, as will "The Last Supper" by Lvov; Notre Dame by Tschaikowsky, one of the traditional prayers of the Christian Church set to the variant of the Serbian ritual and Archangelsky's Psalm XXIV which carries a trio of male voices augmented by the full choir.

comedy constructor then, also claims credit. Loretta wouldn't have been there for Colleen to see, says Le Roy, if he hadn't secured for her the chance to play extra in the picture.

Lon Chaney's keen eye chose Loretta, practically an unknown then, from 50 other girls whose screen tests he viewed while searching for a leading lady for "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." It was her first lead, almost her first part of any importance at all, but Chaney rejected many famous leading ladies and near-stars.

Charlie Murray did his prophesying after he had watched Loretta at work and had coached her in "The Head Man," in which he played the title role.

Florence Vidor enthused over her in "The Magnificent Flirt," and did what was far more important and generous on the part of a film star: she deliberately allowed the young actress to make all she could of her part. Consequently Loretta did powerfully for the chief histrionic honors of the picture.

All of these people, and her sisters Polly Ann Young and Sally Blane, themselves well known film actresses, helped and criticised and coached Loretta.

IRENE BORDONI HERE IN "PARIS" FOR WEEK AT SHUBERT THEATER

ing to add to the theater's revenues by an extra performance on the day of rest unless the process of swelling those revenues through the sale of tickets on all the other days of the week is made more attractive and more easy to the public. At present the New York public is disgusted by the exorbitant increase extorted by the scalpers and suspicions of devious operations which, in most cases, are nothing short of downright "gypping."

Equity's resolution, one of the landmarks in the history of that remarkable organization, and one of the most important skirmishes in the slow, discouraging battle to rid the theater of its medieval practices, is worth quoting in full. It is a resolution with teeth in it, for Equity pledges its co-operation in putting the suggested reforms into effect, and is capable of backing up its words with intelligence and the power of an almost 100 per cent professional union. Here it is:

"If and when the managers shall first establish the invariable custom of selling a substantial portion of the best seats in all sections of the house to all attractions at the box office at box-office prices; and, second, shall inaugurate a system which shall insure the public that the seats which are sold to the agencies shall be sold at a fixed premium; meaning plainly that the manager shall do away completely with the unconscionable 'gypping' at present practiced on Broadway which has without doubt done more than any other thing to alienate the good-will of the public from the theater; and, third, shall revise the system of cut-rate tickets so that all the money from their sale shall go to the theaters themselves instead of a large proportion of it going to a private concern; and, fourth, shall see to it that a stop is put to the discourtesy and supercilious insolence practiced in most of the theaters by box-office attendants and other employes who come in contact with the public, as contrasted with the unfailing courtesy of the employes of the picture houses, which are the chief competitors complained of by the managers, then, in that case, if it shall appear that these remedies have not solved the economic problems of the theater, the Equity Association will very seriously consider the question of allowing its members to play on Sunday nights whenever such playing is legal or shall become legal, provided always that in lieu of Sunday night another night in the week be given the actor for rest and recuperation."

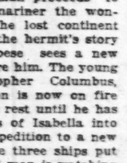
BEHIND THE SCREENS

OUT IN HOLLYWOOD

Many Vaudeville Tours Will Take Movie Stars on Road.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 23.

PROBABLY never in movie history have fans over the country, especially in the larger cities, been given such frequent opportunities for personal glimpses of stars as in the past several months.



BUDDY ROGERS

Vaudeville tours by movie celebrities are partly responsible, with such names as Charlie Murray, Esther Ralston, Estelle Taylor, Claire Windsor and others in the lights, but stars not in vaudeville are going in for "personal appearances" almost as strongly as those who temporarily deserted screen for footlights.

Studios seem to realize more than ever the promotional and publicity value of sending their pet scintillants abroad in the box-office fields to be gazed upon by Joe and Mary Moviefan. Although costly, it pays.

PAUL MUNI, comparatively unknown to fans as yet, is the latest to venture forth—partly to convince picture-goers that he is really a youthful man and not like the various unusual characters he portrays in "Seven Faces," but more importantly to have his name in headlines and his face before the fans.

Prolonged absences from the screen perhaps prompted the trips of Gloria Swanson, Dolores del Rio and Charlie Farrell. Miss Swanson, unheard from cinematically since "Sadie Thompson" two years ago, has returned from an invasion of New York and London with "The Trespasser," while Dolores del Rio enhanced the chances of "Evangeline" by accompanying it to several American cities.

Farrell, although he has worked in two pictures since "Street Angel," has had no releases until "Sunny Side Up," the two others having been shelved for the nonce.

FOX, which also sent Victor McLaglen to the New York opening of "The Cock-Eyed World," seems to be undertaking this personal promotion wholesale, thinking nothing of sending whole trainloads of stars recently to attend dedications of new theaters at San Diego and San Francisco.

And Paramount has granted Buddy Rogers permission to accept a several weeks' vaudeville engagement between pictures.

It's all to obey the Hollywood maxim that a star must be seen—and as much as possible!

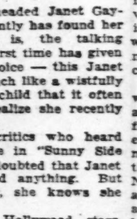
Nancy Carroll's Sister Breaks Into the Cinema Game.

THOUGH the motion picture is the youngest form of expressive art, many of the great classics and historical figures have been brought to the screen, and practically every screen star, save in the comedy field, has played one or more historic characters or characters from the classics.



LON CHANEY

Lon Chaney for instance, has played Hugo's "Quasimodo" and Dickens' "Bill Sykes" in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Oliver Twist." Ramon Novarro's greatest classic role was that of "Ben Hur" in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmisation of the Gen. Lew Wallace classic. He also played the role of Omar Khayyam, the poet, a historic figure. And, of course, Pickford and Fairbanks are now playing "Taming of the Shrew."

Among historic figures brought to the screen was that of Princess Mary of England, played by Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Corinne Griffith recently played Lady Hamilton, too, on the screen.

Greta Garbo played one of the greatest figures in classic literature, "Anna Karenina" in "Love" adapted from Tolstoy's famous work. Renee Adoree played "Musetta" in "La Boheme," in which John Gilbert played "Rodolfo," a role immortalized in opera by Enrico Caruso. Hedda Hopper, one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's featured players, recently brought "Mona Lisa" the painting, to life as a real character of the screen.

There are players, too, who specialize in enacting certain historic or actual characters. For instance, Wilbur Mack, the vaudeville star, who is a "double" for Mayor James Walker, enacted this role in a police review in the new picture in which Tom Moore and Blanche Sweet appeared. Duke R. Lee is enlisted whenever George Washington is wanted on the screen and Edward Welch when Gen. Grant is to be portrayed.

LITTLE red-headed Janet Gaynor just recently has found her voice. That is, the talking screen for the first time has given her a singing voice — this Janet who looks so much like a wistfully pretty, cheerful child that it often is difficult to realize she recently became a bride!

Too critical critics who heard her slight treble in "Sunny Side Up," may have doubted that Janet really has found anything. But for that matter, she knows she hasn't.

Unlike most Hollywood stars, she has taken not a single voice lesson, and never sang before in her life.

When the studio powers informed her she was to do a musical comedy with Charlie Farrell, she answered sweetly and emphatically that she couldn't. No, she wouldn't even take a singing test.

"WE all know our own limitations—at least where singing is concerned," she says. "But they insisted, and said I could just be natural and do my best. So I did, and that's all. I know it isn't really singing—but they must not think it's so very bad, because I'm to do another one."

They (she meant the studio) are guided always by box-office reports, of course, and the fans make those, so that's apparently all of that.

Movie fans who have loved Janet when she smiled have adored her when, a moment later, she has smiled through quick-welling tears. That may be cause for wonder, this seemingly inexhaustible flow of sincere pathos, especially to fans who know that her young life never has been touched by dire tragedy, and that her struggle for success has consisted of mainly hard work and perseverance and not of grueling hardships.

"MAYBE that's why," she laughs when asked how she does it. "Maybe I'm just getting rid of pent-up tears in acting. But I do sincerely feel those tears—I can't help it!"

And she does, believe it one must, because there is not the faintest trace of affectation or insincerity in her. Fans know how she "gets" them on the screen. They should meet her in person!

"WIELDING the megaphone" is no longer a familiar expression in Hollywood. It has been relegated to describe the antics of college cheer leaders or "rubber neck" bus drivers. The movie director, since talking pictures, has had to find new ways to launch his players into a scene. He can no longer shout: "Ready, Camera! Action!" as in the pre-talkie days, for the microphone and recording machines may already be connected and his voice would register. He can't wave his hands because the actors may be looking away from the camera.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS

So, when the "megaphone trust" was broken up, each director tried a new way of his own. They range from the click of a metallic cricket to the somber note of a Chinese gong. The cricket is one of the most popular ways at the First National Studio, where practically all of the directors have used it at some time. These directors, however, learned, when they gave up their megaphones, that the way to start a scene had a lot to do with its success. So now they have adopted various noise-makers to begin the action which are calculated to put the players in the proper mood.

During filming of Chinese street scenes for "Son of the Gods," Richard Barthelmess' starring picture, Director Frank Lloyd had someone play a few notes on a Chinese wind instrument. He found that this helped bring the Chinamen back to an Oriental feeling, and they cast off their Occidental manner more easily! For a quiet scene in a Chinese temple he used a muted Chinese gong.

Alan Crosland, directing "The Furies," a dramatic murder story, fired a revolver to start the climax scene. The shot was said to put the players on edge and they went through the scene in rapid and highly dramatic fashion as Crosland wished.

ALICE WHITE

It is absolutely necessary that some sound signal be given the players. The usual procedure in starting a scene is, after everything is made ready, to turn on the lights. Then the warning bell is rung, which means silence, and the red lights over the door outside the stage are turned on to keep everyone away while the scene is being taken. The mixer phones the recording room to get the waxes ready. The doors of the camera booths are closed. The sound engineer in the recording room phones back that the machinery is ready and the mixer then says: "Quiet everybody. We're turning over."

Then the director may give the signal to start. The starting signal aids the cutter in finding where the scene began so he can cut the film in that place.

If silence pictures ever come back, the directors will have a hard time to once again resign themselves to the common-place megaphone.

TERRY CARROLL, younger sister of the illustrious Nancy, made her debut in audible pictures with a role in "The Spy," an all-talking two-reel feature starring Tom Harvard, and now in production at the Paramount Long Island studio.

Although her role is a minor one, the younger member of the Carroll family displays her own share of the talent which carried her sister Nancy to stardom. On the strength of her initial appearance, studio executives plan to make generous use of Terry's ability and beauty in the increased number of short features.

New York Day b

By O. O. McInty

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.

FROM Dodge City, Kan.: "We still go to the depot to meet the coast to coast trains here and we always spot the New Yorker. They parade up and down the platform in pajamas or dressing gowns. Is that being sophisticated?"

Not unless they wear sandals.

From Chicago, Ill.: "I dined once in a Park avenue cafe—the one that charges a dollar for a stalk of celery and two olives whether ordered or not—and a waiter sent a note over to my table reading: 'I am lonely, too.' I accepted her and we went to a night club and wound up at a sandwich joint at dawn. She did not drink, smoke nor would she permit me to hold her hand in the taxi to her home, which was, incidentally, a private house in the East 60's. What do you make of it?"

Maybe you just don't attract women!

From Indianapolis, Ind.: "Why everybody praising Hemingway's 'Farewell to Arms?' It is reeking with grammatical blunders and awkward phrases and is full of unnecessary obscenity. Good books do not attract no more."

You are not such a grammatical precisionist yourself, if anyone asks.

From Tulsa, Ok.: "Have you ever imagined how David Belasco would look without his reversible collar?"

Not for several days.

From Washington, D. C.: "I attended the excellent premiere of an all-American theatrical cast in London and heard not only silence but several boos. In New York a few weeks ago I saw an all-English cast cheered in a witless play."

You are not going to mix me up any Anglo-American entanglements.

From Ashland, Ky.: "Is it true that New York women are going to beauty experts to have their ears pinned back?"

Only for the melon season.

From New York: "Isn't there some sort of gape cure for those bores who stare at you from the windows of Fifth avenue clubs?"

Yes. Take Madison avenue.

From Oyster Bay, L. I.: "How would you pronounce charivari?" We wouldn't even attempt it with our upper plate working the way it is.

Symphonie at Odeon Tuesday Night in Russian Program

A program of Russian sacred, classical and folk songs will be presented at the Odeon on Tuesday evening when the Russian Symphonic Choir of 22 young men and women clad in the native costume of Russia will provide the third attraction of the Civic Music League under the direction of Basile Kibalchich. In the third group is "The Volga Boat Song," made popular in America by Chaliapin. In contrast is the Garden Song and the Bridal Song and Gayety, the last named by Gretchaninoff. The classical group includes Rachmaninoff's Prelude C sharp minor, Tschaikowsky's Peasant Scene from "Eugene Onegin," Borodin's Evening Song from "Prince Igor," and a selection from Sadko by Rimsky-Korsakoff. The sacred group includes a Rachmaninoff number "To Thee We Sing," which is sung in the mass of the Russian Greek Orthodox Church. "Holy Week," the most ancient liturgical melody in use in the Greek-Catholic church, describing the biblical prophecies of the coming of the Messiah will also be heard, as will "The Last Supper" by Lvov; Notre Dame by Tschaikowsky, one of the traditional prayers of the Christian Church set to the variant of the Serbian ritual and Archangelsky's Psalm XXIV which carries a trio of male voices augmented by the full choir.

comedy constructor then, also claims credit. Loretta wouldn't have been there for Colleen to see, says Le Roy, if he hadn't secured for her the chance to play extra in the picture.

Lon Chaney's keen eye chose Loretta, practically an unknown then, from 50 other girls whose screen tests he viewed while searching for a leading lady for "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." It was her first lead, almost her first part of any importance at all, but Chaney rejected many famous leading ladies and near-stars.

Charlie Murray did his prophesying after he had watched Loretta work and had coached her in "The Head Man," in which he played the title role.

Florence Vidor enthused over her in "The Magnificent Flirt," and did what was far more important and generous on the part of a film star: she deliberately allowed the young actress to make all she could of her part. Consequently Loretta bid powerfully for the chief histrionic honors of the picture.

All of these people, and her sisters Polly Ann Young and Sally Blane, themselves well known film actresses, helped and criticised and coached Loretta.

ing to add to the theater's revenues by an extra performance on the day of rest unless the process of swelling those revenues through the sale of tickets on all the other days of the week is made more attractive and more easy to the public. At present the New York public is disgusted by the exorbitant increase extorted by the scalpers and suspicions of devious operations which, in most cases, are nothing short of downright "gypping."

Equity's resolution, one of the landmarks in the history of that remarkable organization, and one of the most important skirmishes in the slow, discouraging battle to rid the theater of its medieval practices, is worth quoting in full. It is a resolution with teeth in it, for Equity pledges its co-operation in putting the suggested reforms into effect, and is capable of backing up its words with intelligence and the power of an almost 100 per cent professional union. Here it is:

"If and when the managers shall first establish the invariable custom of selling a substantial portion of the best seats in all sections of the house to all attractions at the box office at box-office prices; and, second, shall inaugurate a system which shall insure the public that the seats which are sold to the agencies shall be sold at a fixed premium; meaning plainly that the manager shall do away completely with the unconscionable 'gypping' at present practiced on Broadway, which has without doubt done more than any other thing to alienate the good-will of the public from the theater; and, third, shall revise the system of cut-rate tickets so that all the money from their sale shall go to the theaters themselves instead of a large proportion of it going to a private concern; and, fourth, shall see to it that a stop is put to the discourtesy and supercilious insolence practiced in most of the theaters by box-office attendants and other employes who come in contact with the public, as contrasted with the unfailing courtesy of the employes of the picture houses, which are the chief competitors complained of by the managers, then, in that case, if it shall appear that these remedies have not solved the economic problems of the theater, the Equity Association will very seriously consider the question of allowing its members to play on Sunday nights whenever such playing is legal or shall become legal, provided always that in lieu of Sunday night another night in the week be given the actor for rest and recuperation."

One of the most interesting books I have read recently is "Born to Be," by Taylor Gordon. Gordon has been successful as a singer of spirituals here and abroad. The book is an autobiography beginning with the Negro's job as a page in a Montana bagnio and following with his life as a Pullman porter, his job as chauffeur with John Ringling and on to his triumphs in London, where he was feted by royalty. He tells his story simply, but with a vernacular that carries you along. The book is published by Covici-Friede, a new firm that is setting a pace.

For no especial reason, it occurs to me that the best lighted small city in America is Glendale, Cal.

Eddie Cantor says the stock market has been so bad that lots of men have left their sweethearts and returned to their wives. He also says that when a man engages a hotel room these days the clerk inquires if it is for "Sleeping" or "Jumping."

And another story concerns a hotel patron sitting in the lobby in his pajamas at 3 a. m. "I bought my room on margin," he told a friend.

Shavings: George Jessell holds all Broadway records for staying up all night. . . . Sophie Tucker commuted from Hollywood for one night to attend a dinner in New York. . . . Wall street's theme song: "Moanin' Low." . . . Waiters call tips "tablecloth money." . . . Kenyon Nicholson and his wife are on a year's jaunt to Africa. . . . "Broadway Interlude" is still another novel throwing the searchlight on Broadway. . . . Noel Coward wears a silver bracelet. . . . Ziegfeld's 12-year-old daughter Patricia now goes moose hunting with her dad in Maine. . . . Mexico had the first automatic telephone, which may explain a lot.

It strikes me that of all callings football coaches have the most picturesque names—or maybe they make them picturesque. I think of Knute Rockne, Fielding Yost, Lou Little, Walter Camp, Jock Sutherland and Chick Meehan.

Dramatic Club Organized.

The Masque Dramatic Club has been organized by a group of young women to further the interest in the drama; and the proceeds from the number of performances to be presented this season will be given to charity. Miss Monica Brinkman is president, Miss Virginia King has charge of tickets and publicity. The first public performance will be in the Toy Theater next Friday night when the program will consist of two one-act plays, the first a comedy, "Just Women," by Colin Campbell Clements, the other an Indian play, "Yot-Che-Ka," by Helen P. Kane. The plays are under the direction of Miss Bessie Bissell Morse. Those taking part are Mary Ann Faber, Dorothy Becker, Virginia Eckeles, Helen McCoy, Virginia King, Audrey Rauss, Monica Brinkman, Marjorie Blanchard, Madalyne Huber and Vivian Shenck.

A. E. F. FOOD STILL IN FRANCE

Health Authorities Seize 25,000 Cans of Beans at Bordeaux.

By the Associated Press.

BORDEAUX, France, Nov. 23.—A. E. F. food stocks still linger in this region, 10 years after the treaty of Versailles was signed. The health authorities have seized 25,000 cans of baked beans, offered for sale, although manifestly unfit for human consumption.

Their investigation showed that the first vendors charged the modest rate of 10 cans for a cent, but that the price rose with each successive deal. The authorities have started criminal proceedings against all persons who dealt in the beans.

GREEK HEROES' MONUMENT TO BE ERECTED IN ATHENS

Various Cities Send Stones Carved With Their Names for Memorial to Independence.

ATHENS, Nov. 22. — Stones on which are carved the names of various Greek cities have been received for the foundation of the heroes' monument, which will be erected in Athens as part of the celebration of the centennial of Greek independence next spring.

American Greeks are contributing to a fund to build a historical and an ethnological museum on land given by the Greek Government. The city of Hermopolis on the island of Syra, which was founded by refugees from Chios after the massacre of 1822, is building a library and a museum, while the island of Mykonos will erect a bust of its local heroine, Manto Mavrogenous, the Greek Joan of Arc. Corfu will have an industrial, ethnological, historical and artistic exhibition which will become a permanent museum in the old Palace of Saints Michael and George. The practical province of the river Hebros, the modern Maritza, will found an antituberculosis station as its contribution.

World Curios in Museum At Carondelet Convent

Eagle, Stuffed and Mounted, Which Survived 36 Civil War Engagements, Is Chief Attraction.

"Old Abe," who went through 36 engagements in the Civil War unscathed as mascot of the Eighteenth Wisconsin Infantry, perches today, stuffed and mounted, near the ceiling in a museum in the convent of the Sisters of St. Joseph, 6400 Minnesota avenue.

"Old Abe" was a golden eagle, and is now the principal exhibit in the unusual collection of bird life which is the feature of a collection of curios gathered from all parts of the world by the Sisters of St. Joseph since the founding of the convent in Carondelet 88 years ago.

The story of the founding of the museum has been forgotten, according to Sister Lucidia, who is now in charge of the exhibits. Soon after the original convent was built in 1841—at that time it was a one-room log cabin—a small bunch of wool, sheared from a lamb near Jerusalem, was received from a man visiting the Holy Land, and since that time the collection, entirely gathered by the nuns, has increased until an extra room soon will be needed to hold all the exhibits.

Other Parts of Collection.

Besides the collection of bird life, the museum contains a collection of wood specimens and marbles, two large cases filled with specimens of Indian basket weaving, an exhibit of corals and semi-precious stones, a stamp collection, relics from the Holy Land and oddities from various parts of the world.

One of the most interesting exhibits is a three-foot lattice-work cross, made entirely of pieces of cigar boxes, which was made by a convict during his two-year incarceration in Joliet, Ill., prison.

Another featured curio is a 200-year-old altar-bread iron, reputed to have belonged originally to a family by the name of Wilhelm, which for many generations supplied altar-bread in the diocese of Speyer, Germany. It is said that in the sacking of the town by French soldiers in 1792, when they attempted to take the iron, its metal claws caught in the crevices of the wall and resisted all attempts to pull it loose.

Another interesting wood specimen is 10-inch oak cross, a copy of the famous Muiredach Cross, the original of which is in Monasterboice, Ireland.

Wood From Marquette Chapel.

Most forest trees of North America are represented in the wood collection. Bits of their bark surround a small piece of wood from the chapel built by Pierre Marquette at St. Ignace in 1671. Other odd bits include a splinter from one of the beams which supported one of the guns at the old Spanish fort in New Orleans; a wooden pin seven inches long and one inch in diameter which was used in place of a spike in the building of a frame house in Ste. Genevieve, Mo., about 1820, and a piece of bark from a coffee tree planted by Thomas Jefferson on the grounds at Mount Vernon.

Among the marbles is a small on a base of unpolished quartz. It is a copy of the famous Muiredach Cross of Monasterboice, Ireland.

A copy of Raphael's "Madonna of the Fish," carved on a small piece of hardwood, is a featured curio. Every feature of the painting is perfectly reproduced in the carving. It was given to the Sisters by the Marchesa Ferrari.

ABSENT-MINDED PROFESSOR LANDS AID IN PADDED CELL

Janitor Locks Man Behind Bars When He Asks to Milk Sow.

By the Associated Press.

LEIPZIG, Nov. 23.—"I have come to milk the sow," a distinguished looking visitor told the janitor of the psychiatrical clinic here. "Yes, sir," replied the janitor, and he led the caller to a little back room, carefully locking the door.

For the next five hours sounds of rage came from the little room which was really a padded cell. Then arrived the chief surgeon, who had completely forgotten an arrangement he had made with the visitor, a Halle university professor and physiological expert, to conduct chemical tests with pig's milk. It took some time for the captive to regain his composure.

Horse Meat Popular in Belgium.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 22. — Horse meat is becoming increasingly popular in Belgian industrial centers, largely because of a rise in the cost of living. In Charleroi 3200 horses and only 840 oxen were killed for food last year.

A. B. HOUGHTON TO ADDRESS FOREIGN AFFAIRS SOCIETY

Former Ambassador Will Speak on "Putting War Up to the People."

Alanson B. Houghton, former United States Ambassador to Germany, and also to Great Britain, will speak Wednesday evening, Dec. 4, at the last dinner meeting for the year of the St. Louis Society on Foreign Affairs at Hotel Statler. His subject will be "War and Peace, or Putting War Up to the People."

Houghton was made Ambassador to Germany in 1922, and served three years. In 1925 he was named Ambassador to Great Britain, serving until last spring, when former Vice President Dawes succeeded him. Houghton was defeated in his campaign for Senator from New York.

He is an enthusiastic supporter of the Kellogg pact.

Nonmembers of the Society on Foreign Affairs may attend, obtaining their dinner tickets at the door.

TIRELESS writing with the Simple Autopoint

The pencil of big business

Autopoint Oversize $1

The 3 big features that won men's votes

SUPERLATIVES are overworked. But here is a pencil that is really a joy to work with. It is Autopoint, the simplest mechanical pencil ever made.

No Autopoint ever "broke down." There's nothing to go wrong. You write tirelessly, for the pencil itself is feather-light, is perfectly balanced. And its beautiful Bakelite barrel does not "perspire" or make you grip to hold it.

All better dealers have Autopoint. Examine it. Note the 3 big features that have won its name: "the pencil of big business." In a wide variety of styles and models, in every conceivable color combination—50c to $4.00.

At all good dealers

Autopoint

The "Better Pencil" Made of Bakelite

Autopoint's 3 Big Features:

1. Cannot "jam"—guaranteed. But 1 simple moving part. Nothing to go wrong—no repairs.
2. Bakelite barrel, beautiful material, like lovely onyx. Lightweight. Perfectly balanced.
3. Lead always held firmly. Cannot "wobble."

Autopoint Company, 1801-31 Foster Ave., Chicago, Ill.

There Is a LACO OIL BURNER
For Every Kind of Heating Plant
An entirely different type of oil burner is the LACO. It's an oil-gas burner. The oil, in passing through a red-hot mineral wick, is converted into hydro-carbon gas. The hot gas is burned as fast as it is made, not the oil. Dependable heat always—a clean, gas flame that makes no smoke, grease or soot; economy because no wasted unburned gas.
The LACO has no electric or gas ignition. Operates on high flame and low flame, which eliminates cooling of heating plant when flames are out, and rapid expansion when flames are on, which is almost suicide to a plant fired with the on and off flame type burner.

OLD SHACK IS NOW A TRIM LITTLE COTTAGE

These contrasting pictures emphasize the fact that every home owner can make his dwelling up to date.

REMODELING REPAYS MONEY EXPENDED

Realtors Declare All Home Buyers Look for Modern Houses.

Progressive realtors advise modernization. Out of their wide experience in the sale of real estate they point to instance after instance where the old timer was modernized and quickly sold—at a profit. The purchaser of property no matter how low the price, hesitates to buy an old building and then spend additional money on improvements. He feels that he is not getting a bargain.

Yet he will cheerfully purchase the modernized residence at a price which includes the cost of the improvements and crow over his astuteness.

The buyer of a new home is looking for something up-to-date. He passes by the old time residence in favor of a smart-looking bungalow or two-story house. He understands and appreciates pleasing exterior lines, tiled baths, effective looking electrical fixtures and a handy breakfast nook.

Those homes that are modern move quickly on a slow market. They soon sell or rent. They are in demand.

LUMBER INSTITUTE ADOPTS GRADE MARKING OF LUMBER

Architects Throughout the Country Give Enthusiastic Approval.

At a convention of the Retail Lumber Dealers' Association held recently in Chicago, one of the important subjects discussed was the program of grade-marking lumber adopted by the Mississippi Valley Lumber Institute in the St. Louis territory.

The program in this territory which has behind it 43 of the leading yards, is making phenomenal progress because the lumber buyer has been quick to recognize the benefits of this protective policy, it was announced.

The grade-marking of lumber is being sponsored by the Southern Pine Association, a leader in this campaign to protect the lumber buyer by stamping the grade on each piece.

It was stated at the convention that the eyes of the entire industry are focused on St. Louis because of the importance of this progressive movement.

This Classy Cottage Grew From Old Run-Down Shack

Old-Fashioned Lines Were Torn Away and the House Clothed Again in the Artistic Architectural Dress of Today.

On this page is shown a smart-looking cottage that was once a lowly, weather-beaten frame house. Illustrations of this sort are striking and focus attention on the fact that modernization accomplishes wonders in design. The before and after views point out more effectively than a thousand words the marked changes in appearance that come with modernization.

Out on the edge of every town are many small houses like the one pictured.

These are the homes of many families who yearn for better appearing dwellings but who do not realize that their hopeless looking houses can be remodeled.

Radical changes in the appearance of the exterior of these residences are possible. The old houses are not cast in an inflexible mould that forbids alteration, but to the contrary, are plastic in the hands of the experienced builder and can emerge from his efforts dressed in the lines of today.

Sturdy Frames Reclothed.

A touch of the magic wand of modernization and a new home leaps into being—a new home based on the sturdy frame of the drab looking house of former days.

When the owners of these old houses realize how simple the transformation really is, they will wonder why they did not catch the spirit of modernization years ago.

The illustration of the house before the owner called for advice shows a particularly forlorn looking affair. It was a shoe box with windows, roof and a nondescript set of additions trailing along behind. The patched fence aided immeasurably in building up an atmosphere of decay and blasted hopes.

A New Porch.

The old front porch with its wooden machine turned pillars reminiscent of Victorian days has been superseded by a small square stoop with round wooden columns supporting a shelter with a pitched roof, all trimmed in white. The shingled sides of the dwelling are stained.

The windows at the front carry blinds, each with a shamrock cut out of a panel. The front door contains 10 small panes of plate glass which aid in lighting the living room.

The rambling additions at the back have been rejuvenated into a harmonious part of the cottage. Now they are not after thoughts but a component part of the building.

The inside of this cottage also has been modernized and made strictly up-to-date.

EXTERIOR OF AN OLD HOUSE IS READILY MODERNIZED

How Often When Passing a Home We Sense the Age of the Building.

One of the practical methods of beautifying and restyling the home and one which is coincident with the present movement of home modernization, is the application of asphalt shingles over the old wooden sidings.

There are a number of homes in St. Louis that have been "restyled" with this material and the finished job presents a very handsome appearance. The variety of colors and the particular shades of slate granules which this material is surfaced with affords a new beauty.

Aside from beautifying the exterior this novel method has other virtues. The material is surfaced with crushed slate granules firmly imbedded into the asphalt. Once applied, it is there to stay, protecting the house itself and requiring no further upkeep of its own. It acts as insulation and the home is afforded extra protection from the cold and dampness of the winter months. The house remains cooler in summer, too, the heat of the sun being kept out by the extra "coat."

Many home owners who had their homes "restyled" in this manner found it most economical and practical. No dirt or inconvenience, and in a very few days the home is "dressed up" in its brand-new covering.

An impetus to restyling the home is added by the fact that many contractors are giving homeowners the benefit of an extended payment plan.

Money Well Invested.

Money spent on home modernization has a definite social value. This aspect must never be overlooked when considering this most important subject.

WEATHER STRIPPING SHUTS OUT COLD AIR

Metal Weatherstrips Are Available for Every Type Window Sash.

The near approach of cold weather makes the average householder shudder with the thought of providing the extra amount of heat necessary to warm up all the cold air that leaks into the house through the windows.

Some statistical wizard has figured out that a cold wind blowing at 40 miles an hour, blew in, in a period of one hour's time, about 8100 cubic feet of icy air which filtered in through the cracks between the sash and the frame of the window.

If a room has several average-sized windows, and if it is a cold, windy day, and if one window lets in 8100 cubic feet of cold air, then three windows will let in 24,000 cubic feet of cold air, according to the best mathematicians.

An enormous amount of fuel is burned every winter in homes just to heat the cold air that seeps in under the doors and through the windows.

If the windows could be sealed up tightly so that no cold air could come in, the fuel bills would be decreased appreciably. This method is hardly practicable and for the additional reason that people would not enjoy living in houses and rooms which could not be aired every day in the year, summer and winter.

Good weather stripping will correct the trouble by filling up the window cracks and keeping the cold air out so that the heating plant will be enabled to heat the cold air that is in the house because it is winter time and the thermometer outside registers a temperature below freezing.

Metal weather stripping can be used with good results in the ordinary old type wooden frame windows and also in the new type metal frame windows.

Some home owners feel that they cannot afford to install patent weather strips in the windows of their homes. This is another problem which can be worked out in figures as the cost of the winter's coal supply will be lowered following the installation of weather strips in the house, as a smaller fire will suffice if there is no additional cold air allowed to seep in through the windows.

In many cases the saving in fuel during a period of several years will more than pay for equipping a home with patent weather strips.

LANDSCAPE HOME LOT

Lawn and Shrubbery Add to Importance of a Residence.

After the lot has been graded and rolled so that it is level and ready for planting, sow grass seed if the lawn is in bad condition. A stretch of velvety lawn is just the first step in the plan.

Next, comes the planting of shrubbery and hedges. A low, trimmed hedge along the public sidewalk and the boundry lines of the lot, defines the limits of the property and holds the lawn together, artistically speaking.

Well massed shrubbery may be set at angles in the shrubbery to soften the abrupt change in line.

Near the house additional shrubbery should be used to conceal the foundation of the dwelling. Flower beds are often set near the house for the same purpose.

BENEFIT BALL NOV. 29 FOR STUDENT ARTISTS

Washington U. Function at Jefferson to Be Given to Finance European Tours.

A benefit dinner and ball to obtain funds with which to send meritorious students of the Washington University School of Fine Arts on a four months tour of the art center of Europe will be held Nov. 29 under aupices of the Art Alliance at the Hotel Jefferson.

Three students were sent abroad last June, but it is hoped to send as many next year as finances will permit, Dr. Edmund H. Wuerpel, director of the Washington University School of Fine Arts, said today. Those making the tours will be selected through competitive examinations, embracing every medium of art, to be held in March.

The ball this year will not be a costume event, although there will be a Russian atmosphere and several specialty dance numbers presented in Russian costume. Miss Elizabeth Cueny is directress of the special events.

Tickets, which are $10, may be obtained from Mrs. J. M. Francisco, 10 Lenox place; Mrs. Howard Benoist, 4831 Pershing avenue, or Mrs. Mary Pollard, 24 Kingsbury place, president of the Art Alliance.

EXTRA SUPPLY OF GENERALS PUT TO WORK ON HIGHWAYS

Honduras Adopts Plan as Cure for Revolutionary Itch and Unemployment.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Nov. 23.—Road building as a cure for "revolutionary itch" has been a success this year in Honduras. It has also answered a question as to what the Government should do with its huge crop of Generals.

Generals, of course, are supposed to be fighters, and when there is no fighting some of them grow tired of idleness and sometimes try to stir up a little excitement. So the Government decided that work would be a good outlet for these pent-up energies. There were two naval districts and 17 army districts which 19 of the restless spirits could command, but there were plenty left over.

Honduras needs roads and the Generals are good bosses. So the superfluous commanders were detailed to oversee road gangs. They did great work, too. Nine of them were assigned to the North Coast road, about 120 miles long, and among those who made monuments for themselves in the shape of smooth highways were Gens. Angel Matute, Blas Dominguez, Pedro Triminio, Francisco Valladares, Ruben Barahona and Ricardo Lardizabal.

Some of the working Generals were Liberals and some were Conservatives, but they realized that good roads would redound to the credit of their political parties and there was much rivalry among them.

Furthermore events proved that after spending a day in the hot sun of the lowlands directing the work of road building, any General, no matter how much of a General he is, feels more inclined to tranquillity than to starting a fight.

To Produce Jewish Plays.

A series of Jewish plays is planned for production in St. Louis this winter by the Jewish Players Association, newly organized, H. M. Stolar, president of the association, recently announced. The plays will be given on Sunday and Thursday nights at the Odeon. Among the promoters are Frank Dubinsky, I. Mathes, Frank Yawita, Morris Mushlin and Henry Rosen.

OXFORD AND WASHINGTON U. TEAMS TO DEBATE TUESDAY

English Speakers to Oppose Talking Film as a Blow to Western Culture.

Teams from Oxford and from Washington universities will meet in debate Tuesday night in Mary Institute auditorium. The subject of debate is: "Resolved, That the Talking Film Will Strike a Deadly Blow at Western Culture." The Oxonians will take the affirmative. It will be the fourth visit of Oxford debaters to Washington University.

Richard T. D. Acland of Balliol College, Bernard J. M. McKenna of New College and William J. K. Diplock of University College compose the Oxford team. The Washington University team is made up of Charles F. Lamkin Jr., Robertson Claggett and Marshall O. Mitchell, each a student lawyer. Lamkin and Claggett, former students at Westminster College, toured England two years as members of an American debating team.

Dr. George R. Throop, chancellor of Washington University, will preside. The Oxford debaters are also scheduled to appear at Culver-Stockton College, Missouri; Westminster College at Fulton; at the University of Missouri, and at William Jewell College. Their debating tour, which began Oct. 24 at Columbia University, ends Dec. 14 at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, Ruston, La.

TUBERCULOSIS RESEARCH APPROPRIATION IS URGED

Dr. F. H. McKeon Points Out Need for Experiments to Find Specific Cure.

Appropriation of funds to subsidize research by the National Tuberculosis Association was recommended to the board of directors of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis by its medical advisory staff at a recent meeting. A portion of the funds raised by the society, it was recommended, should be turned over to the other organization for research.

Dr. F. H. McKeon, in making public the recommendation, pointed out that while tuberculosis is constantly being cured by a routine of proper rest, diet and care, there has been no specific cure found for the disease, and that the time now required to arrest the disease is comparatively long. A Research Committee under the direction of Dr. William Charles White of Washington, D. C., has produced pure tuberculin, the substance used in detecting tuberculosis in human beings and cattle, without having received compensation. A serum test has also been evolved by the Rockefeller Institute for early diagnosis of the disease.

Dr. McKeon and his associates think that an appropriation for research would spur experimentation for a specific cure for the disease.

I. W. W. CALLS CONFERENCE OF MINERS AT COLLINSVILLE

Men From All Over Illinois Are Asked to Attend Meeting Set for Dec. 15.

The General Executive Board of the Industrial Workers of the World has sent out a call for a conference of all coal miners in the Illinois fields, to take place Dec. 15 at Collinsville.

"It was voted to start our membership drive in Illinois, proceeding east and south to Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, West Virginia and Alabama," the organization's announcement reads. "We have met such encouraging results so far, that it is deemed necessary to call a conference of all coal miners for the purpose of drafting certain demands intended to remedy the grievances of the miners against the operators. Such a matter is beyond the power of the board to decide. The solution for such problems must come from the men that actually work in the fields.

REAL ESTATE

TWO LARGE DEALS IN WEEK SHOW REVIVED ACTIVITY

Hampden-Hall Apartments Purchased by Frank H. Hunleth at Reported Price of $850,000.

80 ACRES SOLD ON CLAYTON ROAD

J. H. White & Co., Subdivision Developers, Plan Residential Park on Elaborate Scale.

By Berry Moore.

The week witnessed further evidence of renewed activity in real estate, with large transactions in both the city and the county, presumably inspired as a result of the recent crash in New York stock market prices.

This was exemplified yesterday in transactions involving the Hampden-Hall apartments at the southwest corner of McPherson and Newstead avenues, through the Laclede Bond and Mortgage Co., and 80 acres on the south side of Clayton road, 1000 feet west of the North and South road, through LeGrand Jones, Inc.

Hampden Hall, a 16-story structure, having 130 feet on McPherson, 120 feet on Pershing and 125 feet on Newstead, approximately three-third of a block, was purchased by Frank H. Hunleth, music dealer, for a reported consideration of $850,000. The building has 60 apartments of six rooms and two baths. It was owned by H. S. Kelley, a client of the Laclede Bond and Mortgage Co., which refinanced it several months ago. Management of the building is under M. H. Rodemyer Co.

Kelley took in part payment for the apartments a 99-year leasehold in the heart of the downtown business district of Kansas City, with building plans for the site. This deal, involving around $1,000,000, including the Kansas City leasehold, was engineered by C. L. Powell, manager of the real estate sales department of the Laclede Bond and Mortgage Co.

Second Sale on Clayton Road.

The Clayton road tract of 80 acres was purchased by J. H. White & Co., subdivision developers, clients of LeGrand Jones, Inc., which conducted the negotiations. It was sold by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. as trustee for a syndicate composed of W. K. Bixby, G. H. Walker, N. M. McMillen, George Doan, Benjamin Gratz and others. The sale price was not disclosed.

The largest previous sale in money value on Clayton road was that of Gay Villa, owned by the late Mrs. Sophia Mitchell Crow, comprising approximately 60 acres at the southwest corner of Clayton and Hanley roads, for which the Lake Forest Development Co., composed of wealthy St. Louis business men, paid $4700 an acre. On that basis White & Co.'s purchase would represent an investment of $376,000.

White & Co's purchase comprises the west part of a tract of 140 acres purchased tentatively 18 years ago by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. for the syndicate as a site for the St. Louis Country Club, now located on the Price road north of Clayton road. The price paid, as recalled by real estate agents, being at the rate of $700 an acre, noteworthy as contrasted with prices now prevailing on this section of Clayton road.

Residential Park Planned.

As trustees for the syndicate, the St. Louis Union Trust Co. sold the west 60 acres of the aforementioned 140 acres several years ago, to the Claynorth Realty Co., through LeGrand Jones, Inc. As the purchase price in this instance was not disclosed. The Claynorth Co. has improved this property with homes.

White & Co. has plans for a residential park on an elaborate scale, the 80 acres occupying a high elevation which enhances its value especially as a location for homes on a pretentious scale. Ridge Top, developed by Wade Childress, and one of the most attractive parks in this section, is just west of and adjoining White & Co.'s purchase.

The Crow estate owns 40 acres on the north side of Clayton in this vicinity for which several attractive offers have been submitted, according to Warman Crow, one of the heirs. This tract also originally belonged to the Edward H. Gay estate.

The Lake Forest Development Co. is developing the former Crow tract on an elaborate scale. Lots in the addition are now being sold from the plats with Shaw & Francis as agents. A number of the purchasers have disclosed plans for handsome homes.

35-Acre Transaction.

Another recent sale in this section, as told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, was that of 35 acres at necessary to call a conference of all coal miners for the purpose of drafting certain demands intended to remedy the grievances of the miners against the operators. Such a matter is beyond the power of the board to decide. The solution for such problems must come from the men that actually work in the fields.

The price paid, as recalled by real estate agents, being at the rate of $700 an acre, noteworthy as contrasted with prices now prevailing on this section of Clayton road.

Residential Park Planned.

As trustees for the syndicate, the St. Louis Union Trust Co. sold the last 60 acres of the aforementioned 140 acres several years ago to the Claynorth Realty Co., through LeGrand Jones, Inc. But the purchase price in this instance was not disclosed. The Claynorth Co. has improved this property with homes.

White & Co. has plans for a residential park on an elaborate scale, the 80 acres occupying a high elevation which enhances its value especially as a location for homes on a pretentious scale. Ridge Top, developed by Wade Childress, and one of the most attractive parks in this section, is just west of and adjoining White & Co.'s purchase.

The Crow estate owns 40 acres on the north side of Clayton in the vicinity for which several attractive offers have been submitted, according to Wayman Crow, one of the heirs. This tract was originally belonged to the Edward H. Gay estate.

The Lake Forest Development Co. is developing the former Crow tract on an elaborate scale. Lots in the addition are now being sold from the plats with Shaw & Francis as agents. A number of the purchasers have disclosed plans for handsome homes.

35-Acre Transaction.

Another recent sale in this section, as told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, was that of 35 acres at the southeast corner of Clayton and Geyer roads, to Oliver K. Burkart of the F. Burkart Manufacturing Co., through Edward L. Bakewell, for a reported price of $65,000. Plans in connection with this purchase have not been announced, but the property, it is presumed, was acquired as a speculative investment.

Final papers were executed the last week under which the Missouri Pacific Railway acquired the new 12-story Olive-Plaza building on the south side of Olive street, just west of Twelfth boulevard, adjoining the new Missouri Pacific building at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and Olive streets. The purchase price, according to authentic sources, was $1,100,000. The Olive-Plaza building occupies a lot 50 feet wide and extends from Olive to Pine, with entrances on both streets. It was built by a syndicate composed of Henry R. Weisels, W. J. Holbrook, Benjamin J. Brinkman, A. Frumberg, attorney, and Arthur Hoeh. Conforming with the new Missouri Pacific building in both floor plan and exterior design, the building obviously was constructed with a view of ultimately disposing of it to the Missouri Pacific Railway Co. The profit involved in the transaction was not disclosed.

John J. White has purchased through Maguire's Real Estate Agency the seven 3-story stone and brick dwellings, Nos. 3115-27 Olive street, with one store. The buildings occupy a lot 147 feet 11 inches by depth of 100 and 110 feet to alley. It was owned by the heirs of A. N. DeMenil. White was represented by R. J. Heckel.

Nugents Wellston Store, Just Completed; Design for New Home in the Suburbs

Nugents new Wellston store, at the northwest corner of Easton and Hodiamont avenues in Wellston, which was formally opened yesterday.

English-type home to be built in Lake Forest, Clayton and Hanley roads, by William G. Kaysing, president of the Kaysing Iron Works. Designed by Saum architects.

DALY AGAIN HEADS REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE

Six of the 12 Directors Also Are Named—Divisions to Be Established.

Charles J. Daly, re-elected president of the Real Estate Exchange without opposition in the election of the past week, will serve at the head of the Exchange through 1930. He is president of Daly & McCabe Real Estate Co.

With him was elected one-half of the board of directors, six of the 12 members holding over from the past year. The newly constituted board will choose from its own number, at its first regular meeting, the first and second vice presidents, secretary and treasurer. It also will elect the executive secretary and counsel, and will name committees.

The newly elected directors, to serve until the beginning of 1932, are William E. Caulfield, Alex M. Cornwell, Edward L. Kuhs, Monroe H. Rodemeyer, Alfred D. Ruth and Clarence M. Turley. Those holding over for terms which expire at the beginning of 1931 are William R. Cady, William A. Federer, John W. Gibson, Eugene D. Ruth Jr., Carl G. Stifel and Delbert S. Wenzlick.

By a vote taken at the election, the Exchange amended its by-laws to permit the establishing of divisions within the Exchange, to afford a better opportunity to members for co-operation and discussion of various branches of real estate activity. The Exchange directors will have supervision over the action of these divisions.

WEIL CLOTHING CO. BUYS LEASE ON STORE BUILDING

Proprietors, Who Have Occupied Property 20 Years, Say They Have Shown Faith in Future of District.

The Weil Clothing Co., through its subsidiary, the Weil Realty Co., has purchased the 99-year lease of the building and site which it now occupies at the northwest corner of Washington and Eighth street, from the Lindell Realty Co. The fee to the property is owned by Mrs. Isabel Mauran. The building is six stories in height, with a frontage of 122 feet on Washington and a depth of 150 feet on Eighth street to an alley. The numbers run from 801 to 809 Washington avenue.

The Weil Clothing Co. has occupied the entire building for 20 years, with the exception of the building at 809 Washington, which is occupied by the Leppert-Roos Fur Co., one of the oldest fur companies in the city. Leppert-Roos will continue to occupy this portion of the building.

The price paid for the leasehold, which has about 80 years to run, was not disclosed, but it is understood that it establishes a new precedent for property values on this thoroughfare east of Twelfth boulevard. By the proprietors of Weil's say, they have demonstrated their faith in the future of Washington avenue as a retail center.

Important improvements made recently in this section of Washington avenue have been the new Lennox Hotel and Loew's State Theater. The Illinois Terminal improvements at Twelfth and Washington will be another contribution to the importance of this retail center.

Weil's is one of the largest popular-price men's retail clothing stores in the city, occupying six floors.

WALGREEN STORE ON OLIVE AT VANDEVENTER

The Walgreen Co. has concluded negotiations for a 20-year lease for approximately 2000 square feet of storeroom in the building at the northeast corner of Vandeventer and Olive street.

Extensive alterations are now being made which contemplate early occupancy by a pretentious drug store.

While the terms of this lease have not been disclosed, it is understood that the rentals paid thereunder are based on a very high value due to the prominence of this corner which has been materially benefited by the recent opening and widening of Vandeventer and the busy shopping center which has grown up around this intersection. The Woolworth Five and Ten-Cent Store, under a long-term lease, occupies an L-shaped store in the same building, around the Walgreen Store, having entrances on both Olive and Vandeventer streets. A branch of the B. Nugent Bros. Dry Good and Department Store occupies the building at the southwest corner of Vandeventer and Olive street.

The Apex Realty & Mortgage Co. handled negotiations for the new Walgreen lease.

ST. LOUIS GAINS 195 FACTORIES IN TWO-YEAR PERIOD

Bureau of Industrial Club Also Cites Expansion of 304 Existing Plants in District.

MONTHLY RECORD OF ACTIVITY KEPT

16-Page Booklet Issued on Anniversary Showing Development of Manufacturing in City.

A total of 195 new industries have been established in the St. Louis industrial district and 304 existing industries have expanded their facilities in the district during the two years since the creation of the Industrial Bureau of the Industrial Club of St. Louis as a research and sales organization to promote the development of the district, George C. Smith, director of the bureau, said yesterday.

The anniversary of the bureau, established in October, 1927, was observed by the issuance of a 16-page booklet, for national distribution, made up of photographs of 96 new St. Louis factories and an aerial view of the downtown, river front and adjacent industrial districts.

The new industries and expansions, Smith said, have required construction of 5,456,700 square feet of factory space and the utilization of 3,164,000 square feet of hitherto unusued space, as well as the employment of 16,587 additional workers.

"St. Louis is one of the two or three cities in the country in which a complete monthly record of business and industrial activity is made available," Smith said. "In announcing these new industries and expansions each month the Industrial Bureau has consistently declined to take credit for their acquisition. Although the Bureau has had a hand in several important acquisitions, opening negotiations in some of them, not an industry has been brought to the district without the aid of one or more independent St. Louisan or civic organization. Sometimes it is a real estate dealer who aids in the work, again the head of an industry or the combination of a number of diverse interests."

The Industrial Bureau maintains a staff of 14 persons engaged in the work of obtaining and correlating information of both a general and specific nature which might assist in bringing new industries to St. Louis.

NUGENTS NEW WELLSTON BRANCH FORMALLY OPENED

Mayor Miller Makes Opening Address at Ceremony for Store Which Eclipses Others of Kind in Suburban Field.

Formal opening of the new branch store of B. Nugent & Bros. Dry Goods Co., comprising the entire Wellston Loop Building, a modern five-story structure just completed at the northwest corner of Easton and Hodiamont avenues in Wellston, took place yesterday with fitting ceremonies. A host of business and professional men, including Mayor Miller, who made the opening address, lent their presence to the occasion, which was signalized by a record crowd.

The new Nugents store, which is on a scale eclipsing anything of its kind in the suburban field, was referred to as an enterprise that promised to be an important factor in the growth of Wellston, which would be reflected in renewed real estate activity, with a corresponding increase in the values of both improved and unimproved properties, especially in its business center.

The B. Nugent & Bros. Dry Goods Co., of which Sidney Salomon is president, several months ago acquired a 25-year lease of the building from N. Pelligreen, president of the Pelligreen Construction Co., closing negotiations from the plans before the building was completed. While not disclosed, the rental imposed, it is understood, established a new record for the Wellston business center, where prevailing prices of property now approach those of downtown St. Louis, in many instances.

Designed as Retail Emporium.

The new building is in the Wellston loop, with a frontage of 45 feet on Easton and 212 feet on Hodiamont. It is especially designed for a retail emporium, with approximately 60,000 square feet of available floor space. The foundation and the superstructure of the building apparently contemplate the erection ultimately of additional stories to provide for expansion. It is regarded as one of the most attractively situated buildings in the business center of Wellston, which now serves a population of more than 200,000, in addition to a transient trade which has been a factor in the growth of this district.

The new department store is on a comprehensive scale, with all merchandise available at the lowest prices prevailing at the concern's main downtown store at Broadway and Washington avenue, one of the oldest department stores in the city.

In the basement will be found complete lines of housewares, gas ranges, washing machines, electrical refrigerators, stoves, heaters, china, electrical goods, birds, toys, etc., with a stairway leading off of Hodiamont and with elevators running from the main floor.

First Floor Features.

On the first floor the windows facing Easton avenue give an aisle and arcade effect. There are six windows in the front with others distributed along the Hodiamont avenue side of the building. On the first floor a pretentious soda fountain and restaurant has been installed. There is a complete men's shop where men's furnishings, shoes, hats and caps will be sold. A rest room for men has been provided on this floor. The front of the main floor will be utilized for small accessories, such as gloves, hosiery, etc.

The second floor has been laid out with an unusual setting for the sale of ready-to-wear, sports wear, millinery and an elaborate shoe department, children' and junior's wear, boys' and infants' department. A conveniently located rest room for women is provided on this floor. The third floor is given over to house rugs, linoleum, draperies, linens, domestics, wash goods, silks, curtains and art-needlework.

A large part of the fourth floor is used for furniture. An individual radio section, a complete lamp department and section for mirrors and pictures and general rooms for warehouse and packing and offices are also housed on this floor.

The new Wellston store is under the management of M. J. Greenberg, who was formerly manager of Nugent's branch store at the southwest corner of Olive street and Vandeventer avenue, which has been a notable success. Ninety per cent of the employes of the new store have been recruited from the main store at Broadway and Washington avenue.

Invitation List at Opening.

The B. Nugent & Bros. Dry Goods Co. is owned and operated by National Department Stores, Inc., capitalized at $50,000,000 and which operates department stores on a large scale in all the large cities. The concern recently opened large branch stores in Philadelphia and Cleveland.

Invitations to the opening of the Wellston store were issued to Mayor Miller, Walter Neun, president of the Board of Aldermen; Chief of Police Gerk, Arthur A. Blumeyer, president Board of Education; Harold M. Bixby, vice president State National Bank; W. B. Weisenburger, president Chamber of Commerce; K. F. Neimoeller, manager Associate Retailers; Chief Alt of the Fire Department; Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks, Ben L. Brittmann, president of new Arena; Homer Johnson, president Wellston Chamber of Commerce; L. J. Becker, Collector of Internal Revenue; E. A. Steininger, Director of Public Safety; Fred Pape, Park Commissioner; Don W. Jones, vice president Mississippi Valley Trust Co.; W. L. Hemingway, vice president Mercantile-Commerce Bank; Julius W. Reinhoidt, chairman of the board, Boatmen's Bank; John B. Ghio, vice president, Bank of Wellston; Oliver Biase, secretary Union & Easton Trust Co.; Guy E. Jorden, State Bank of Wellston; Joseph Pulitzer, editor of the Post-Dispatch; George M. Burbach, advertising manager of the Post-Dispatch.

Douglas Houser and Clifford Day of the St. Louis Globe Democrat, Elze Roberts and T. L. Ryan of the St. Louis Star, and G. A. Buder and Carl Gogel of the St. Louis Times.

FRANKLIN-COMPTON CORNER BUILDING SOLD

Five-Story Structure Owned by Prill Estate Sold to Rose Floun.

The northeast corner of Franklin and Compton avenues, obtained by the Prill estate has been purchased by Rose Floun. It is occupied by a building consisting of five stores, doctors' offices and tenement flats. The property has a front of 89 feet on Compton and approximately 20 feet on Franklin avenue, extending to the alley.

This property has always been an ideal renting property and is regarded as having a good speculative value.

The Prill estate was represented by the Mercantile Commerce Bank and Trust Co. and the Sionim Realty Co. represented the purchaser.

LEASES 3960 DUNCAN AVENUE FOR OFFICE AND WAREHOUSE

The R. A. Dubuque Supply Co. wholesale dealers in plumbing and heating supplies, electric refrigeration and oil burner equipment, has taken a 20-year lease on a building at 3960 Duncan avenue, which the company will occupy as a general office and warehouse. The firm will discontinue the Chouteau avenue warehouse, but will continue operation of its store at 3930 Enright. The transaction was handled by the First National Co.

The First National Co. also leased to the Maclean Motor Car Co. a building at 5143 Delmar, as a sales and service station. The concern was formerly located at 5615 Pershing avenue. The owner of the property was represented by Harry Newman.

August and Eugene L. Kohrmann have purchased the two-story brick building on the north side of Barry street between Eighth and Ninth streets, from the American Manufacturing Co., which will occupy it. All parties in this transaction were represented by the First National Co.

The southwest corner of Fourth and Clark avenue has been leased to A. L. Browne for E. K. Ludington, owner of the property, over a period of years for a gasoline and automobile storage depot.

$2,000,000,000 BUILDING PROGRAM

Predicted for Next Six Months by President of S. W. Straus & Co.

A building program closely approximating $2,000,000,000 may be counted on during the next six months as the building industry's contribution to continued American prosperity, Nicholas Roberts, president of S. W. Straus & Co., stated yesterday.

"This program is exclusive of major engineering projects," Roberts explained. "It does not include street and highway construction, bridges and similar projects. It pertains only to private and public buildings for which building permits must be secured.

"Official reports made by S. W. Straus & Co. of building permits issued from the 600 principal cities and towns of the country where the bulk of building exists show that building operations for the six months period from Dec. 1 to May 31 has not greatly varied during the past four years. For example, from Dec. 1, 1925, to May 31, 1926, the total was $2,176,062,750. During the same period of the following year the total was $2,004,012,088. For the winter and spring season of 1927-1928 permits amounted to $1,954,259,908 and for the half yearly period beginning Dec. 1, 1928, and ending May 31, 1929, the total was $1,996,161,317.

"During the latter months of this year there has been a rather pronounced slowing down in building activities and it is quite possible that for a few months more this downward movement will continue. There are, however, three major factors which before a great while should materially change conditions for the better. They are:

First, the period of easy money into which we have now definitely entered; second, the vigorous efforts undertaken by President Hoover and the united business interests of the country to stimulate activities along every possible line, and, third, the increased demand which has been created in most types of buildings through the slackened activities of recent months.

"We believe, therefore, that the ensuing six months period, beginning Dec. 1, should, on a conservative estimate, offer nearly as much potential public and private building as we have had during the similar period of the year just ending when the volume was but slightly less than $2,000,000,000."

BANKRUPT REAL ESTATE DEALER FILES NEW PROPERTY SCHEDULE

Was Filed Because Referee Cole Questioned Original One.

Alexander H. Major, bankrupt real estate dealer of Webster Groves, filed an amended schedule of personal property in Federal Court yesterday in connection with his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, filed in August, which listed liabilities of $47,176.41 and assets consisting of real estate equities which he valued at $276,000.

The original petition stated he had no personal property. The amended schedule listed the furnishings of his 46-family apartment building at 106-8 West Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves, valued at $10,000 and mortgaged for $15,600, and the contents of the Gem Theater Building, 14 South Sixth street, valued at $5000. The amended schedule was filed because Referee in Bankruptcy Coles questioned the previous schedule.

SAYS PURITANISM RULES U. S.

Dr. Raymond Turner Doubts That It Can Last.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 23.—Declaring that Puritanism dominated the United States, Dr. Raymond Turner, professor of European history in Johns Hopkins University, in a talk to the Ark and Dove Society here last night predicted it would be replaced.

Dr. Turner said Puritanism never had prevailed for any length of time in history. He defined it as a type of mind that had been apparent in various periods of history among those who lived an ascetic life and withdrew from pleasures of the world, and who, too frequently endeavored to force others to observe the same attitude toward life. It was very largely the descendants of Puritans, according to Dr. Turner, who won the Civil War. "Now see what they have done," he said, and he spoke of how the prohibition law had been enacted, although for centuries persons had seen no harm in drinking.

50 HOMES WITHOUT WATER

A water main burst near Fourteenth street and Lafayette avenue last night left 50 homes in the vicinity without water, and resulted in flooding of Fourteenth street, while workmen dug a long trench in search of the leak.

The street was flooded from a fire plug that was turned on to relieve pressure on the main after the leak was discovered.

$3,900,000 OF BONDS TO BE ISSUED ON PARK-PLAZA HOTEL

Will Be Offered Next Week; 28-Story Structure, Now Building, to Cost $6,000,000.

An issue of $3,900,000 in first mortgage bonds secured by the Park-Plaza Hotel under construction at Kingshighway and Maryland avenue will be offered to the public next week by Greenebaum & Sons Investment Co., it was announced yesterday. The hotel, to cost about $6,000,000, is being built by the Koplar Bros. Construction Co.

The Park-Plaza, which will be ready for occupancy in the summer of next year, will be 28 stories high, with two basements. There will be a 375-car garage adjoining for the use of the tenants. The plans provide for 340 furnished and unfurnished apartments and studio apartments with 750 rooms. The premises will be rented as an apartment hotel, with accommodations for transient guests.

In addition to owning all of the common stock of the Park-Plaza Co., the Koplar Co., of which Sam Koplar is president, also owns valuable equities in the Congress, Senate and Embassy, three of the finest apartment hotels in St. Louis, all of which have established an excellent record of occupancy and earnings since completion.

The board of directors of the Koplar Co., in addition to Koplar, includes some of the most prominent men of St. Louis, identified with a variety of important and successful business enterprises. Among these are W. Frank Carter of the law firm of Carter, Jones & Turney; Thomas H. Dysart, partner in the investment banking firm of Knight, Dysart & Gamble; James L. Ford, president of the Franklin-American Trust Co.; Nat Koplar, capitalist; Fred H. Kreismann, insurance broker; Mark C. Steinberg and Paul E. Peltason, the latter two being of the investment banking firm, of Mark C. Steinberg & Co.

LAMBERT-TIGGES
SELLS GOOD USED CARS

High-grade used cars today bear little resemblance to the used cars of yesterday. Roads are better, garages are better, automobiles are better and owners take care of them better. Incidentally we KNOW better than to try and build good-will with bad goods.

A FEW OF THIS WEEK'S BARGAINS

Chandler 1925 Sedan, $135.
Buick 1926 4-Pass. Coupe, $295.
Oakland 1928 Coupe, $545.

Oldsmobile 1928 Sedan, $695.
Oldsmobile Coach, 1928, $765.
Chevrolet Cabriolet, 1927, $295.
Fordson "50" 1927 Sedan.

Others received in trade daily. We maintain a Service Department for the used cars we sell just as automobile firms maintain Service Departments for the new cars they sell. Low down payments, monthly terms; trades.

Why Charlie Chaplin wants to play Napoleon

The World-Famous Old-Shoes-and-Pantaloon Comedian Has a Yearning to Portray a World Conquéror Who Had His Troubles at Home.

By A. L. WOOLDRIDGE

Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LOS ANGELES.

THE scene was finished, and his work ended. Charlie Chaplin sat in his studio bungalow the other day with a few associates. He had been playing a tramp, hunted and haunted through a big city by overbearing individuals and the police. The picture will be a typical Chaplin opus, and when it is finished it will cause millions to laugh. Now, with the baggy trousers put away and the derby hat hung up, Mr. Chaplin was taking his ease.

"There are two characters I would like most to play," he remarked. "And they are Christ and Napoleon."

His listeners were amazed. Charlie Chaplin, the greatest living comic, the man who climbed to fame and fortune on the laughter of mankind, wanting to portray the story of the Savior and the story of the little Corsican who sought to conquer the world. These stories would furnish no opportunity for him, would give him no chance for humor. They most certainly would not be the roles for a clown. He must be fooling, or edging toward some joke. But Chaplin went on:

"I mean it. I would like to play them both. And I believe my ideas would give the world a new conception of these two great men.

"TAKE the case of Napoleon: I would not portray him as the mighty General, but as an undersized, gloomy, silent, almost morose individual, who is always in trouble with members of his family. Heavens! there is humor throughout all his life! His efforts to marry off his brothers and sisters and step-children, and keep on good terms with his mother and his wife, and fight a few wars in the meantime, provide a wealth of material for a play. I would not burlesque him, you understand, but I'd re-enact all the messes he got into and his efforts to extricate himself and keep peace in the family.

"I'd show him on the way to Italy to be crowned King—show his march to the throne, with Josephine puttering along. Napoleon was more or less pompous, you know. He liked a bit of display. As for drama and pathos, the story would be replete with both.

"Take, for example, his break with Josephine. First, we have the Emperor calling her to him and telling her that she must go—she, the Josephine who had aided him and stood beside him and believed in him and helped him. Then I'd show her in the palace the last night, counting off the hours, the minutes—taking a last look at things in the place which had been her home. And when the time for departure came, I'd show her throwing her cloak about her and going slowly out into the night to step silently into the brougham and be driven away. In another scene I'd show her listening as the booming of the guns announced the birth of Napoleon's child, counting the shots, 20 if it be a girl, 21 if it be a boy. Pathos? It's unsurpassed.

"As for the drama, it would be limitless. Take the return of Napoleon from banishment on the lonely isle of Elba, his gathering of an army, his march to Paris. I'd show the old guardsmen flocking to his side, the flag-waving, the brilliant ovations, the military reawakening. I'd show for example, a veteran with a peg leg, an arm gone, blind in one eye, hobbling ahead to shout the warning: 'Napoleon is coming! Napoleon is back! Napoleon is moving on Paris! Stop him! Kill him before he once more drenches your sons in blood!'

"Then I'd have that growing army march into view with the little Corsican at its head, the band playing the 'Marseillaise,' and, on coming abreast of the, maimed and battle-scarred veteran, Napoleon saluting. Next I'd picture the old guardsman caught by the Emperor's spell, throwing his hat into the air and, while tears of joy went coursing down his cheeks, hobbling into line and pegging away with the column toward Paris. There is no end of dramatic situations which might be used in the picture. I've thought about it many, many times; even made notes of the things I would use. I may make the film some time. I don't know."

His eyes shone as he painted his word picture and pantomimed the characters of the play which he would like to—and some day may—produce. He is enthused with its possibilities.

"And what of the picture portraying Christ?" someone asked. Chaplin waited a moment before replying. He appeared to be searching for words which would best express his ideas. He has studied the Bible closely and read volume after volume concerning it. He is conversant with all creeds.

"The world, in my opinion, has a wrong conception of the strongest, most dynamic, powerful character who has ever lived," he said. "Christ was human. He was real. He was strength personified in flesh. And yet from the oldest paintings and drawings in Christian history down to the present day He is pictured as a long-haired man wearing a white tunic, speaking in a sepulchral voice and looking exceptionally weary and depressed. We are led to believe that He had a demeanor more melancholy than that of Shakspeare's Hamlet. Frankly, I don't believe it. Christ was a powerful, strong-minded being, Who ate good food, drank good wine and enjoyed the companionship of His fellows. He had a personality never equaled in all history. Why envision Him as an awesome, depressing, threatening figure, Who moved ghostlike among the people, inculcating fear in their hearts? That isn't the Christ as I see Him. I had rather look upon Him as a splendid, virile, red-blooded man to whom one would instinctively turn when in trouble and expect Him to wade in and make evildoers toe the mark, and do it hard and fast. I want Him to be natural, One whose appearance among people would bring joy. One whose command would be, when He was with a gathering, to eat, drink and be merry. In other words, be a splendid, living, breathing, kindly man, with power to dominate everyone and everything, under every circumstance.

"I'm not saying this disrespectfully, you understand. I intend it only to show that I believe Christ was a man Who lived and got pleasure in living with His fellows.

"I do not believe that Pontius Pilate ever intended to slay Christ when he haled Him before him. Pilate heard the charge and asked:

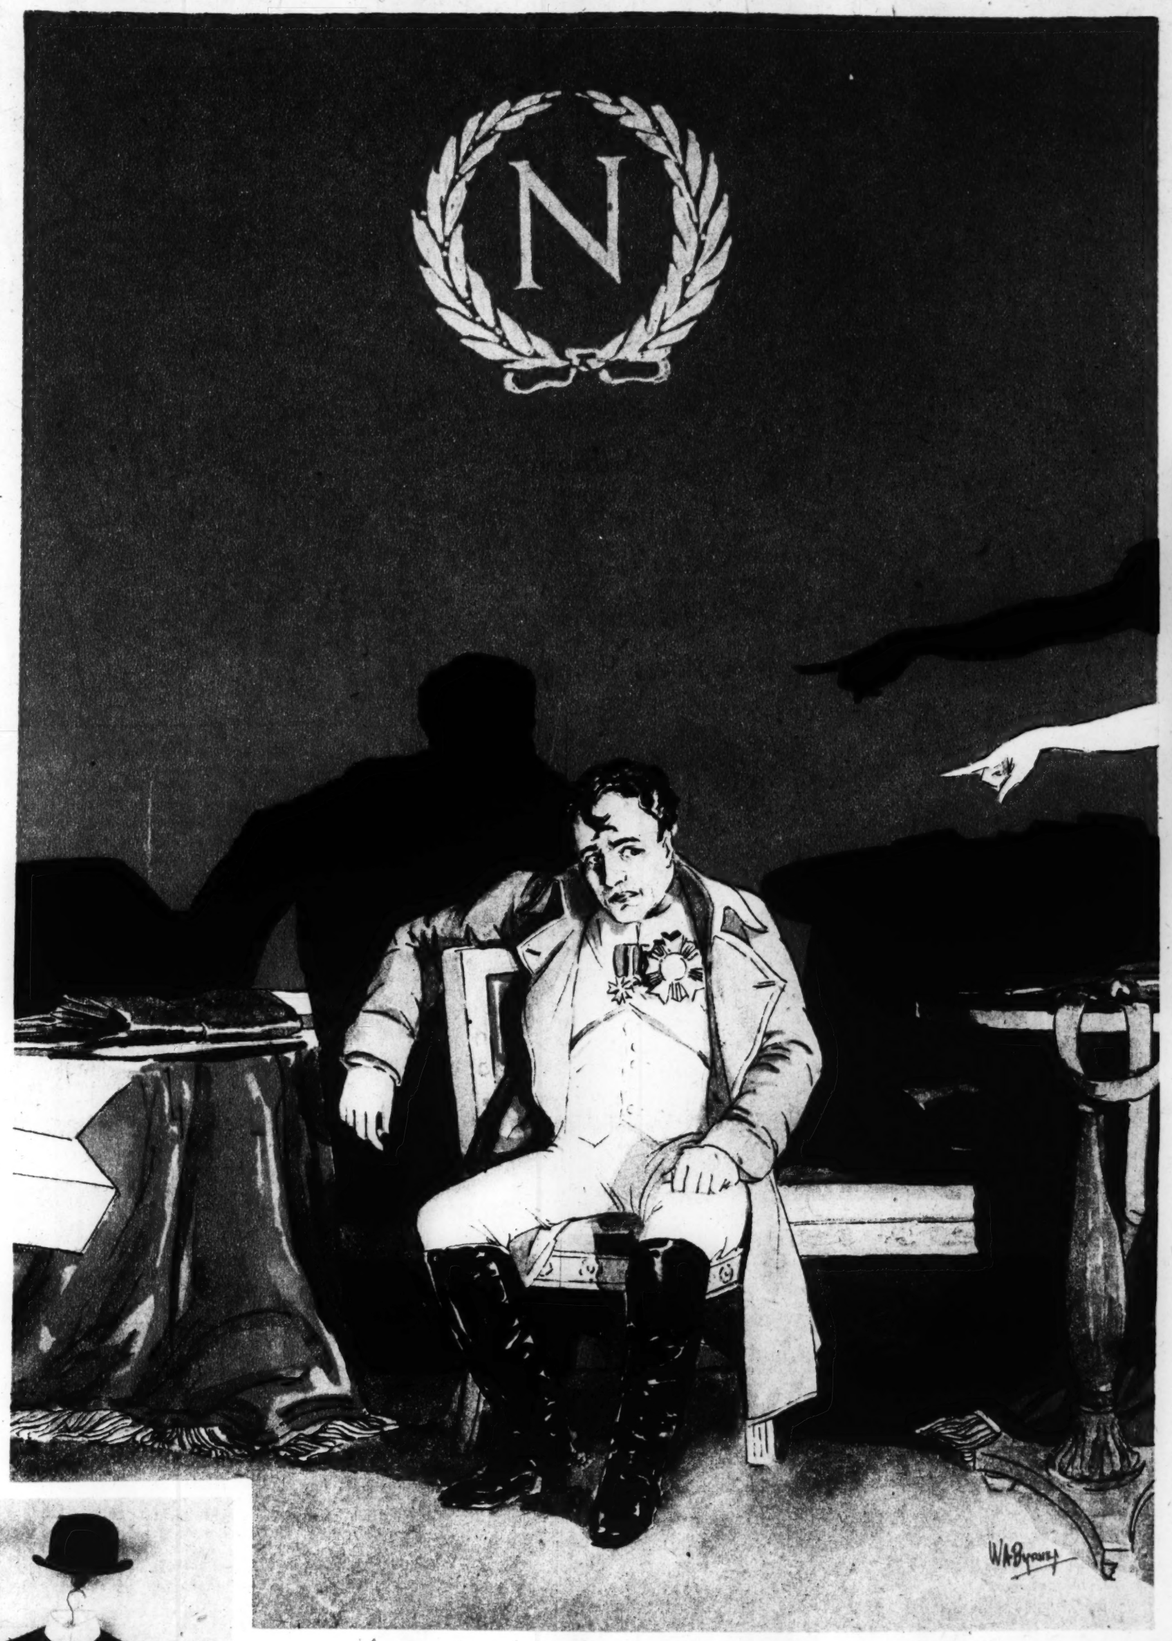
"'What shall we do with this man?'

"And then some fool back in the crowd cried: 'Crucify Him.' Someone repeated it and the assemblage took up the cry. Mob psychology ruled, and Christ, for no particular reason, was sacrificed.

"IF I were to put the story of Christ into the films, I would make Him the strongest, most outstanding personality possible; a great man Who won the affection of people by His strength and broadness. I would have Him welcomed with cries of delight by men and women and children. They would press forward to be near and to feel His magnetism. There would be no long face, no sepulchral voice about Him. Nor would there be anything to put fear in the hearts of His followers. On the other hand, He would be made to appear the most kindly, most lovable, most upstanding and strongest individual the mind could conceive.

"I don't suppose I will ever put this story on the screen. It would likely bring forth a storm of criticism. Yet it would be of untold worth to the cause of religion in teaching that Christ was One to be loved, that He was human and real and beautiful in character. I once saw Christ portrayed in a picture. I do not want to see it again. It was too unreal."

Charlie Chaplin probably will never make his film of the New Testament. Nor satisfy an old ambition to play Hamlet. But, some day, he really may make the story of Napoleon.



"I would not portray Napoleon as the mighty General, but as an undersized, gloomy, silent, almost morose individual, who is always in trouble with members of his family."

"NO MOUSTACHE, DOG NOR WIFE—"

But Cadet Capron Had Already Looked Upon the Lovely Daughter of the Ordnance Instructor so That Was the End of His Career at West Point.

Mrs. Paul Capron.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Capron on their honeymoon at West Newbury, Mass.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

WEST NEWBURY, Massachusetts.

WHEN Paul Capron Jr., youthful West Point cadet and member of one of Massachusetts's most prominent families, wooed a Colonel's daughter, then, defying the traditional academy ruling that a cadet "shall not have a horse, dog, wife or moustache," eloped with her, he not only created a sensation in military circles, but also brought about a situation calling for immediate and vigorous action.

Young Mr. Capron must get a job, and get it in a hurry, too.

And Mrs. Marguerite Gillespie Capron, pretty 19-year-old bride of the one-time West Pointer and daughter of Colonel Alexander G. Gillespie, instructor in ordnance and gunnery at the U. S. Military Academy, is also in search of employment.

That's not the chatter of the gossips of this little New England village, where the Caprons are now honeymooning, but the announcement of the fragile, blonde girl, product of boarding schools and the drawing rooms of military society, whose romance, with its sensational denouement, may bring about a tightening up of the social rules and regulations at West Point.

The romance, called a "miracle romance" by fellow cadets at West Point, who are unable to discover how young Capron could have carried on his wooing of the Colonel's daughter in the face of the strict discipline at the military academy, has set this neighborhood all a-thrill.

THE wedding, also full of thrills, was staged almost under the eyes of the Colonel, it was revealed—or, rather, the elopement was enacted nearly in front of him. It took place just a few weeks ago when the West Point cadets went to New Haven, Connecticut, to meet Yale on the gridiron.

Capron was one of the rigid young men in gray who marched into New Haven and into the great Yale bowl, amid the thundering cheers of a mighty crowd of football enthusiasts. Miss Gillespie arrived in New Haven with her father, Colonel Gillespie.

Capron, while his classmates were cheering the West Point team, even in its defeat, had slipped away from the bowl on some plausible excuse. Miss Gillespie did not go to the game, complaining that she had a headache and would remain at the Hotel Taft.

These arrangements were made according to previous plans, and carried out with wonderful precision by the youthful and romantic plotters. Once away from observant eyes, the West Point cadet and the Colonel's daughter scurried around New Haven, seeking to find a marrying parson. But they ran up against a legal snag, for the laws of Connecticut ordain that five days must elapse between the issuance of a marriage license and the performance of the ceremony.

Young Capron and the girl refused to surrender. He hired an automobile. At the very time that his teammates were battling in the bowl and Colonel Gillespie was looking on, watching the West Point team go down to defeat, Capron and Marguerite Gillespie were speeding over the road to Brewster, New York. Brewster is 50 miles from New Haven.

In Brewster they found a willing Justice of the Peace, who agreed to marry them. The ceremony over, Cadet Capron with his pretty bride raced back to New Haven. They were back there at the big bowl almost before the last cheer had died away.

The Colonel's daughter found her way to her father's side. Cadet Capron, suppressing the romance that was overflowing within him, made his way back to his fellow cadets. When they left their seats and marched again through New Haven, to entrain for West Point, he was with them—marching rigidly, eyes front, his arms swinging in perfect rhythm.

The same night, Marguerite Gillespie returned to West Point with her father. The elopement was to be kept a secret. It was—for a few days. But the bride just had to tell someone, and she whispered the news to her mother, then a little later she unfolded the details of the romance to her father.

The stern discipline of West Point left Colonel Gillespie no alternative—he had to report the facts to the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy, which he did without delay.

Colonel Gillespie was forgiving. Cadet Capron was called before him. The Colonel gave both his daughter and her new husband his blessings.

But, blessings or no blessings, there was no way of getting away from that strictest of rulings:

". . . and no cadet shall have a horse, dog, wife or moustache."

So Capron was reported to the authorities and allowed to resign; just a nice way of saying he was fired out of the famous institution for infraction of West Point rules against "love and wives."

It was in the midst of pots and pans and supper for two, in the kitchen of the ancient homestead of the Caprons, that the writer found Mrs. Capron, while the youthful husband was in the old dining room trying his best to get a fire started in the huge fireplace. Between kitchen and dining room the newlyweds were carrying on a spirited conversation, one with the other, while the writer was on the sidelines getting an answer now from the wife, now from the husband.

After Paul got his supper, which, by the way, consisted of fried steak with frizzled onions, German-fried potatoes, cole slaw salad, baked beans, coffee and squash pie, Mrs. Capron, the Colonel's daughter, sat down and had a long pow-wow about her romance, her plans, her husband and her own sweet self.

She said:

"PAUL has got to go to work. We are facing the facts. We are facing life together. We have to get work. And if he must work, I see no reason why I should not go out and get a job, too.

"Neither of us has any special talents. Neither of us has any experience of a practical sort. He wants to be a newspaper reporter, and I want to write, too, so I want to work—if it's possible—where he does.

"Of course, we don't expect to have anything handed to us. We know we'll have to try hard. And it may be I'll have to change my plans, and do secretarial work. And if that's what happens, then I'm ready and anxious to try whatever offers."

The slim, blonde girl, whose manicured hands look hardly fit for any but the daintiest tasks, smiled at her husband.

"You see," she declared quite frankly and sincerely, "we must make our own way, now that we've decided to go ahead together. There's no one in back of us. It's our own affair. And we've got to eat.

"And there's no eating now-a-days unless one has a job."

Her girlish laughter filled the room at this economic sally.

"I'm not much of a housewife. But I cooked his breakfast, and I've just gotton through with his supper. I'm like ever so much to write, especially if Paul does. But I can type, anyway, so I can probably get some other kind of a job, if there isn't any chance for writing.

"You see," the young wife explained earnestly, "I've made up my mind to be a working partner in this new firm."

The young husband and wife were also extremely anxious to make it plain, in the course of their chatty interview, that the head of the household was not fired from West Point but rather resigned.

"We're awfully anxious to have that straightened out," the bride said. "Paul wasn't discharged. That would be a great disgrace in our military circles. He resigned."

The husband volunteered details.

"The upshot of the matter is that about three weeks ago we decided to get married. The West Point rules forbid marriage. Getting married constitutes an automatic resignation. So when I got married, I simply told my father-in-law, and he notified the Superintendent of the Academy.

"We were both sorry, because of my army career. But we just fell in love, that's all, and we didn't want to wait a year and a half until graduation."

"PAUL, you tell the reporter how it started, you know, our love affair," suggested Mrs. Capron, but the young husband demurred, as a result of which the bride volunteered the following bit of information:

"We met at a cadet 'hop' last Fourth of July, and we fell in love right away. We didn't decide right away to get married. But a few weeks ago we started to make plans."

"If there hadn't been company with father and mother, I'd have told them about our marriage at once, but I didn't feel like blurting out the news before everybody, so that's why I delayed telling them. But they were awfully nice. They said they were glad it was Paul."

Professor Paul Capron, civilian instructor in English at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, is not at all upset that his son's career at West Point has been cut short by Cupid. He declared that a charming bride was far more desirable than a general's stars.

Professor Capron declared:

"I'm not at all angry over the turn in affairs. I should say not. Marriage, I suppose, is due to come some time or other in the average young man's life. Paul is lucky. He married a wonderful girl."

On their arrival in West Newbury, Mrs. Capron Sr. was on hand to greet them before she went on to Annapolis to join her husband. Paul's mother left the young couple her sedan, so they could motor into Boston, where the young husband expects to go to work.

not so good yet, but I'm getting expert advice"—she glanced smilingly at her husband, who grinned blushingly in return—"and I guess our first meals were all right, weren't they?"

The one-time West Point cadet was quick to reply, with enthusiasm:

"They sure were. You bet!"

"You see," said Mrs. Capron, "we won't have much housework, so there's no reason why I shouldn't work. I'd

ATLANTA, Georgia.

WD MANLEY, the Atlanta banker, whose legal troubles started when a string of 86 banks in Georgia and in Florida closed their doors, is at last behind the bars of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, because a Department of Justice agent was as adept as the banker himself at playing the role of nervous invalid.

The Bankers' Trust Company, of which Mr. Manley was president, collapsed three years ago, and the wholesale failure of a chain of small banks connected with the company followed immediately afterward. The depositors who had placed their money for safekeeping in these banks were for the most part small wage-earners, and the loss of their savings left many of them in desperate circumstances. Seldom has a bank failure caused more actual suffering, or aroused greater public indignation. The demand was insistent that any officials responsible for the financial disaster be brought immediately to trial.

Mr. Manley and four other officers of the Bankers' Trust Company were at once indicted for using the mails to defraud in connection with the failure of the company. The other four were tried and convicted. Two are now in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, one is dead, and one is at liberty on parole, having served more than one-third of his five-year sentence. But while the others were standing trial and serving prison sentences, Manley continued to enjoy freedom.

It is true that he was convicted in the State courts on the charge of fraudulent insolvency and sentenced to nine to ten years' imprisonment, but this sentence was set aside when the law under which Manley was convicted was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court. What is more, Manley seemed to have little difficulty in remaining at liberty during the year which elapsed between his trial on the insolvency charge and the ruling by the Supreme Court.

SEEMINGLY the only chance of placing him behind the bars was through conviction in the Federal courts. But getting his case for trial and getting Manley into court were two different things. Repeatedly during the last three years the Manley case has appeared on the docket of the United States Court for the Northern District of Georgia, but each time the banker has escaped trial through the same plea—ill-health.

Except for visits to Allen's Sanitarium at Milledgeville, Georgia, where he remained for weeks at a time as a patient, he continued to live in his French chateau on Pace's Ferry road, the most exclusive residence section in Atlanta. The prosecution insisted that these visits to the Milledgeville sanitarium coincided with efforts to bring Manley before a jury. In fact, Clint W. WD. MANLEY, the Atlanta banker, whose legal troubles started when a string of 86 banks in Georgia and in Florida closed their doors, is at last behind the bars of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, because a Department of Justice agent was as adept as the banker himself at playing the role of nervous invalid.

The Bankers' Trust Company, of which Mr. Manley was president, collapsed three years ago, and the wholesale failure of a chain of small banks connected with the company followed immediately afterward. The depositors who had placed their money for safekeeping in these banks were for the most part small wage-earners, and the loss of their savings left many of them in desperate circumstances. The other four were tried and convicted. Two are now in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, one is dead, and one is at liberty on parole, having served more than one-third of his five-year sentence. But while the others were standing trial and serving prison sentences, Manley continued to enjoy freedom.

It is true that he was convicted in the State courts on the charge of fraudulent insolvency and sentenced to nine to ten years' imprisonment, but this sentence was set aside when the law under which Manley was convicted was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme Court. What is more, Manley seemed to have little difficulty in remaining at liberty during the year which elapsed between his trial on the insolvency charge and the ruling by the Supreme Court.

SEEMINGLY the only chance of placing him behind the bars was through conviction in the Federal courts. But setting his case for trial and getting Manley into court were two different things. Repeatedly during the last three years the Manley case has appeared on the docket of the United States Court for the Northern District of Georgia, but each time the banker has escaped trial through the same plea—ill-health.

Except for visits to Allen's Sanitarium at Milledgeville, Georgia, where he remained for weeks at a time as a patient, he continued to live in his French chateau on Pace's Ferry road, the most exclusive residence section in Atlanta. The prosecution insisted that these visits to the Milledgeville sanitarium coincided with efforts to bring Manley before a jury. In fact, Clint W. Hager, United States District Attorney, declared at the recent hearing which resulted in Manley's conviction that the banker "lit out for Milledgeville like a martin to its gourd every time a trial threatened."

Finally, things reached a point where the Federal grand jury conducted an investigation to determine whether there was a conspiracy to prevent Manley from being brought before a jury, and this investigation revealed the fact that the Department of Justice had been far from idle. In fact, the department had succeeded in "planting" one of its agents, Charles Vail, in Allen's Sanitarium as a patient, and it was largely through this agent's testimony that Manley's affairs finally were brought to a climax.

Vail first appeared before the grand jury and, partly as a result of his statement there, Dr. H. Dawson Allen, of Allen's Sanitarium, was indicted for perjury on the ground that he had testified falsely as to Manley's physical condition.

FOLLOWING the disclosures before the grand jury, Manley was ordered to appear in United States District Court, and was borne into the courtroom on a stretcher. His attorneys entered a plea of insanity on his behalf, and then followed the dramatic testimony of the secret-service agent, who had been a fellow patient of Manley's at the Allen Sanitarium.

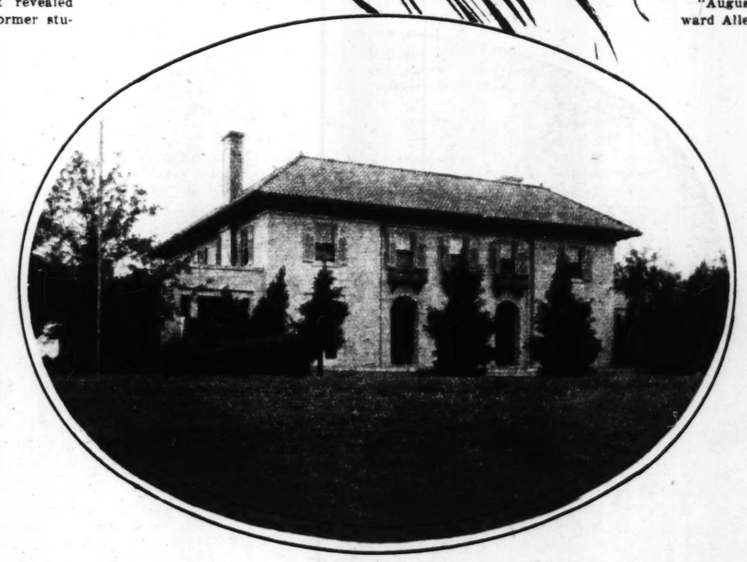
A preliminary statement revealed the fact that Vail was a former student at the University of Virginia and one of the most valued secret-service men employed by the Department of Justice. He entered the sanitarium in the guise of Charles Seymour, "a tired business man from Tennessee," and was placed in a room directly across the hall from Manley. This arrangement was not due to chance, but to the fact that his "nephew" and "niece," Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Brown, who in reality were secret-service employes, had preceded him to Milledgeville and had prepared for his reception at the sanitarium.

They had been particularly exacting about the location of his room, and had rejected each one shown them until finally they arrived at the apartment across from Manley's.

Dr. Allen, head of the sanitarium, declared on the witness stand that he never once suspected "Charles Seymour" of being anything but a nervous patient, and had diagnosed him as being in the "same category" as Manley, who, in the doctor's opinion, was suffering from "cerebral arterio sclerotic psychosis," or deterioration of the brain due to hardening of the arteries.

From the moment of his arrival at the sanitarium the secret-service agent began to "shadow" Manley, and day by day jotted down his observations in shorthand on the margins of a magazine, the only piece of paper in his room on which it was safe to write, because attendants made it a custom each day to remove all letters, note paper and similar articles.

With the magazine spread out on his knees, Vail read the following diary to the jury:



W. D. Manley's home near Atlanta.

"August 17—Arrived at the sanitarium in company of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Brown and given room on ground floor across the hall from Manley's, as prearranged. Put on pajamas and laid on bed. Manley, in pajamas in his room, playing his radio and phonograph. Supper taken to Manley on tray at 6 o'clock. Served on silver service. No other patients given silver service; only chinaware.

"August 20—Manley stayed in room. Did lots of figuring.

"August 23—Dr. Edward Allen's two little children in Manley's room. Playing 'Two Black Crows.' The record mentioned the word 'purgatory,' and one child asked what that is. Manley says 'Hell.'

"August 24—A maniac kept under lock and key got out of cell and started for Manley's room. Would have let him in but for fact that the children were in there. I called a guard and the maniac was locked up. Manley reads a while, later sings song, 'Roses of Yesterday.'

"August 25—Manley received a letter, read it while lying on his bed, then tore it up. He walked past my door and dropped letter in waste basket. I dropped a newspaper on top of torn letter and waited four hours for opportunity to rescue it. Gave letter to Agent Brown when my 'niece' called."

Leaving the diary for a moment, Vail said that he knew the letter was written by Mrs. Manley only after being told later by Department of Justice agents. In the course of his testimony the fact was also developed that he was able to keep in touch with department officials through visits from his "nephew" and "niece," and that at one time his "nephew" was accompanied by a child who had been brought to see "Uncle Charlie."

Resuming the diary, Vail read the following entries to the jury:

"August 26—Manley and little Edward Allen climbed up on a woodpile. Manley climbed to the top. They selected a piece of wood, went to Manley's room, where Manley made a model airplane for the child with the tools he kept in his room. Manley gave me an old chair, skillfully repaired, saying he had rebuilt it himself.

"August 27—Manley and his attorney, Harold Bailey, walked about a mile.

"August 29—Manley makes a 'lollapaloosa' for Edward Allen—a broomstick, with a wheel on the end, the rod and wheel connected by a driving rod similar to the wheels of a locomotive.

"September 4 — Manley has a fight with Herman Evans, one of the attendants. Evans paid off at once and fired."

In answer to questions from District Attorney Hager, Vail ceased at this point to read from the diary and described daily talks with Manley. He declared that the banker was clean-shaven and neat in appearance at all times, and that he had never seen him wearing a beard until Manley was borne into the United States District Court room on a stretcher.

Vail testified he and Manley, in their daily conversations, discussed everything, from current events to detective fiction and ancient history, and that the banker proved to be mentally alert and well informed. Manley, according to the secret-service man, talked interestingly of the crisis in China, of European travel, of Great Britain's Coldstream Guards, of notable events in English and French history, and of music that he liked. The banker's taste in music proved to be particularly good, and he showed a wide acquaintance with classical literature. In the matter of books, his interest seemed to be divided between the classics and detective fiction. He was also interested in historical subjects.

"At one time," said the secret-service agent, "we were discussing Napoleon Bonaparte, and I expressed the opinion that Napoleon's desertion of Josephine was just, because he wanted an heir. Manley's reply: 'Perhaps so, but it was hard on Josephine.'"

Following Vail's testimony three prominent Atlanta bankers were called to the witness stand, and in quick succession testified that they had never observed anything in Manley's speech, look or acts that would indicate he was mentally unsound. All three told of a gathering of Atlanta financiers on the eve of the failure of the Manley chain of banks, and of proposals made by Manley to prevent the bank crash. The three were: H. Lane Young, vice president of the Citizens and Southern National Bank; John K. Ottley, president of the Fourth National Bank, and Robert F. Maddox, chairman of the board of the Atlanta and Lowry National Bank.

IN THE course of the four-day sanity hearing the fact was developed that Manley had gone on a hunger strike when he was ordered to appear in court, and had successfully resisted efforts of doctors to give him nourishment through intravenous injections.

"Get a court order and let me read it," he was quoted as saying, "and then we'll see about taking nourishment."

Dr. H. D. Allen, of Allen's Sanitarium, was one of the chief witnesses for the defense. He declared that Manley was suffering from cerebral arterio schlerotic psychosis, and in this condition was not mentally fit to give testimony in his own behalf or to confer with his lawyers regarding his defense. He declared that Manley showed an interest in aeronautics and talked of going to California this winter to take up aviation.

At this point District Attorney Hager asked a series of questions which pointed to the belief by the prosecution that Manley had planned to escape to South America by airplane.

"Isn't it a fact," asked the District Attorney, "that Manley told you he was studying Spanish and was going to California because he planned to leave for Columbia, in South America, to avoid prosecution on the mail-fraud charge?"

"I don't remember that he did," replied Dr. Allen.

"Didn't he plan to leave your institution about November 15 and go to South America?"

"I don't remember that he told me that," insisted the witness.

At the conclusion of testimony, District Attorney Hager, in his statement to the jury, said: "There is only one issue to decide, as I see it—whether the laws of the United States were written to include W. D. Manley, who laughs at those he drove to financial ruin and scorns those he drove to suicide. This case, from beginning to end, has been characterized by insincerity on the part of the defense. And Wife No. 3 Who Divorced Her Former Husband to Marry Hendrik Van Loon Is Now Suing Again for Her Freedom.

Two photographs of Hendrik Willem Van Loon, the celebrated historical writer.

Mrs. Frances Goodrich Van Loon —wife No. 3.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

IT IS costing Hendrik Willem Van Loon $10,000 in cash and no little amount of mental anguish to demonstrate that an author may write books that successfully simplify the major problems of human existence, and at the same time prove to be almost completely unable to avoid muddling his own personal affairs.

Van Loon, as everyone knows, is the author of a half-dozen historical books. His "The Story of Mankind" was a phenomenal success, and he has probably done more than any other writer of his generation to popularize the reading of history. A vast and solid knowledge, a frank, penetrating mind and a clear, unliterary style have enabled him to analyze and discuss the great events and problems of history so that they may be grasped in their simplest aspects.

But while Van Loon for the past 20 years has been simplifying the major problems of the human race, the problems of his private life were becoming so tangled and involved as to make the Gordian knot look simple by comparison. And if you don't think the situation in which the famous author now finds himself is a puzzling one, just listen to this brief statement of the case and judge for yourself: His is the case of a man who, divorced from his first and second wives, married his third wife after she had divorced her first husband, and then left his third wife in order to live with his second wife, for doing which his third wife is now suing him for divorce.

ONE must admit that this is a rather puzzling situation in which to find a man who has become distinguished for writing books designed to clarify the complexities of human existence.

Van Loon's first marriage was made with Miss Elizabeth Bowditch of Boston, whom Van Loon met when he was a student at Harvard in 1904. He left Harvard to complete his studies at Cornell, and upon obtaining his bachelor of arts degree there in June, 1906, promptly celebrated the event by changing Miss Bowditch's name to that of Mrs. Van Loon.

The Van Loons then went abroad and Van Loon served as correspondent for the Associated Press in Moscow and St. Petersburg during the revolution of 1906. Then Van Loon, who has always had a voracious appetite for higher education, enrolled at the University of Munich and emerged in 1911 as a doctor of philosophy. In the meantime, the marriage was blessed with two sons and, although Van Loon hadn't yet become a renowned writer, he was gradually winning recognition as a scholar, and at the same time was leading what appeared to be a perfectly happy family life.

After leaving Munich Van Loon and his family returned to the United States, where the historian lectured until the outbreak of the European war in 1914. He served as a war correspondent for the Associated Press in Belgium, and apparently was getting along beautifully until the German military authorities somehow took a violent dislike to the stories he was writing about them and as a Christmas present summarily ordered him out of Belgium. He continued to serve as a correspondent in Europe until 1918. Again he returned to the United States to lecture and to write.

Whether his European wanderings as a war correspondent had weakened the bonds of conjugal devotion, or whether there were other and unrevealed causes, the fact remains that soon after his return Van Loon and his wife became estranged, and in 1918 she divorced him.

ALTHOUGH Van Loon is a man's man, in the sense that he has healthy appetites, a robust sense of humor and a host of admiring male friends, the fact remains that he is apparently unsuited to the single state, notwithstanding the difficulty he seems to have maintaining any other. For Van Loon had hardly begun to taste the dubious blessings of bachelorhood before he again found himself escorting a lady to the altar. This time it was Miss Helen Criswell, a graduate of Bryn Mawr and a celebrity in New York's Greenwich Village, where she operated a very bohemian tea shop known as the Mad Hatter. Her nickname in the village, where she was well known and liked, was "Jimmie," a sobriquet whose origin was probably to be found in her predilection for masculine collars and ties. Jimmie married the rising young author in August, 1920, and thereby became what the unfeeling newspapers refer to as Mrs. Van Loon No. 2.

Van Loon's second marriage apparently provided an atmosphere congenial to his best literary endeavors, for in a short time he produced his most successful work. He had already written several volumes of history about his native Holland, but they faded into comparative insignificance with the publication of his "The Story of Mankind," which book was a tremendous hit. It went into 17 printings in less than 10 months, was widely syndicated, and has probably been the most widely sold of any history or historical work of this generation, not only in the United States, but in Europe as well. The book brought him fame, wealth and flattering offers from numerous publishers and magazines. Other books, such as "The Story of the Bible," "Tolerance" and "America" followed, each increasing his already great reputation.

THEN, in November, 1927, the New York newspapers revealed the fact that radical changes had taken place in the Garden of Eden occupied by Jimmie and Van Loon. For it seems that Hendrik Van Loon had met and become smitten with the charms of one Frances Goodrich. Miss Goodrich, as she was professionally known, was an actress who had appeared in numerous Broadway productions, not to mention an appearance in a court of law in 1923, where she had obtained a divorce from her actor-husband, Robert Ames. The spell which Miss Goodrich cast over the usually clear-minded Van Loon was a very potent one, potent enough to inspire Jimmie Van Loon to make a trip to Mexico in the summer of 1927, there to dissolve her union with the celebrated author.

And a short time afterwards, to be exact, on October 10, 1927, Van Loon and Miss Goodrich secretly crossed the Hudson River into New Jersey, where Van Loon's friend, the Rabbi Lewis Browne, now a well-known author himself, made them man and wife. Neither Van Loon nor Miss Goodrich is of the Jewish faith, and, as far as that is concerned, Lewis Browne is no longer a practicing rabbi, but Browne was selected to perform the ceremony because of his friendship for Van Loon. However that may be, it was under such circumstances that Miss Goodrich became what the unfeeling newspapers now refer to as Mrs. Van Loon No. 3.

But Van Loon's second divorce and third marriage became a matter of secondary interest to the public when it was learned that the newly-married couple were not living together and did not intend to. At first it was thought that the celebrated author was indulging in an interesting marital experiment, but the news hounds soon discovered they were on the wrong scent. It was true that Van Loon was to continue occupying his Greenwich Village apartment with his elder son and Mrs. Van Loon was to continue living in her apartment on East Fifty-seventh street, but, the newlyweds announced, this was not due to any desire to institute innovations.

Mrs. Jimmie Van Loon— wife No. 2.

"We each have leases on our apartments which our landlords will not allow us to break," said Van Loon. "And as neither apartment is large enough we will continue this way until our leases expire."

Mrs. Van Loon said the same thing. And the public soon forgot about the matter.

THEN, in February, 1928, Van Loon, unaccompanied by his wife, sailed for Europe. He had three books that he wanted to write and for which he must go abroad to do research. And since one of them was to be a biography of the famous Dutch painter, Rembrandt, what more natural than that he should next be heard of in Holland? But the reports that reached New York from Holland were of a nature not calculated to give Mrs. Van Loon perfect peace of mind. For it soon became noised about that Van Loon was indeed living and writing in Holland, but was doing both under the solicitous ministrations of Jimmie—Mrs. Van Loon No. 2.

And in a lengthy interview which Van Loon gave to a New York newspaper correspondent he made it rather plain that he preferred living and working with Jimmie in Holland to living in New York somewhere in the vicinity of Mrs. Van Loon No. 3.

"I had got myself tied up in knots," he said, "and I had to get myself straightened out. I believe that after any great emotional crisis you should go back to your native environment to work out your salvation. I don't mean salvation in the sense of orthodox religion, but in the sense of inner poise—being at home with yourself—having your ideas evaluated with clarity. This was the place to do it."

The emotional crisis to which Van Loon referred was not defined, but there are friends of his in New York who seem qualified to indicate its nature. In short, it seems that for some unknown reason Mrs. Van Loon No. 3 wished to continue their marriage in separate domiciles, contrary to Van Loon's desire in the matter. The disagreement became so acute that Van Loon forthwith went to Holland, where he again was joined by Jimmie, and there settled down to work in the picturesque little fishing town of Veere, in a domestic atmosphere similar to the one which enabled him to write his "The Story of Mankind."

AND now Mrs. Van Loon is bringing suit for divorce, and Van Loon's attorneys are not contesting the action. An agreement has been reached out of court whereby Mrs. Van Loon is to receive $10,000 alimony. And as both parties seem quite willing to dissolve the marriage there is no obstacle in the way and the decree will probably be granted by the time this story appears in print. In the meantime, Van Loon is completing his biography of Rembrandt, and expects to return with the completed manuscript to this country some time in February. The only question that remains to be answered is whether Mrs. Van Loon No. 2 will also return as Mrs. Van Loon No. 4.

Who Combines an Active Life in the Cloister With Leadership in the Field of Science

A GREAT many persons believe that when a man enters a Catholic religious order he sinks his talents in a cell and his soul in monasticism, spends his leisure time splitting metaphysical hairs with the members of his community and gives up his contacts with the world except for his activities in a classroom or in a foreign mission somewhere on the bottom of the globe, where the sport and aviation news do not count.

The experience of Alphonse M. Schwitalla, a blond, 18-year-old boy, who laid his suitcase on the front steps of a novitiate in 1900, runs discouragingly counter to this notion. For when he solemnly entered upon the four years of seclusion of the Jesuit novice at Florissant, Missouri, he unwittingly stepped onto the concealed platform of a fast train that has hurried him into more highways of modern life than he could possibly have seen if he had not traded his civilian clothes for a black cassock.

Today he is rated one of the foremost medical educators in the country. St. Louis University has recognized his ability by making him dean of its school of medicine, for many years a leading school of its type. The medical profession has named him to membership in its honor fraternity, Alpha Omega Alpha. He is the only priest thus honored. Johns Hopkins, where he took his doctor's degree in zoology, rates him among its distinguished alumni. It was here that he received his Phi Beta Kappa key.

In the army reserve he holds the rank of Major, a title ordinarily conferred upon Bishops and other high ecclesiastics. He is thus the ranking chaplain in the Seventh Corps area. For three successive years he has been elected president of the Missouri Social Hygiene Association. The National Catholic Hospital Association has known his guidance for two years.

HE LIVES a hurried here-and-there life. His profound interest in hospital management takes him from the convention of the American Hospital Association to the gatherings of the Protestant Hospital Association and to numerous sectional meetings of the Catholic Hospital Association. The conferences of the American Medical Association and the American College of Surgeons know his spare, Roman-collared figure. He finds time for mass each morning, for hearing confessions and preaching sermons in the College Church, for addressing various bodies on the relative position of religion and science, for a review of citizen soldiers at a summer training camp, for giving a retreat to an order of nuns, for a glance at the sport pages to see what the Cardinals have brought up from Houston.

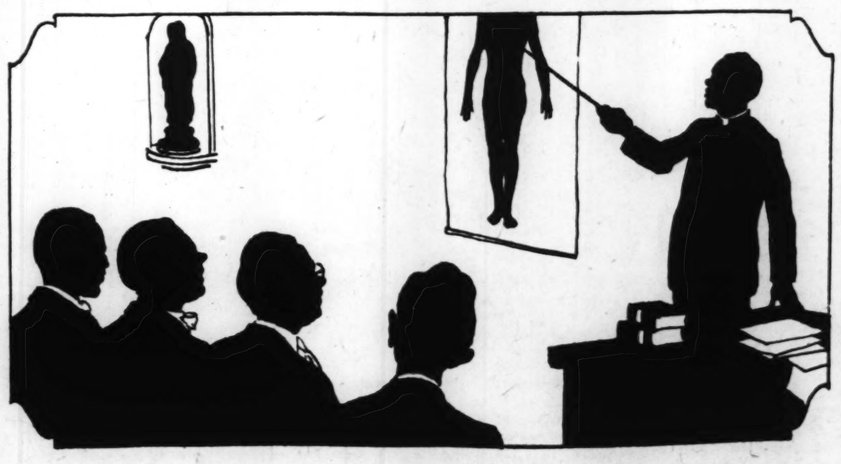
A full life in the world and a full life in the cloister. As a scientist with a genius for organizing and making his organizations live, he might, as the saying goes, make his way in the world financially. But as a Jesuit he made a vow of poverty, so that the very clothes he wears are not his own. As a member of a community, he eats "issue" food in the refectory, smokes "issue" tobacco in his pipe. He lives in the proverbially bare Jesuit room, where papers and books litter everything if spilled tobacco hasn't beat them to it, and where a visitor, who wants to smoke a cigarette while he discusses amoeboid movement or the new humanism, can feel free to lounge on the iron bed or pull out a desk drawer and prop his feet on it. In such a setting are addresses on "Are Mental Traits Inherited?" tapped out on a typewriter for delivery in a drawing room on Portland place where scientifically inclined ladies gather. Here, or in his office at the medical school, are plans for the work of the Missouri Social Hygiene Association formulated which may bring down the criticism of his more staid fellow-clergymen upon his head. Here are articles written for learned journals, whose very names are unknown to the millions who toss their nickels into the weekly-magazine coffers. Here are revised public addresses whose content will make the more settled of the religious profession wonder if "that fellow Schwitalla" isn't shoving the wheel of events instead of waiting for it to turn where he wants it. A distinctly modern type of priest, Father Schwitalla is impatient with delay, and he not only designates a spade in just such language, but can prove his thesis and will, on provocation, organize a society to spread the idea.

This active agent in the life of the city was born in Beuthen, Upper Silesia, Germany, in 1882, and came to this country with his parents in 1885.

Following his four years of noviceship in the Jesuit order at Florissant and two years of philosophical study, he began his teaching career, being assigned as instructor in the chemistry department of St. Xavier College, a Jesuit institution in Cincinnati. After three years he began his theological studies and was ordained a priest in 1915. In 1917 and 1918 he headed the biology department of Rockhurst College, in Kansas City.

Rev. Alphonse M. Schwitalla, S. J.

By this time it was evident that he had two outstanding characteristics, a strong leaning toward biology and medicine and a genius for organization. With this in mind, his superiors sent him to Johns Hopkins for his Ph. D. degree, and when he returned appointed him regent of the medical and dental departments, a position mainly occupied with matters of administration. He also became an instructor in the biology department, which he eventually headed. The Reserve Officers' Training Camp idea was beginning to get a foothold at this time. It was not long before the school was well represented, with the dental group the largest in the country. The university wanted to establish a graduate school, and Father Schwitalla took on this job and served as dean for several years. Clinical facilities were becoming inadequate with the growth of the medical school, so the university group of hospitals came into being as a group made up of St. Mary's Infirmary, St. Mary's Hospital and Mount St. Rose Sanitarium. Father Schwitalla is chairman of the board of the group.



More recently he brought to a consummation the Corporate Colleges of St. Louis University project. This was unique in that it united to the university nine Catholic colleges in the vicinity of St. Louis, the first move of its kind to be consummated in this country. It resulted, generally, in a standardization of courses and the raising of the rating of some of the smaller institutions, which, through an exchange of professors, are now enabled to give courses formerly denied them.

At present Father Schwitalla is devoting much time to the work of standardizing Catholic hospitals, the chief purpose of the National Catholic Hospital Association, which he heads. To attain this purpose he travels much, talks much and writes more. He is the editor of Hospital Progress, the organization's monthly publication, writing all of its editorials and some of its articles.

With all the duties connected with the deanship of the medical school and the demands of his organizations, he finds time to act as regent of the dental school and serve in an advisory capacity on the boards of St. John's, Alexian Brothers and St. Anthony's Hospitals.

During the Scopes "evolution" trial in Dayton, Tennessee, Father Schwitalla received a telegram from Clarence Darrow, chief of defense counsel, as follows: "Can you come and testify at Dayton trial if needed? We really should have a Catholic priest biologist. Curtis and Metcalf (scientists who testified for defense) join in urging this invitation. Expenses will be paid. Going well so far. Malone, in a magnificent argument, completely routed Bryan."

An affirmative reply was returned, but the sudden closing of the case prevented his being called to testify.

"There is some surprise that a man can be a priest and an evolutionist," Father Schwitalla said. "Yet I am both. As a biologist, I could sooner dispense with my microscope or forceps than with the viewpoint evolution gives me.

"Yet it is wrong to say that I accept evolution as a fact, being merely doubtful as to the method by which it was accomplished, for if the method is doubtful the whole process is in question and if all the suggested methods are disproved it is logical to hold that evolution did not take place.

"I accept evolution as a working theory of biology. It explains many things. On the other hand, there are countless difficulties with it that cannot be harmonized with accepted fact, and as long as it is so full of logical difficulties I cannot accept it. I and other scientists, including other Catholics, will continue using it as a working theory, in the quest for truth in the matter of man's supposed animal origin. Meanwhile, we will continue to look for new developments, because ideas concerning evolution have undergone great changes since it was first broached. When Spencer, Darwin and Huxley were writing, for instance, it was believed that the material of which living things are made, protoplasm, was identical in all forms of life.

"This was an attractive idea, because it made everything so simple, which is the real attraction evolution has for the biologist. Yet today we are coming to believe that there are as many kinds of protoplasm as there are living things. Again, evolution at one time was regarded as a question of structure. Today it is held a question of the variety of chemical constitution. Darwin, to round out his theory, had to assume that acquired characteristics are transmissible. Scientific effort has never been able to prove this. Ideas of heredity have changed greatly since his day, too. We have a deeper insight into the mechanism of cell modification.

"TODAY the center of the evolution problem is beginning to shift. Tomorrow research may bring the discovery of the mechanism by which the chemistry of one individual may be changed into the chemistry of another, the chemistry of one class of plants or animals into that of another class.

"Religion has nothing to fear from the theory. If it is true that the material universe evolved, there is no less a need for a Creator to supply the start of the process. And if, physically, man has an animal origin, there remains the necessity of a Creator to infuse a soul into his body, for philosophy, even unbolstered by revelation, tells us that man has a soul. If evolution on such a grand scale is true, it makes creation a much more magnificent affair, but we must not let ourselves be pulled into it by that circumstance. Facts are what we seek.

"There has been some criticism of my beliefs about evolution, but I want to say that there have been many misunderstandings on the part of both science and religion on the question that should be cleared up. There is need for more open-mindedness and less emotional heat.

"Similarly, my social hygiene activity has been misconstrued. Many believe the Missouri Social Hygiene Association to be a mere agency for the dissemination of birth control information and general sex education.

"This is not true. We are interested in safeguarding the relations which constitute the family. This means preserving civilization, for civilization is unthinkable except in terms of the family. I cannot see that effort toward maintaining its inviolability is open to criticism. Other sciences, too, profit by the work of the social hygienist. Ethics, biology, law and economy all share in it. It seems to me that here is a field that deserves the best and most enlightened effort."

SIDI WIRT SPRECKELS TAKES ANOTHER FLYER in ROMANCE

SAN FRANCISCO.

BRIEFLY, let us sketch her strange career. Sadie Wirt, born, reared on her father's farm near Garden City, Kansas. She marries one Harry Williams, advertising manager for a Hutchinson, Kansas, newspaper. Divorce. She gets to San Francisco. John D. Spreckels Jr., of the millionaire sugar family sees her. Marries her. Divorce action brought by Sadie, who has now become Sidi—but he is killed in an automobile accident before the hearing. She seeks foreign splendors. Europe. Paris. She meets Prince Suad Chakir, Turkish diplomat. Marriage. A Turkish captain. His wife. A riot. Divorce. Return to San Francisco.

And so we arrive at the present and Sidi Wirt's newest romance which, before flowering, seems to have become a sere and yellow leaf.

When Sidi, the ex-Princess Chakir, returned to California, she is said to have unburdened herself of the following philosophy, to wit, "Let American girls marry American men." And who is there to say Madame Sidi doesn't know her subject?

She thereupon started out to practice what she preached. Attending an informal dance at the Army flying field near San Francisco—Crissy Field—Madame Sidi met Second Lieutenant Rogers Gardner, known to his friends as "Duke."

This foreign title held no terrors for Madame Sidi. On the first evening of their acquaintance she and the young officer had several dances together. And immediately after the event they began to be seen considerably in each other's company. The fact that the Lieutenant was some 15 years Madame Sidi's junior didn't seem to bother either of them.

GARDNER was born in South Carolina in 1902. He entered West Point in 1921; four years later he received his commission. Then came attendance at an air school, and in 1928 transfer to Crissy Field.

Then came Madame Sidi.

Now the Madame Sidi-Gardner romance did not appeal to the officers, so the story goes, at Crissy Field. And when it was declared that Sidi wanted to bestow an automobile on the lieutenant as a gift, certain of Gardner's friends liked the whole business less and less.

The next thing that happened was Lieutenant Gardner's transfer to an Eastern post. What will Madame Sidi do now? Will she forget about him? Will she follow him? No one else knows and Madame Sidi won't tell.

It was in 1910 that she surprised her fellow Kansans and first gained notoriety for an affair of the heart. A staid little farm girl, she eloped with Harry Williams, a Kansas newspaper man, jilting Hugo Neal, a Brazilian millionaire. The romance was short-lived, ending in the divorce court not long afterwards.

Soon followed her marriage to Spreckels. And again the path of matrimony was far from smooth. Then Spreckels was instantly killed in an automobile accident. That was in 1921.

To the young widow fell a rich share of the Spreckels fortune. She chose to spend widowhood and a portion of her inheritance in travel abroad. She did not get very far before another man came along and altered her plans considerably.

IT WAS in Paris that she first met the Prince Chakir, close friend and confidant of Mustapha Kemal, dictator of Turkey. They were married in July, 1923.

Their wedding in Paris was a society event. Almost immediately they departed for a honeymoon at the Prince's summer home on the island of Prinkipo, later to occupy his ornate palace at Constantinople.

To them belonged a high position in Turkish and European society, where the tall, slender blonde drew admiring glances from those about her.

It was at the height of this participation in Turkish society that the Princess Sidi figured in the divorce suit brought by the Egyptian Princess Chevekiar Selim Bey against Captain Prince Selim Bey. This was not long after the marriage of Prince and Princess Chakir.

The Princess Sidi was said to have gone yachting with Capt. Selim Bey on the Bosporus on a moonlight night. Princess Chevekiar was reported to have met the yachting couple as they returned to Constantinople. It was said the Princess Chevekiar attacked the Princess Sidi and that both women engaged in a desperate tussle, pummeling each other and tearing at each other's hair.

Then the Princess Chevekiar filed suit for divorce, naming the young wife of Prince Chakir. The divorce was allowed in March, 1925.

Of course, Princess Sidi denied that she ever had been guilty of any unconventional associations with Captain Prince Selim Bey. So strongly did she defend herself against such accusations that she sued Princess Chevekiar for slander, demanding 30,000 Turkish pounds. And Sidi was finally awarded $5000.

A photograph made shortly before the Princess Suad Chakir was divorced.

Prince Chakir stood loyally by his wife during all of the litigation surrounding the affair and in the latter part of 1925 the Judge at Constantinople threw the case out of court.

This done, Prince and Princess Chakir seemed to settle down again to a tranquil, happy existence and resumed again their activity in the social whirl. But in 1928 came another surprise.

The Princess Sidi and her young daughter, Geraldine, suddenly left Constantinople in great haste and hurried to San Francisco. Ostensibly the trip was taken to visit the Princess's mother, Mrs. E. L. Wirt, who was critically ill.

BUT the whole story came out a short time later when the Princess threw off the cloak of mystery with which she had shielded her domestic affairs, charged her princely husband with cruelty of various sorts and brought suit for divorce.

In her divorce suit, Princess Sidi was successful. She asked no alimony. Prior to obtaining her decree of divorce, she had been successful in having herself repatriated, for in marrying the Prince she had lost her American citizenship.

Madame Sidi's appearance in the Federal Court in the citizenship matter, however, brought about unexpected developments. Once more was brought to the public's attention the mystery of the missing $80,000 string of pearls which had involved Tiffany's and the Spreckels family in litigation for nearly 10 years.

As the Princess, before a Federal Judge, took the cath of American citizenship, she was being watched, without her knowledge, by a member of a San Francisco law firm which represented the jewelry house. As she stepped outside the courtroom the lawyer served her with papers that made her defendant in a suit to collect the price of the pearls.

THE gems, forming a magnificent necklace, were sold by Tiffany's in 1920 to Sidi Wirt Spreckels and charged to Spreckels, then her millionaire husband. She scarcely had worn them when they mysteriously disappeared.

Mrs. Spreckels at that time said she had given them to Captain William Barrett, husband of Alice Drexel, New York heiress, so he might obtain an insurance valuation on them. That, she said, was the last she ever saw of the precious gems. Tiffany's sued Spreckels for the recovery of their value. The case was tried and the Spreckels estate was held not to be liable.

Now the whole case must be heard again with Madame Sidi in the role of defendant.

It was while she was fortifying herself for this latest legal fight in her career that Madame Sidi met Lieutenant Gardner at Crissy Field. The Lieutenant's superiors thought they saw marriage in the offing. Then came the order from Washington transferring Gardner to an Eastern post.

Whether a little thing like army discipline will keep Madame Sidi from going to the altar for a fourth time is a matter of conjecture.

NEW BRUNSWICK, New Jersey.

FOR 50 years she hated her husband. Then one day she up and killed him with an ax. It was simpler to do that than to get a divorce. At least Mrs. Matilda Laura Penn Titus felt that way about it. Besides she is a Quaker, a direct descendant of William Penn, she claims, and her religion does not sanction divorce.

She sits in jail here, not very deeply interested in whether the State of New Jersey will confine her in the penitentiary for life or send her to the electric chair. She is 75 years old. You couldn't expect her to be very much interested in the little time that remains to her. A woman whose life has been one long struggle between hate and despair. It is a study in the pathological, the morbid.

And yet this ugly, weazened little woman can look back 50 years to youth and something that she dimly remembers as happiness. She was a hired girl here in New Brunswick. And Jim Titus was a farmer's son when they met. Though she was a Quaker, the ceremony took place in a Methodist church.

"I wore black and white silk," she explained. "They say that's bad luck."

Her husband's drinking first hurt and then angered his bride. She told him in the heat of her fury that she would kill him if he didn't stop getting drunk. But for nearly 30 years he did as he pleased about this. Then suddenly he fell sick. The doctor told him he had been poisoned. This frightened him and he quit drinking. For 15 years he stayed on the water-wagon.

He paid out on his life insurance, bought security bonds and otherwise established himself as a solid citizen.

The FLYING WHALE—Aviation's Newest Marvel

The flying boat, designed by Dr. Dornier and built to carry 150 passengers comfortably.

German Airboat Carried 169 Persons on a Trial Flight Over Lake Constance.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BERLIN.

AVIATION'S newest marvel, an airship so monstrous in size and in its passenger-carrying capacity as to have earned already the name of the "Flying Whale," was given its first formal tryout a short time ago on Lake Constance and acquitted itself to the satisfaction of everyone. For the first time in history an airplane carried more than 150 persons. To be exact, there were 150 passengers, 10 members of the crew and nine stowaways aboard when the "Whale" arose from the water and took to the air with apparently the same ease as if it had been a two-seater Moth.

To those on the ground, as well as to those in the ship, it seemed to have all the mobility it needed. When the D. O. X.—as it is called—finally came to rest on the water the "landing" was accomplished with so little jar that those aboard hardly knew that it had taken place.

The airboat took exactly 50 seconds to rise and its flight occupied more than an hour, over the famous lake home of the Zeppelins.

DR. GEORGE DORNIER, its designer, says that the D. O. X. was carrying fuel sufficient for it to have taken its passengers 750 miles without a stop. The flying boat has three decks, one for passengers, one for pilots and mechanics, and one for luggage and freight. It is provided with kitchen, bathroom, smoking saloon and sleeping berths.

The evolution of the D. O. X. is a typical example of the method and industry combined with fanatical tenacity, which have brought about the renaissance of post-war Germany.

Dr. Dornier was not making a leap in the dark as his scoffing colleagues all over the world mockingly declared when, two years ago, he and his band of mechanics set to work in the strictest secrecy behind the shrouded windows of the workshop at Altenrhein to build the flying ship which was the dream of his life.

The D. O. X. has been in Dr. Dornier's thoughts ever since, as an unimportant engineer, he dared to approach the great airship pioneer, Count Zeppelin, with his plans for a giant flying boat. So impressed was the Count with young Dornier's enthusiasm that he gave him financial support and enabled him to open an experimental workshop in 1914, close to his own airship works at Friedrichshafen.

During the war, Dr. Dornier built many hydroplanes and airplanes and even flying boats, some of them of vast dimensions. It was after the war, however, that he began, like some careful breeder of a new species of canary, to construct little by little his family of whale flying boats, of which the D. O. X. is the gigantic climax.

He began in 1921 with the Libelle, a flying boat with one engine of 150 h. p. He carefully tested it, and then, in 1922, built the Dornier Whale, with a wing span of 85 feet and a load capacity of 2200 pounds.

THE Whale was carefully tested, and the results of three years of experiments were then incorporated in the Super Whale, built in 1926, with a wing span of 112 feet and a load capacity of 5000 pounds. As before, the Super Whale was submitted to searching tests, and then Dr. Dornier began to build the D. O. X.

The Whale had two engines of 300 h. p., the Super Whale had two of 600 h. p.

The wing span of the D. O. X. is 150 feet. It is driven by 12 engines, ranged in six tandem pairs, each engine rated at 500 h. p. The body of the D. O. X. has luxurious accommodations for no fewer than 150 passengers, including a bar. It has a crew of 10—a commander, two pilots, a navigator and six mechanics, who are able, by creeping through a passage in the wings of the flying boat, which has a diameter of nine feet, to attend to the engines.

Dr. Dornier claims that the D. O. X. with its 12 engines is the world's safest aircraft. Not only can it maintain full flying speed with four engines out of action, but repairs, short of mounting a new engine, can be carried out while the flying ship is actually in the air. The fuel supply has been so arranged that the danger of explosions and fires has been reduced to a minimum.

The successful flight of the Whale is one of a series of triumphs achieved by Germany in the air. Another invention by a German was given a test recently at Tempelhoefer Field when the world's first tailless plane made a flight. Practically the entire fuselage was eliminated in this plane by placing a rudder at the tip of each wing and compressing the small engine into a minimum of space at the rear of the cockpit. The plane was constructed by Herr Lippich.

HATED HER HUSBAND for FIFTY YEARS

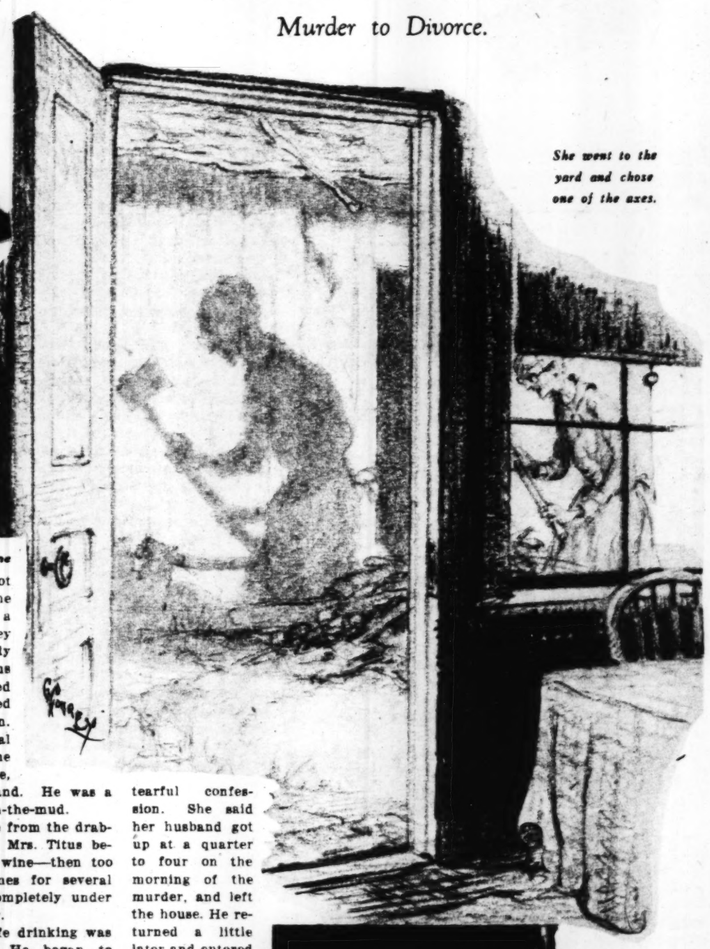
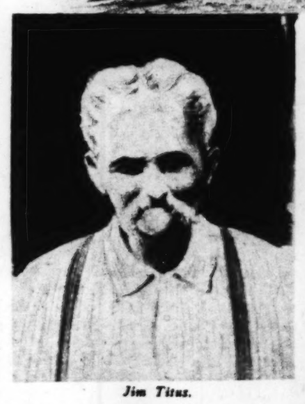
Mrs. Matilda Laura Titus Then Decided That She Preferred Murder to Divorce.

Mrs. Matilda Laura Titus.



She went to the yard and chose one of the axes.



Jim Titus.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW BRUNSWICK, New Jersey.

FOR 50 years she hated her husband. Then one day she up and killed him with an ax. It was simpler to do that than to get a divorce. At least Mrs. Matilda Laura Penn Titus felt that way about it. Besides she is a Quaker, a direct descendant of William Penn, she claims, and her religion does not sanction divorce.

She sits in jail here, not very deeply interested in whether the State of New Jersey will confine her in the penitentiary for life or send her to the electric chair. She is 75 years old. You couldn't expect her to be very much interested in the little time that remains to her. A woman whose life has been one long struggle between hate and despair. It is a study in the pathological, the morbid.

And yet this ugly, weazened little woman can look back 50 years to youth and something that she dimly remembers as happiness. She was a hired girl here in New Brunswick. And Jim Titus was a farmer's son when they met. Though she was a Quaker, the ceremony took place in a Methodist church.

"I wore black and white silk," she explained. "They say that's bad luck."

Her husband's drinking first hurt and then angered his bride. She told him in the heat of her fury that she would kill him if he didn't stop getting drunk. But for nearly 30 years he did as he pleased about this. Then suddenly he fell sick. The doctor told him he had been poisoned. This frightened him and he quit drinking. For 15 years he stayed on the water-wagon.

He paid out on his life insurance, bought security bonds and otherwise established himself as a solid citizen.

But curiously enough this change in her husband did not satisfy Mrs. Titus. She had changed from a quiet, mouse-like Jersey housewife to a highly nervous, impetuous woman. She wanted excitement. She longed for things to happen. When nothing special occurred to stir the monotony of her life, she blamed her husband. He was a dull fellow, a stick-in-the-mud.

To find some escape from the drabness of her existence, Mrs. Titus began to drink. First wine—then too much wine. Sometimes for several days she would be completely under the influence of liquor.

The sight of his wife drinking was too much for Jim. He began to take a sip now and then. Soon he was going on bats. Then she began to drink out of revenge. When he was sober she drank to make him suffer.

IT WENT on like that for years. Mrs. Titus's stepmother used to go over to clean her house during the drinking sessions, but they finally became so frequent that she stopped this fruitless labor; Mrs. Titus's drinking became so chronic she was a frequent patient in a hospital where she was taken when threatened with delirium tremens.

Sometimes she would call the police station and complain that Jim was beating her. At such times the Captain in charge would bring the old man down, but wouldn't lock him up. "He was a harmless kind of a fellow," the Captain declared.

Jim had a job tending horses in a livery stable. He had to get up at three or four in the morning, so he would go to bed at seven.

And now we come to the murder. She has made a complete and tearful confession. She said her husband got up at a quarter to four on the morning of the murder, and left the house. He returned a little later and entered the room. He asked her to get up and used abusive language when she did not move.

After he left the room Mrs. Titus lay still, thinking over their life together. At seven o'clock she went downstairs and saw her husband, stretched out on the kitchen floor with two pillows under his head, asleep.

"I went to the yard and picked up an ax," she said in her confession. "There were three of them there and I took the lightest one. I returned to the sitting room and sat down in a chair, meditating on whether or not I should kill him. I approached the body. Then I changed my mind and returned to the chair.

"A few minutes later I approached the body again and this time I also hesitated and again returned to the chair.

"The third time I approached the body I determined to kill him. I struck him over the head once with the blade of the ax. He did not move; I hit him the second time with the blunt end of the ax. I then went out the front door and called several men who were cutting up kindling nearby, and told them what I had done."

Then she washed the bloodstained ax and put it with the other two. She was not sorry. "If I had married a different man all this would not have happened," she explained. "Divorce is not a terrible thing. It is a blessing that can put a stop to things like this. I was married to the wrong man. I never would have killed another man. When people find they are not happy together, it is time to separate. But I'm descended from William Penn, a Quaker, and a very religious family. We do not believe in divorce, so I stuck it out with James until I hated him enough to kill him. I expect lots of women feel like killing husbands. I've seen plenty I think need killing."

AND so the weazened little old woman sits in jail, telling her story calmly to the matron and waiting without much curiosity for what the State of New Jersey will decide to do about her.

Elderly women have been sent to jail often enough. One woman has even gone to the electric chair. She was Mrs. Martha Place, of Brooklyn. This happened 30 years ago. Mrs. Place was the woman whom Governor Roosevelt refused to reprieve and of whom the great Teddy said:

"It will be of no avail whatever for any delegation to wait on me to ask for clemency for Mrs. Place. I will not consider petitions or any form of appeal on her behalf. In the commission of a crime, a woman is deserving of the same blame as a man in a similar case. I would deal with the woman as with the man—no whit differently."

And so Mrs. Place, who had killed her stepdaughter because she was jealous and then had tried to kill her husband with an ax, went to the chair on March 21, 1899. She was the first woman to be electrocuted in New York State.

If the crime committed is revolting and horrible enough, neither age nor youth can save a woman from the electric chair, as Ruth Snyder discovered somewhat to her amazement.

But age may eventually win a pardon, as Nellie Pope, 68, and also a husband-killer, has just discovered. Mrs. Pope was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1895 for killing her husband. The Governor of Michigan has promised a pardon to the aged woman so she may die outside of prison.

But Mrs. Titus, who is seven years older than Nellie Pope, will probably die in prison. She doesn't care. At least she says, in her rasping, tired voice, that it makes no difference.

The SHY YOUNG MAN

By Frank Swinnerton

EARLY Ruth put the cover over her typewriter. The day had been such a long one—it was nearly eight o'clock and the late summer sky was already graying—that Ruth was quite exhausted. Her thoughts were confused with fragments of Mr. Scruter's dictation, vague strainings after details she was to remember and of which she was to remind him.

"He's a glutton," Ruth thought. "He loves work. He hates to leave off. And hates me to leave off. One of these days I shall die; and he'll cluck his tongue at the interruption and have me swept up to make room for somebody else."

The thought made her smile.

It was nine o'clock before she reached home—a very small flat in a West London suburb, where she lived with her mother and sister. Ruth trudged along, faint with hunger, and the road, which opened imposingly enough near the railway station, began to dwindle so that one had the sense of increasingly narrow doorways and increasingly cheap glass. At last she reached the entrance to Southcroft Mansions and was preparing to mount the stone stairs when she became aware of a very tall, very fair, awkward, shy young man on the porch.

This young man was dressed in a light tweed suit, with a rather large black tie and an unstarched collar; and his soft hat was awry, as if he were rather careless about his appearance; and he had a long face, clean-shaven, with a good-natured mouth. But he was so shy that, even as he addressed Ruth, he had great difficulty in meeting her frank, astonished glance. He stammered. Odd that one so evidently well-bred should stammer from shyness! Was she unusually alarming? The thought delighted Ruth, and she endeavored to look grim.

"Er . . . excuse me . . ." said the shy young man. "But . . . er . . . I can't see any . . . I've forgotten the number I . . . er . . ."

And he began slightly to redden.

"Have you forgotten the name, too?" asked Ruth, a little dryly.

"Er . . . no . . ." said the shy young man. "Mine . . . er . . . mine's Denny. I . . . er . . . I'm looking . . . I w-want to find w-where Miss Sisley lives."

"She lives at the top. Number sixteen," said Ruth. "I'm Miss Sisley."

The young man looked at her in astonishment.

"Oh," said he quickly. "Oh, . . . er . . . I thought . . . oh, I see . . . er . . . there are two of you!"

One of Adeline's beaux! Ruth's eyebrows lifted. A new one. New—they were legion! Was it envy that stirred in her heart? Or pity?

"You'd better come up with me," she said amiably enough. "It's a walk. We haven't a lift."

Together they ascended the stairs. Ruth opened the door of the flat, and the shy young man followed her into the exceedingly small passageway.

THE flat was all upon the same scale as the vestibule. There was a living room, there were two bedrooms, and there was a kitchen just large enough to hold a table, cooking-apparatus and a dresser. The cook (who was mother to Ruth and Adeline) could not sit down, if she was tired. Therefore the living room was parlor and dining room and boudoir combined; and, as they entered, Ruth was thankful that it was not being used as a boudoir or even—as frequently was the case—as a dressmaking establishment. Mrs. Sisley and Adeline, having finished their supper, were waiting for Ruth. Ruth's supper was set upon a corner of the large table in the center of the room.

Mrs. Sisley was a slender woman, with a narrow head carrying a small stock of thin gray hair. She was dressed tightly in black. There was an indescribable anxiety in her manner, as if she were watching. She had been a widow for ten years; and life had been hard. It was easier, now that both girls were earning money.

Adeline, the belle of the family, two years younger than Ruth, and at this time twenty-two, was scanning a fashion paper. She was fairer and plumper than Ruth, more vivacious, and particularly attractive to young men.

"Hullo, Marcus!" she cried, jumping to her feet as if she were greeting an old friend.

Marcus! Ruth looked quickly at the shy young man, saw that he was beaming and advancing toward Adeline with considerably reduced shyness, sighed, glanced at her supper, at her mother. She saw that lady's expression of pinched cordiality, saw the anxiety in the pale eyes, knew that Mrs. Sisley was asking herself the eternal question—"Is he well-off?" Ruth understood her mother very well—too well—and realized that Mrs. Sisley had but one thought—to marry Adeline handsomely. A soft, uncontrolable smile of understanding, pity, even love, rose from Ruth's heart to her eyes, to her lips. Then suddenly she found that Marcus was, for the first time, looking directly at herself. He had surprised her smile and was returning it.

Adeline, it appeared, had met Marcus at a studio party—she had forgotten how long ago. Perhaps a month. Ruth, coming back from the kitchen, to which place she had unobtrusively transferred her supper, eating it on foot, was pleased to find quite a happy trio. Her re-entry was unnoticed, because Marcus was giving an account of a wealthy patroness whose portrait he was painting.

"Incredible!" he was saying, in his funny, half-jovial, stammering way. His shyness was less powerful. "I can't get her to remove the smirk."

"I should paint it," cried Adeline. "Serve her right."

"Oh, but she's not a bit like it. Ordinarily, I mean. It would be cruel."

"Why cruel? She must think it becoming."

"She can't know how it looks. She hasn't seen it."

"Poor, simple boy!" sighed Adeline. "When she must have spent hours"—

THEY were indeed friendly! But now Marcus had seen her and was again rather constrained. He could think of nothing to say to her. Indeed, beyond showing by his discomfort that he was aware of Ruth's presence, he did not address her directly. Instead, as Ruth slipped into a chair, he turned to Adeline.

"I w-wonder if y-your sister would . . . er . . . I mean" . . .

"Oh, Ruth never goes out," cried Adeline. "She's a regular stay-at-home. Aren't you, Ruth!"

Adeline was frowning. Ruth understood very well what her expression meant. The sweetness had faded from it.

"No, I never go out," she said rather drily. She did not say why. But she knew why.

"But I w—" The shy young man hesitated, looked up at her, turned again to Adeline. Ruth's heart sank. It wasn't too pleasant to be forciby set upon the shelf. "Never mind," she told herself. "Later . . . later . . ." She meant that one day she would be free.

"Well, then, you'll c-come . . ." added Marcus, appealing to Adeline.

"Indeed I will. Thursday. Lovely!" Adeline nodded joyously, her high spirits quite restored. Ruth saw her happy smile—the smile of a child.

"And I w-wish . . ." Marcus could get no further. He glanced at Ruth. A moment later he was gone.

"Slow old thing!" Adeline observed. "But clever. I wonder he ever thinks of anything to say to his sitters."

"Is he a very good painter?" asked Ruth.

"I don't know. They say he is." Adeline picked up her fashion paper.

"You should get him to paint you," Ruth said.

"Oh, he's going to," answered Adeline, half-indifferent. "I said he'd got to."

Mrs. Sisley had in her head another notion altogether.

"Portrait painters make a good deal of money, don't they?" she asked.

It was strange how often Ruth thought of Marcus in the next few days. His tall, awkward figure rose frequently in her memory. While she was taking down Mr. Scruter's dictation, she found herself seeing that rough tweed suit, the black tie, the long face, the wide smile. Every time she thought of Marcus she smiled.

Thursday came, and Ruth and her mother sat at home, while Adeline danced off to Marcus's party. She returned early in the morning, plunged into her little bed, across the room from Ruth's, and was instantly asleep. Ruth lay imagining all the fun Adeline must have shared during the evening, and, when she fell asleep again, she dreamed that she had been at the party, in the background, watching the fun and relishing it.

THIS dream remained with her all day; and in the evening, as she walked home from the railway station, she thought herself still dreaming when she caught sight of Marcus, walking toward her. He seemed to stare, to hesitate, as though he hardly recognized her. Then he snatched off his hat, half-stopped, smiled, looked very straight at her, and passed. It seemed to Ruth that he had probably been too shy to speak; but his abrupt failure to do so sent a little pain to her heart. Did he dislike her?

On Saturday afternoon, as soon as she had eaten her lunch, Adeline dressed very carefully and went out, saying nothing to the others of her destination. Ruth also left the flat and went to call upon some friends. When she returned home, she was astonished to find that Marcus was there. He was alone. He was by the fireplace, with his head down, a little pale. As he saw Ruth, he seemed to become more awkward than ever.

"Y-your sister's had . . . had an accident," stammered Marcus. "F-fell in the river. I brought her . . . home. Your mother's p-putting her to bed."

"Is she hurt?" asked Ruth.

"I d-don't think so. You see, she w-was in a canoe . . . w-with a man who can't swim. Got rather wet, I'm afraid."

"You look as if you were rather wet!" cried Ruth. "You are! You're soaked! Oh, you ought to hurry home. You'll catch cold."

Marcus grinned. For the first time, he was able to look at Ruth without giving her the impression that he disliked doing so. It was a very pleasant experience for Ruth to see his frank, cheerful eyes.

"I'm g-going in a minute," he said. "Must stay and see all's well . . ." With which statement he began most violently to sneeze. "At-choo! At-choo! At . . ."

Alarmed both for Adeline and for Marcus, Ruth hastened to the bedroom, to find that Adeline was snugly between blankets and her mother standing near the bed. Adeline looked none the worse for the accident.

"That poor young man's soaked to the skin," Ruth cried, when she had ascertained that Adeline was well. "He's sneezing all over the room."

"He's a hero!" cried Mrs. Sisley, devoutly. "He may sneeze anywhere he likes. I must go back at once and thank him for saving Addie's life."

AND she went out of the room, leaving Ruth sitting upon Adeline's bed. They looked at each other almost drolly. The two of them heard Mrs. Sisley's voice in the next room. Both knew what she was saying. "Can't thank you . . . can't. . . . My little Adeline. My darling. . . . A mother, Mr. Denny. . . . How can I thank . . ."

They exchanged a second glance.

"Go and stop her!" commanded Adeline. "He hates that sort of thing. And it's not as if I couldn't swim."

The outer door slammed. Marcus had taken to flight.

The next evening saw him back again, however. He seemed bent upon showing his concern and came armed with a box of marrons glaces for the invalid. When he found that she was up and well, he expressed astonishment. In doing so, he sneezed vigorously and brought three pairs of eyes accusingly upon himself.

"It's not you who should be coming to ask for me, it's I who should be coming to ask after you, Marcus!" cried Adeline.

"Adeline!" murmured Mrs. Sisley. "Dear child!" It was the gentlest protest.

"However, I'll eat the marrons. Thanks!"

"Adeline is always so high-spirited. She's very healthy, Mr. . . . Mr. Marcus," continued Mrs. Sisley. "Has always been so. It means so much . . . in good nature, in sweetness."

Adeline sighed loudly.

"Have a marron, Marcus?" she said, as an interruption. "They're good for colds."

There was a ring at the front door-bell. Ruth, answering it, saw another young man. To her sharp eye, it was evident that this other young man also had a severe cold.

Putting two and two together, Ruth came to the conclusion that this other young man (who was not at all shy) was the unlucky cause of the accident. He was as unlike Marcus as any young man could be. He was very dark, for one thing, and looked spick and span. He wore eyeglasses, had a long, thin nose and a long, thin mouth.

"MISS SISLEY? I'm Aubrey Ramsden. I overturned a canoe yesterday. Your sister . . ."

"Come in, Mr. Ramsden." Ruth could not keep her brows steady. They would jerk up and down when she wanted to laugh.

The young man preceded her confidently into the room. She saw him stop dead and stiffen at sight of Marcus.

"Hullo, Marcus," he said coldly.

Then he stood, with his hat in his hand, staring at Marcus. He looked cross, but he tried to appear at ease.

"N-none the worse, I hope," Marcus stammered, looking down upon the newcomer. "I . . . I . . . mean, none the worse, eh?"

They stood looking at each other, Ruth thought, like jealous dogs. "Rescuer and rescued!" she thought. "How English they are!" And then she looked at Adeline. "They're both in love with her, poor dears," she told herself. "How sorry I am for both of them."

For Adeline was being stared at by both young men; and Adeline, coolly mistress of the situation, was in the act of offering Aubrey one of Marcus's marrons glaces. Of the two, Aubrey was most clearly in need of Ruth's sympathy. He had been the cause of the accident. He had been humiliated by his inability to swim. He even owed his life to Marcus. He had arrived late. What chance had he in the struggle?

From Marcus, accordingly, Ruth switched her pity quickly to Aubrey, although it must be admitted that, whereas Marcus had fired her imagination, Aubrey seemed to be insignificant, sleek, and altogether without attractiveness.

"He could never have any chance, anyway," thought Ruth. "Poor young man! And now he's lost it entirely."

She glanced at her mother, who was surveying the newcomer with an expression in which coldness struggled with rancor.

"A healthy constitution, Mr. Marcus," Mrs. Sisley began. She was interrupted.

"At-choo! At-choo!" said both young men simultaneously.

Aubrey showed himself a most accomplished talker. He had been to all the new plays, had met all the actors and actresses, the people who wrote about the plays in the newspapers. He had views upon art, literature, and politics. He monopolized the conversation. Rather stupefied by his eloquence, Ruth felt that she was half-dozing.

She awoke to find her mother staring at Aubrey with the greatest dislike, while Aubrey talked about things of which only Adeline — it appeared — had ever heard. Certainly Ruth knew nothing of them. And as for Marcus—she turned to look over her shoulder at Marcus, who had been sitting very quiet.

HER astonishment was inexpressible when she discovered that Marcus, so far from paying any attention to what Aubrey said, was actually engaged in making upon the back of an envelope a sketch of herself. He was so intent upon his task that it was an instant before he looked up, saw her surprise, reddened, grinned, and put the envelope back into his pocket.

Marcus then did a very peculiar thing. Still smiling, he put his finger gently to his lips, to show that she was not to comment upon his action. Soon after he rose and grasped Aubrey by the shoulder.

"Come along, Aub," he said. "T-time we w-went."

Aubrey was a child in that grasp. He rose, still sleek, but with a slightly crestfallen air. To Ruth, standing aside, it was painfully amusing to see how her mother glared in shaking hands with Aubrey, and how she beamed at Marcus.

"Yes, do," Ruth heard her say to Marcus. "Any evening."

And, as she spoke, Mrs. Sisley drew Adeline to her side, as if to show by her action that she and Adeline were associated. But she addressed no such words to the retiring Aubrey. Indeed, she regarded him as she might have regarded a toad or a giant slug.

The expression upon her face was supported by the speech made the moment the two visitors were gone.

"What a very disagreeable young man that was," remarked Mrs. Sisley. "Mr. Ramsden. I hope he won't come often to see us!"

"Oh, he's all right," lazily answered Adeline, "when you know him."

"So talkative. My dear, he might have drowned you!"

"But he didn't."

"I DIDN'T say he did. He might have. Thanks to Marcus, he didn't." She spoke with pride. "Marcus is much the superior young man. He's so polite."

"He's rather shy," objected Ruth. "He never speaks to me, if he can help it."

"Ah, to you," replied her mother, with a lofty smile. "It's different with me. He feels I have a mother's heart — a mother's understanding. This evening he has asked permission to make a drawing of me."

"You're a comic pair," Adeline observed cryptically, and popped a chestnut into her mouth.

Marcus came again to see the Sisleys a few night later and sat for an hour, hardly speaking. Mrs. Sisley looked on approvingly. She told him stories of Adeline's babyhood. She followed with stories of her husband, of herself, of Adeline as a girl. She showed him needlework done by Ruth at school and said it had been done by Adeline. Marcus listened. Presently he rose and went away.

He did not return this time until a fortnight had passed; and, in that fortnight, Ruth had a thousand chills and exhilarations at thought of him. She remembered him in the middle of her work and as she traveled in rattling trains and ate her lunch in crowded tea-rooms. She remembered him as her eyes closed at night and as they opened in the morning.

"I'm mad!" she told herself. "I shall . . . of course, I shall like him as a sister-in law!"

One night Ruth had a terrible shock. She had gone early to bed and had been sleeping so uneasily that Adeline's return awakened her. Blinking drowsily, she was aware of Adeline's quick movements. It seemed to Ruth that there was suppressed excitement about Adeline's manner. She went to and fro, examined herself in the mirror.

Ruth tried to go to sleep again. She could not tell whether she had been successful, whether she was dreaming, or whether she actually saw what next appeared to happen. Some little time passed, as if there had been an interval in her consciousness. Then she felt tremendously wakeful, opened her eyes again, saw Adeline go to the dressing-table, take from it something small and black, go back to her bed, pull back the coverlet, jump into bed, and sit upright.

From the small black object Adeline apparently took something still smaller. She set it upon a finger of her left hand, and held her hand up so that the light made brilliant sparks come from the thing upon the finger. . . .

The ring was Marcus's ring. Ruth knew despair.

"I'm in love with him," she thought. "What agony! To see him constantly, and in love with Adeline . . . marrying her . . . taking her away . . . I shall never be able to bear it."

ADELINE had been home and had gone out again, by the time Ruth reached home that night; and for this respite, at least, Ruth was thankful. She watched her mother for a few moments until she gathered from Mrs. Sisley's calmness that she had been told nothing at all. This was a relief. Anything was a relief that gave Ruth time to recover her self-control.

"Where has Adeline gone, Mother?" asked Ruth, in a stifled voice.

"She only said she wouldn't be late. She was in a hurry. I think she had to meet somebody. I couldn't help thinking . . ." Mrs. Sisley smiled archly. "I couldn't help thinking—feeling sure who it was. Did the bell ring? She's come back."

Ruth's heart began to race.

"No," she said, choking. "It's somebody at the door. Not Adeline."

She rose and moved forward,

Mrs. Sisley opened the door suddenly.

THE body of the first and only American King will no longer rest in an unmarked grave if the plans of the Burlington Historical Society, adopted at their last meeting, are carried through. For seventy years, the ashes of James Jesse Strang, King James the First of Great Beaver Island, have lain in the Burlington Public Cemetery without even a wooden headboard, but his place in the development of Wisconsin and Michigan and in United States history will soon be recognized by his former townsfolk and the remaining Strangites.

James Jesse Strang was a native of New York. Like all men of the early days of the nineteenth century, he was searching for his career. Born in 1813, by 1835 he had already tried schoolteaching and journalism in his native county of Chautauqua. About this latter date, he was admitted to the bar, and practiced for awhile, following this with a trial at public office holding. Then, horrified at the Demon Rum, he became a professional temperance lecturer. Finally, in 1843, with his new wife, he made his way here to the small town of Burlington, and hung out his shingle.

"I DIDN'T say he did. He might have. Thanks to Marcus, he didn't." She spoke with pride. "Marcus is much the superior young man. He's so polite."

"He's rather shy," objected Ruth. "He never speaks to me, if he can help it."

"Ah, to you," replied her mother, with a lofty smile. "It's different with me. He feels I have a mother's heart — a mother's understanding. This evening he has asked permission to make a drawing of me."

"You're a comic pair," Adeline observed cryptically, and popped a chestnut into her mouth.

Marcus came again to see the Sisleys a few night later and sat for an hour, hardly speaking. Mrs. Sisley looked on approvingly. She told him stories of Adeline's babyhood. She followed with stories of her husband, of herself, of Adeline as a girl. She showed him needlework done by Ruth at school and said it had been done by Adeline. Marcus listened. Presently he rose and went away.

He did not return this time until a fortnight had passed; and, in that fortnight, Ruth had a thousand chills and exhilarations at thought of him. She remembered him in the middle of her work and as she traveled in rattling trains and ate her lunch in crowded tea-rooms. She remembered him as her eyes closed at night and as they opened in the morning.

"I'm mad!" she told herself. "I shall . . . of course, I shall like him as a sister-in law!"

One night Ruth had a terrible shock. She had gone early to bed and had been sleeping so uneasily that Adeline's return awakened her. Blinking drowsily, she was aware of Adeline's quick movements. It seemed to Ruth that

WILL MARK the GRAVE of the ONLY AMERICAN KING

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BURLINGTON, Wisconsin.

THE body of the first and only American King will no longer rest in an unmarked grave if the plans of the Burlington Historical Society, adopted at their last meeting, are carried through. For seventy years, the ashes of James Jesse Strang, King James the First of Great Beaver Island, have lain in the Burlington Public Cemetery without even a wooden headboard, but his place in the development of Wisconsin and Michigan and in United States history will soon be recognized by his former townsfolk and the remaining Strangites.

James Jesse Strang was a native of New York. Like all men of the early days of the nineteenth century, he was searching for his career. Born in 1813, by 1835 he had already tried schoolteaching and journalism in his native county of Chautauqua. About this latter date, he was admitted to the bar, and practiced for awhile, following this with a trial at public office holding. Then, horrified at the Demon Rum, he became a professional temperance lecturer. Finally, in 1843, with his new wife, he made his way here to the small town of Burlington, and hung out his shingle.

Shortly after his arrival, the wandering missionaries of the new Church of the Latter Day Saints of Jesus Christ, commonly called the Mormons, came through Burlington, and found the young lawyer an eager convert. So eager was he that he went with them to Nauvoo on February 25, 1844, and received baptism from Joseph Smith himself, and less than a week afterwards he was on his way back with authority to "plant a stake of Zion," which was the euphemism employed for establishing a church in Wisconsin.

Burlington reaches to the county line between Racine and Walworth counties. On this county line, Strang established a place called Voree, which in the translation he gave means "a garden of peace." Around him gathered a group of converts. On the banks of the White River, which drains the waters of Lake Geneva into the Fox River, he opened a quarry, and on the road along the county line the tithing stake and school were built.

In his brief autobiography, Strang declares himself to have been "of an epileptic nature." At the hour when Joseph Smith and his brother Hiram were shot down in the jail at Carthage, Illinois, Strang had a seizure, and fell unconscious. This was in the presence of disinterested witnesses. A few days later his law partner brought him a letter from the late Joseph, written on the eve of his death, which declared that he, Joseph, felt that his days as leader were nearly ended, and he therefore named James Strang as prophet and leader in his stead, to gather the faithful at Voree.

Brigham Young and his Council of Twelve denounced this letter as a forgery, but Strang appeared before them and made a vigorous and effective defense —effective as regards several thousand of the Mormons, but the Council rejected his claim. With his few thousand followers, Strang retired to Voree and founded the Voree Herald, from whose presses he issued pamphlet after pamphlet, as well as the monthly paper, later a weekly.

A STATELY and wonderful temple was laid out and started at Voree, and the church was organized on the principles laid down in the Book of Mormon. Visions came to the Prophet James, and he foresaw the terrible fate of those who remained with Brigham Young, prophesying that the Nauvoo Church would be driven into exile. In a vision he saw plates of brass buried under a tree near Voree, and with several witnesses went to the spot and exhumed them. By means of the Urim and Thummim, lent to him as they had been to Joseph Smith by the angel, he translated these plates.

In 1846 the Nauvoo Church was driven west. Now more came to Voree and, alone of the branches that defied Brigham Young, it prospered. But the same prejudice that drove the Mormons away from Illinois and Missouri was being felt in Wisconsin. Strang was a wise man, and he knew that dangers lay ahead. He traveled around the Northwest in search of a place where the hand of the Gentile might not weigh heavily upon the faithful. In the islands near Mackinac, he found what promised to be a haven.

Four thousand or more Latter Day Saints crossed Lake Michigan, and driving the few fishermen from Great Beaver Island, settled down to prosper. The huts they occupied they named the City of St. James. The hill that rose in the midst of the island was called Mount Pisgah, and the little stream that drained a lake was called the Jordan, flowing from the Sea of Galilee. The timber of the island furnished logs for houses and a tabernacle, and the "Northern Islander" took the place of the "Voree Herald."

The dispossessed and unregenerate fishermen were not well pleased with this high-handed treatment.

When the eighth of July, 1850, was set as the day for the coronation of James Jesse Strang as King James the First the disorganized fishermen of the neighboring islands and shores organized to take this opportunity of ridding themselves of the unwelcome settlement. The Fourth of July was set as the day, and Mackinac Island as the rendezvous. From there, they sailed to the harbor of Beaver Island to spend the night before the attack. Pistols, rifles and liquor formed their armament. They used the liquor during the night.

In the morning they awoke from their slumbers at the sound of a cannon. The shot splashed near the fisher fleet. A messenger was hastily sent ashore to find the meaning of the welcome. He was told it was merely a celebration of the Fourth. Meanwhile the shots followed one another, nearer and nearer the anchored fleet. Another messenger was sent under a flag of truce. This time he was told that the plot to destroy the town was known, and the first shot from the fleet would be the signal for its destruction by cannon fire.

THE rising sun disclosed a small battery ready to fire. Cannon balls were being heated, and every man was armed. A large lake schooner, filled with armed men, lay between the fishermen and the town. Reinforcements from other islands failed to arrive, and the Strangites had no interruption in their religious ceremonies that day.

On the eighth of July, 1850, King James was crowned. The day became a holiday to the colony, and was ever after celebrated as King's Day.

Strang now moved to consolidate his power. Through the votes he controlled, he became a member of the State Legislature, where his ability and personality made a great success. He was able to secure a bill for the formation of the islands he controlled into one county, whereby his own sheriff could arrest anyone inimical to his rule.

The enmity of the dispossessed fishermen and their neighbors became expressed in wild rumors concerning the conduct of matters on the island. President Millard Fillmore, hearing some of these when he visited his brother in Detroit, sent the gunboat Michigan to arrest Strang for various crimes, one of which was treason. After sifting the evidence, the trial simmered down to a charge of interfering with the mails. Strang pleaded his own case, and was triumphantly acquitted.

Now, supreme in his island, King James took it upon himself to regulate not only the religion, but the daily life of his adherents. Liquor, tobacco and narcotics were prohibited. Men were ordered to refrain from licentiousness. Women must wear bloomers. One by one, all the prohibitions that today are becoming so fashionable were put in force. The weaker and more light-hearted of the members of the colony rebelled, and knowing they had no chance to win, deserted to the enemy on the surrounding islands. As the colony weakened, plans for a new attack were laid.

In June, 1856, the gunboat Michigan steamed into St. James harbor. The captain sent a message to King James, asking him to come on board. As the King walked down the wharf, he was shot down by two assailants, one of whom had recently been publicly horsewhipped for upholding his wife in her refusal to wear bloomers. The two fled on board the Michigan and were released without any formalities there.

Strang, despite a wound in the head, lived to return to Burlington, where he died nineteen days later. His body was first interred in the old cemetery in Voree, but later, when that was abandoned, it was taken up and buried in the family plot in the Burlington Public Cemetery. His daughter later sold the plot to another family, reserving, however, the four feet that hold all that is mortal of the only American King.

FOR several years there has been a decided sentiment to mark the grave properly. Clement Strang, son of the prophet, has wished that it be done, as have the remaining seventy or eighty members of the Strangite Church. There is a small chapel on the site of Voree, and they own farms in that vicinity, for the colony on the island was dispersed after the fall of King James.

The Burlington Historical Society has also had great interest in the old town of Voree. Last year they visited the place with some of the old members of the original settlement and mapped the site as it was in 1846. Now they have voted funds and support to the erection of a suitable marker on the grave of Strang, prophet and King.

there was suppressed excitement about Adeline's manner. She went to and fro, examined herself in the mirror.

Ruth tried to go to sleep again. She could not tell whether she had been successful, whether she was dreaming, or whether she actually saw what next appeared to happen. Some little time passed, as if there had been an interval in her consciousness. Then she felt tremendously wakeful, opened her eyes again, saw Adeline go to the dressing-table, take from it something small and black, go back to her bed, pull back the coverlet, jump into bed, and sit upright.

From the small black object Adeline apparently took something still smaller. She set it upon a finger of her left hand, and held her hand up so that the light made brilliant sparks come from the thing upon the finger. . . .

The ring was Marcus's ring. Ruth knew despair.

"I'm in love with him," she thought. "What agony! To see him constantly, and in love with Adeline . . . marrying her . . . taking her away . . . I shall never be able to bear it."

ADELINE had been home and had gone out again, by the time Ruth reached home that night; and for this respite, at least, Ruth was thankful. She watched her mother for a few moments until she gathered from Mrs. Sisley's calmness that she had been told nothing at all. This was a relief. Anything was a relief that gave Ruth time to recover her self-control.

"Where has Adeline gone, Mother?" asked Ruth, in a stifled voice.

"She only said she wouldn't be late. She was in a hurry. I think she had to meet somebody. I couldn't help thinking . . ." Mrs. Sisley smiled archly. "I couldn't help thinking—feeling sure who it was. Did the bell ring? She's come back."

Ruth's heart began to race.

"No," she said, choking. "It's somebody at the door. Not Adeline."

She rose and moved forward, her heart thumping. And it was Marcus who stood without the door.

"OH, MARCUS!" cried Ruth. Then: "But Adeline's gone out. You've missed her." Her voice seemed to wail.

"How unfortunate!" answered Marcus. "But . . . m-may I still come in?" He seemed to be laughing. Was he not, then, disappointed? Had he known? Of course! He, too, was excited. As excited as Adeline. He had come to tell them.

"Is Addie not with you?" asked Mrs. Sisley. "How strange. Where can she be? Come in, Marcus. We quite thought . . ."

"I w-wanted," stammered Marcus. He was confused. He could not say what he had in mind to say. His own cheeks were redder than was customary. He stood awkwardly in the room, with a large drawing-book under his arm, and looked helplessly at the two of them.

"We haven't seen you for so long," murmured Ruth.

He looked at her. He looked straight into her eyes; and turned abruptly away. Ruth turned also, miserably, and sat down by the table.

"I w-wanted," repeated Marcus, "to make that sketch of you, Mrs. Sisley."

"Oh, dear me!" she cried. "How delightful! I was afraid . . ."

"I've been so busy."

"You've been going to parties, Marcus!" cried Ruth reproachfully.

"Not one, I assure you!" he answered, quickly. "Not a single party."

Not? But Adeline had said. . . . It was a flash of thought, gone in an instant.

"Where shall I sit? Will the light matter? It distorts, I'm afraid."

"Exactly as you were, Mrs. Sisley." Marcus' manner was quite different. He was less shy. "There."

Ruth picked up a book. Mrs. Sisley sat in her chair by the fireplace. Marcus took a chair at the center table, within two feet of Ruth. He drew out his pencils.

"Turn a li-little farther away, if you please, Mrs. Sisley," he said urgently.

Ruth could hardly breathe. She stared at her book.

Once or twice Mrs. Sisley sighed. She moved or twitched a little. And, whenever she did this, Ruth knew that Marcus frowned. She had a glimpse of him in a new mood—intent, busy, quite without hesitation. He seemed to tear out a page of his book.

"Quite all right!" he declared reassuringly to Mrs. Sisley. "J-just as you are. That's right. Keep your eyes turned away. . . . So!"

With that, he pushed gently toward Ruth a piece of the paper he had torn. She did not suppose that this was done for her attention; but the paper came nearer still, until she was forced to cast her eyes upon it. There was no drawing. There were written words.

"Don't you ever go out?" she read upon the paper. "I've been trying to catch you each evening. I've got something to tell you."

RUTH'S heart seemed to be in her throat. Then the absurdity of it struck her; and, though the throbbing weight behind her eyes continued, she could hardly restrain a little cry of laughter. With a glance at his intent face, as he proceeded with his fresh sketch, she smiled and stole a pencil.

"Mother is nervous at night," she wrote. "What have you got to tell me?"

She saw his frown as he read her answer. From the tail of her eye she saw the composition of his next message. It took him a considerable time, during which he frequently looked at his model and made a stroke or two upon his sketch.

"I never get a chance to speak to you," were the words Ruth read. "Don't you think I deserve something better?"

This to herself? But what of Adeline? What of that sparkling ring?

Her reply, tremblingly written, was: "Haven't you got all you want?"

FOR a long time there was no further correspondence. The drawing proceeded with doggedness. At last, as if in desperation, Marcus dashed down a few words. He thrust the paper at her and, almost scowling, pursued his task. Ruth saw that his face was deeply crimsoned. She read what he had written. Her heart stood still. The blood rushed to her cheeks. For the blunt words were:

"I want you. Nothing else. I'm in love with you. For heaven's sake, put me out of my misery."

Ruth sat perfectly still. She read the words over and over again. At last, taking the pencil again, she gave Marcus his answer.

"I love you," she wrote. That was all. And, as she returned the paper to him, she felt her hand clasped firmly in his.

"Thank Heaven," he ejaculated aloud.

"I beg pardon?" asked Mrs. Sisley.

"Keep just as you are!" cried Marcus. "We're getting along famously!"

The sketch was finished. The subject of it looked upon the evening's work with pride.

"Dear Adeline will be so delighted," said Mrs. Sisley.

"This . . . this is the b-best evening's work I've ever done," Marcus assured her.

"It's very like," said Mrs. Sisley.

"I . . . I shall come and m-make another one of you," answered Marcus, edging toward the door. "G-good night, Mrs. Sisley."

He forcibly closed the sitting room door behind him, and Ruth was in his arms in the darkness of the little hall.

She felt the roughness of his tweed jacket, the vigor of his embrace, the pressure of his eager lips upon her own. Trembling, blushing, but beyond comparison happy, Ruth raised her arms and drew his cheek against her own. In quick whispers they spoke together.

"Never get you alone," he grumbled. "It's been unbearable."

"You're so shy. My dear!"

"T-terrified. L-love you" . . .

"Why, Ruth!"

MRS. SISLEY opened the door suddenly; the light of the sitting room streamed out upon the two of them, and Marcus still held Ruth closely to his breast. There was a terrible pause—an accusing pause upon the one side; a guilty, freeing pause upon the other.

"I . . . I'm just g-going," stammered Marcus. "I . . . I've been asking Ruth to m-marry me."

The effect of his declaration seemed to be overwhelming.

"Ruth!" almost screamed Mrs. Sisley. "Ruth! O-oh!" It was a cry of horror. "My poor Adeline!" She seemed about to swoon. "My poor child!"

"Unless-less I'm mistaken," grinned Marcus very consolingly, "she'll marry the man who wants her. Aubrey."

"Aubrey!" moaned Mrs. Sisley. "That man! Never!"

"I—I think it's all settled. I . . . I think so. N-not a bad chap," said Marcus. "Not m-many brains; but," he lowered his voice to a whisper, "his father's a m-millionaire."

"Invalid" Turned Out to Be a Detective

1926, when the Bankers' Trust Company failed, to this good hour. every representation made by Manley has been lousy with fraud."

The presentation of testimony at the sanity hearing occupied four days but the jury required only five minutes to reach its decision. Hardly had the jurymen withdrawn before they returned with the verdict declaring Manley sane.

The following week he was placed on trial for fraudulent use of the mails, and was wheeled into court with his face freshly shaved, though a beard had covered his chin throughout the hearing to determine his sanity. His hair had been cut and hospital attendants said that he had taken nourishment willingly and had followed physicians' orders.

No defense was attempted by attorneys representing Manley, and the case proceeded rapidly with the introduction of testimony by the prosecution to prove 16 of the 20 counts on which Manley had been indicted. Four of the counts were withdrawn. During the hearing, which continued two and a half days, the defense offered no testimony and cross-examined none of the Government witnesses.

In explaining the attitude of the defense, Attorney Marion Smith, of counsel for the banker, said at the opening of the trial:

"While we bow to the verdict of sanity rendered by the jury last week, we nevertheless wish to state to the Court that we, as counsel for the defendant, have been unable to confer with him regarding the case. We are therefore without data to present in his behalf and can submit no defense against the Government's charges!"

In outlining the Government's case against Manley, District Attorney Hager said:

"We expect to show this jury that the Bankers' Trust Company was organized in 1911 with $4,000,000 capital, none of which was paid in cash, but which represented doubtful securities accepted as assets.

"This company acted as fiscal agent for banks throughout Georgia and Florida, so that when it failed, in 1926, it was agent for 185 banks, each of which paid from $750 to $1000 per year to the trust company for alleged services. When some affiliated bank would have a surplus of funds, the Bankers' Trust Company would take this money and lend it to other banks or invest it otherwise.

"Money began to pour into the trust company's hands through these sources, and several subsidiary companies were organized by Manley and his associates.

"These subsidiaries held assets of dubious value and their notes and other paper were used by Manley to absorb funds from the small affiliated banks."

At the conclusion of the Government's case the jury quickly reached a verdict of guilty, and Manley, lying on a cot on which he had been wheeled into court, heard United States Judge Samuel H. Sibley sentence him to serve seven years in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, and to pay a fine of $10,000.

AIR-MINDED

Or a Treatise on Slow Music.

Ellis Parker Butler.

I'M often asked: "Have you ever airplaned?" and I answer with the sort of nonchalance that goes so well with my tan shoes: "Oh, ever! Long ago!" Thus giving the impression that I have been airsailed ever since the Wright brothers discovered that gasoline could be used for other things than cleaning white kid gloves.

Sometimes a friend of mine will tell how he flew up from Algiers to Paris, changed planes there, hopped to Brussels and then flew across the channel to Croydon. And I listen to him and say: "Yes, I've flown, too!"

I was toastmaster at a banquet tendered Chamberlin when he returned after flying the Atlantic, and he said to me: "I suppose you have flown?" And I responded enthusiastically: "Have I! I'll tell the world I have!" Thus the impression has got about that, whenever I can spare a few hours from my work, I rush out and climb into an airplane and soar like a silly swan or some other bird. Folks seem to believe I am as air-minded as a humming bird.

About 20 years ago I let fall a statement that I lived to ride in automobiles, and the result was that, one by one, as my friends bought motor cars and wanted a companion along to join them in a hideous death when the car got loose and ran away, they came and got me. For years I never knew, when I put my left leg into my pants in the morning, whether I would have the leg that night to take to bed with me or not, or whether it would be hanging on a lamp post in Roslyn, Long Island, or Plainfield, New Jersey.

NOW that my friends are beginning to buy airplanes, this invitation business is beginning all over again, with the added disadvantage that I am liable to be spilled into a brickyard from somewhere in the neighborhood of the moon or Mars. It is time I told the truth about my air-mindedness and let people know I am no Lindbergh. When airplane owners say to me now: "Of course, you have been up?" my answer is going to be: "Yes, but this afternoon I have to go and have my appendix removed."

I flew first—and I'll bet you $160 you can make that "first" read "for the last time" and be telling the truth—in California. Do not get the impression that I flew an airplane and ran to it shouting, "Take me up! Take me up!" and threatening that I would eat a peck of cactus if I was not allowed to fly. That would be a false impression. When I was out there in California I sold the motion-picture rights to something I had written—call it "Love in the Clouds"—and it was supposed that the picture would draw a lot more money if there were photographs showing the gay young author dashing gayly off in an airplane. The contract probably read something like this:

"And it is furthermore agreed between the party of the first part hereinafter called the party of the first part, and the said author hereinafter called the corpse, that the party of the first part will furnish one (1) airplane and one (1) pilot and that the corpse will, on or before the day of the funeral, ascend, go up, aviate, and fly, and be photographed in said airplane. It is further agreed that the said corpse will grin."

On the stipulated day I proceeded to the flying field or—as it is usually called—place of execution, accompanied by those I felt I needed with me. We made an interesting procession. At the head of the column marched myself, grinning. Next came my brother-in-law carrying the American flag at half-mast and draped in black crepe, then my young son playing Chopin's funeral march on a 10-cent harmonica; then my wife, prepared to hear my dying words; next my lawyer carrying my last will and testament; three surgeons with saw, gimlets and forceps; the motion-picture company's publicity man; eight camera men; the rabble, proletariat and two dogs, and the ambulance.

UPON reaching the field the procession deployed, one half taking a position to the right of the operating table and the other half to the left. My lawyer then approached me and asked if I had any last requests to make, or souvenirs to be given to my friends after I had gone up, and the motion-picture company's camera men set up their cameras. The publicity man said: "The contract requires you to grin." I said: "I am grinning." He said: "If that is a grin, I am a boiled lobster with butter sauce." I then said: "If you don't like my grin, suppose you do this flying." He then said: "I wouldn't go up in that second-hand Pinchot machine for seven million dollars!" I then said: "How many million dollars?" and he answered: "Eight million dollars!"

I was then photographed standing beside the plane. I was then photographed with a helmet on. I was then photographed climbing into the plane. I was then photographed standing on one wing of the plane. I was then photographed signing my last will and testament and kissing my wife farewell. During this photographing the publicity man talked continuously.

He said: "Grin! You ought to have had your pants pressed. Grin! You have too much tummy to take a snappy photo. Grin!"

I now got into the plane. It consisted, as could be seen when one was inside it, of a few laths covered with canvas. I seated myself and was photographed. The pilot got into the forward seat and we were photographed. He then said to the assistant: "Let her go, Mike!" and the propeller was spun. We began to roll across the field.

I now lay down and hit the underside of the front seat, clinging firmly to it with my teeth while one of my hands reached under and grasped one of the pilot's legs, and the other set firmly around one of the laths that composed the frame of the airplane. At the same time I closed my eyes, held my breath, and said my prayers. I heard a faint cheer, in which I distinguished a voice shouting: "Hooray! What goes up must come down!" and, as I knew nothing about piloting a plane and could be of little help to the pilot, I allowed myself to become unconscious.

I find that a complete swoon is the best possible rest for a man whose work is of a heavy mental nature. Not having my typewriter with me, I felt it was a suitable time for some thoroughly refreshing swooning.

DURING the entire flight I felt no fear whatever. It was a most pleasurable sensation and I can only say that it was like floating in the air. There was not even the jarring that one feels when riding in an automobile or on a camel. I felt only a slight jolting as the airplane first ran across the field and then felt nothing until I heard one of the surgeons saying: "If he doesn't come to in a minute, we'll pour a pail of water on him; that'll fetch him!" The pilot then laughed and said: "He bit a chunk out of my leg." I sat up and said: "Is that so? Is your leg made of imitation leather and shavings?" He said it was not. "Then I did not bite a piece out of your leg," I told him, "because imitation leather and shavings is what my mouth was full of, and you want to be careful how you make these false statements." I was then lifted out of the plane and took off the helmet.

For a few hours I felt rather sick, but that was all. What's that? Oh, I would love to ride in your plane, thank you, but I have an engagement.

Doctors Approve this Modern Help for COLDS-

Just Plug Cord Into Your Light Socket

Here at last is a warm, healing vapor that spells quick relief to head and chest colds, congestion and similar complaints.

Here at last is the first and only product that supplies—not merely an aromatic odor—but the finely subdivided essence of proved healing agents in visible vapor form.

This new Turpo Electric Vaporizer is so simple, so amazingly effective that it has instantly replaced old-fashioned haphazard cold treatments in thousands of homes.

See for Yourself

You can feel this Turpo vapor reach the spot. The first breath will convince you that finally you have found real help for colds. You will inhale a vapor so potent, so profuse, so ideally adapted to its purpose that each breath carries the true essence of Turpentine, Menthol and Camphor direct to the sore, inflamed, congested membranes of the nose, throat and chest.

Improvement is immediate. Your head clears, congestion is relieved, breathing becomes free, and shortly the cold breaks up.

So Simple—So Easy—So Quick

Consider the convenience of this new cold aid. No fuss or trouble. No greasy hands or soiled linen. No unpleasant mixtures or messy salves.

Just fill the vaporizer one-third full of water. Add one teaspoonful of Turpo. Plug cord into light socket—that's all. In a few moments, quicker than you can boil water over a stove, vapor will form and continue to form for fifteen minutes.

Consider its uses—in the sickroom at night, at office, at home. Not only ideal for adults but mothers find it invaluable for children. Even a sick child thinks it fun to inhale this beneficial Turpo vapor.

Practical—Safe—Sure

The Turpo Vaporizer is a thoroughly tested electric appliance. It comes complete with five feet of high quality cord and standard connection ready to plug into socket. The vaporizer jar itself is interchangeable with any regular Turpo jar of the same size. It is so staunchly made that it should last for years.

The Coupe Sedan, by LeBaron, is a compact and brilliantly designed motor car which seats four persons with ease

YOU CAN DRIVE your Lincoln at normal speed the very first day you own it. And back of this fact is a great deal more than the motoring convenience which it immediately suggests. For this is your assurance that the Lincoln is made with such precision—and with such attention to every detail of its mechanism—that it is a perfectly functioning motor car from the moment it leaves the factory.

Because of the way in which this automobile is built, the Lincoln owner is spared the usual "first five hundred miles" of slow and tedious driving. Every operation in the making of its motor is governed by standards of accuracy that in many vital instances are as delicate as 1/5 of 1/1000 of an inch. There is no need to wear in pistons or bearings. The parts of the motor are so precisely machined and adjusted that their perfect fit, balance and performance are assured from the start.

A corresponding precision is rigidly maintained in every detail of the car's construction. The unhurried care of Lincoln craftsmanship provides for the smooth and perfect functioning of the motor, the enduring beauty of the body, and the strength and safety of the chassis. The steadfast excellence of each Lincoln is assured by the more than 29,000 tests for quality of materials and performance which it undergoes before completion.

The distinguished character of this automobile, its power and beauty, its safety and comfort, are fully evident on the first day you drive it—and enduringly so through all the years of your ownership. . . . For the Lincoln is, in every sense of the word, as nearly perfect a motor car as it is possible to produce.

Lincoln cars can be bought for as little as $4200, f. o. b. Detroit. This price includes full equipment and one or two spare tires according to type. There is no local delivery or handling charge.

"A Mother Has Hour-Long Moments"

How Would You Have Met This Emergency?

IT usually happens with the first baby. Mother has not long been at "the greatest job in the world." Perhaps she has been a very good mother, and Baby has been a very good baby. Then comes the night when a piteous wail is the first warning that you have a sick baby. When the doctor comes he will know what it is. Meantime, what to do?

Is there a bottle of Castoria in your medicine cabinet now? There should be, if you have children! It's the one thing a mother may turn to in such emergencies. It is a pure vegetable product that can never do any harm, and may spare the young one a lot of needless suffering. Its almost instant relief will have your infant back to sleep before you could summon a neighbor's aid. And the wisest mother could give you no sounder advice than to comfort the child with Castoria. It may be the stomach, or a fretful, feverish condition from some unknown cause. Castoria is always a safe and sensible thing to give. There are so many minor ailments of children that this gentle remedy will relieve—and relieve promptly.

Mothers, watch your child's tongue and breath and appetite. Prompt usage of Castoria will avoid many little upsets that affect the appetite and digestion and hold a child back.

Every druggist has Fletcher's Castoria, and with every bottle comes a valuable baby book. Or the book will be sent free to any mother who writes Castoria, 80 Varick St., N. Y. Mention this publication.

DISTINGUISHED IN THE SOCIETY OF MANY NATIONS

MRS. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, JR. | LADY VIOLET ASTOR | THE DUQUESA DE ALBA | MISS HELEN CHOATE | THE COUNTESS HOWE

THEY TRUST THEIR BEAUTY TO THE SAME SURE CARE

IN THE GREAT CAPITALS of the world are lovely women of distinction—different in type but all famed for their beauty.

And how they guard their loveliness! For women in society are subject to the keenest scrutiny. They use Pond's. Let a few of them tell you why.

IN OUR OWN AMERICA beautiful young Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., says, "I have my daily facial—with Pond's".

A lovely bride, Mrs. Allan A. Ryan, Jr., uses Pond's Cream "three times a day for charm" as the old rhyme goes. And charming Mrs. Adrian Iselin II, and vivacious Miss Helen Choate are two smart Americans who find these aids to beauty "tried and true".

IN FRANCE the fascinating Marquise de Polignac exclaims, "I have got the Pond's habit completely!"

ONE OF ENGLAND'S SIX MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMEN, the Countess Howe, calls Pond's Method "a straightforward way of keeping fit". Lady Violet Astor and Lady Louis Mountbatten are two more Pond's devotees.

IN SPAIN, the Duquesa de Alba, perfect patrician Spanish type, says, "No aid for my skin is more effective than Pond's".

So, in Europe and America, and, indeed, all over the world, Pond's is the favorite way to a lovely skin.

The pure Cold Cream is a delight for cleansing. The snowy Cleansing Tissues are the softest removers of cream. The Skin Freshener makes your skin glow with fresh life. And the fragrant Vanishing Cream is the perfect protection and powder base.

This is how to use them:

First — for thorough cleansing, apply Pond's Cold Cream over face and neck, several times a day, always after exposure and when retiring. Pat on with upward, outward strokes. The pure oils sink deep into the pores and float the dirt to the surface.

Then—with Pond's Cleansing Tissues, ample, absorbent, gently wipe away cream and dirt.

Next—dab Pond's Skin Freshener briskly over face and neck. It removes all trace of oiliness, tones, refreshes.

Last—smooth on a delicate film of Pond's Vanishing Cream for protection and as a sleek, even, powder base.

Follow the Pond's way. Exquisite skin will be your unfailing reward!

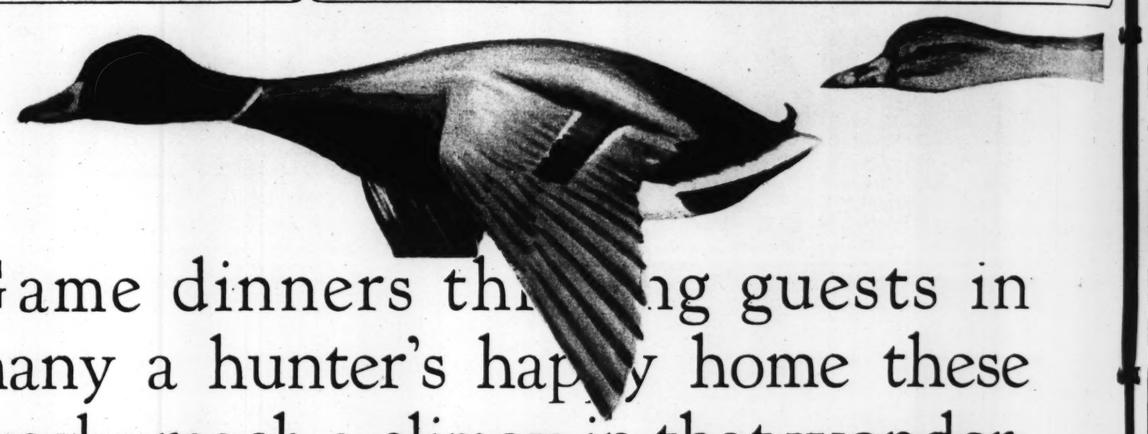
A CAFETERIA FOR TWELVE—There are so many puppies in this Los Angeles home that the owner, fearing the Irish setter mother was not equal to the task, built this rack for refreshments between meals. —P. & A. photo.



Game dinners thrilling guests in many a hunter's happy home these weeks reach a climax in that wonderful coffee—H&K. Fresh from the roaster's flame, this triumph in coffee blending is trapped, locked up in vacuum; treasured and preserved COMPLETELY. Sense the difference in the cup. Bouquet! Flavor! Utterly different because of its freshness. Unique freshness that makes for economy too. Seven to ten extra cups in every pound. Good ones - - - black or with cream!
